BIG DRIVE ON ITALY BEGINS

ARMY TO HAVE 3,000,000 MEN BY AUGUST 1

Gen. Crowder Wants Increase in Draft Age Limit.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 15.—[Special.]—Indicating the rapid enlargement of the army, Maj. Gen. Enoch Crowder, provost marshal general, today informed the senate military affairs committee that if the draft age is not increased class 1 of the draft registrants will be exhausted early next year and it would be necessary to begin taking men from class 2.

Gen. Crowder said that the American military program is based on the presumption that there will be 3,000,000 men under arms in the army of the United States by Aug. 1 of this year. He said that approximately 2,000,000 of these men will be drafted men and the other 1,000,000 volunteers recruited in the national guard and the regular army under the old volunteer system.

Approves Senate Bill.

Requisitions from the draft to complete the 3,000,000 total by Aug. 1, Gen. Crowder said, have been made.

"Everybody thinks there will be heavy calls during the first six months of 1919," was a significant statement made by Gen. Crowder.

Gen. Crowder approved the general principle of the bill introduced by Senator France of Maryland extending the registration ages to from 18 to 45 years, thereby providing additional men for military and industrial service. He did not, however, approve the age limits fixed in the bill.

After outlining the plans of the war department for additional calls, Gen. Crowder said that at the present rate class 1 will be exhausted by the end of the present year, and that unless the age limits are extended and another registration held it will be necessary early next year to call men in class 2 and probably soon thereafter those in class 3.

Draft Figures Given.

Final figures of classification of the first registration, totaling 8,689,447, were given. The registrants were shown to have been divided as follows: Class 1, 2,428,729; class 2, 509,686; class 3, 427,870; class 4, 3,483,326; class 5, 1,839,856.

Gen. Crowder submitted figures showing the progress of the draft this year. A total of 1,347,512 men, all from class 1, will have been called by the end of July, divided by months as follows: January, 23,288; February, 83,779; March, 132,484; April, 174,377; May, 350,230; June, 283,254; July, 290,000.

New Draft Bill Coming.

It was stated that Gen. Crowder believes very strongly that the draft age should be extended so as to increase the enrollment of class 1 men. In this way only, he contends, will it be possible to provide the needed men without going into class 2. Class 2 contains many married men. The provost marshal general is opposed to taking men from the deferred classifications until all others have been used.

Secretary Baker, however, does not agree as to the need or advisability of extending the draft age. Members of the senate committee and also other members of congress believe that the plan for revising the draft ages undoubtedly will prevail in the end. Julius Kahn, representative from California, reiterated today that a bill to extend the draft age would be introduced in congress, with administration backing, by next December.

800,000 "OVER THERE"

Washington, D. C., June 15.—[Special.]—Official announcement that the United States has "passed the 800,000 mark in troops shipped overseas" was made today by Gen. Peyton C. March, chief of staff, in the first of his series of weekly conferences with the Washington correspondents.

Not only has an added 100,000 of American troops embarked for France since Secretary Baker announced early this week in a speech to the "Blue Devils" of France that 700,000 Americans had crossed the sea, but Gen. March announced that troop movements will be rushed with all speed "limited only

THE PRICE OF

The Sunday Tribune

will be

7 Cents a Copy

By Carrier 35c per Month. (In Chicago and Suburbs)

10 Cents a Copy Elsewhere

Effective with This Issue

In May of 1917 the price of The Daily Tribune was increased from 1 cent to 2 cents, and the price of The Sunday Tribune outside of the city was increased to 8 cents. No change was made in the city price of 5 cents for The Sunday Tribune.

Since that time the manufacturing cost of print paper has continued to increase, as has the cost of nearly every other element in the manufacture of newspapers.

Now newspaper publishers are confronted with heavy increases in transportation charges, still further increases in the cost of print paper, and a continuation of advances in the cost of other raw materials.

At the same time the publication and circulation of war news, of the participation of our own forces and of the co-operation desired of the people by our government is more than ever a duty and a privilege. More than 50% of the news now published in The Tribune has to do with the war.

Virtually every feature of The Sunday Tribune is now devoted to helpful and inspirational service in connection with our war activities. The rotogravure section is filled with pictures of soldiers and sailors of our own and allied countries. Most of the departments of the woman's section are devoted exclusively to war work, such as Red Cross activities, economy and conservation in cooking, etc. In fact, the preponderance of war subjects in The Sunday Tribune is even greater than in The Daily Tribune.

In spite of strict office regulations against the waste of print paper, and in spite of rigid economies in its use, it is no longer reasonable to continue to sell The Sunday Tribune at the present prices.

Effective with this issue, therefore, the price of The Sunday Tribune in Chicago and suburbs will be 7 cents and the price elsewhere will be 10 cents.

ARREST O'LEARY IN WEST; FACES TREASON CHARGE

New York, June 15.—Jeremiah A. O'Leary, a fugitive from justice since the eve of the date set for his trial on a charge of violating the espionage act by publication of seditious matter in the anti-British periodical, Bull, and later indicted for conspiracy to commit treason, was arrested at Sara, Wash., and is on his way back to New York in the custody of federal agents, it was announced here tonight.

O'Leary was found Wednesday in the remote hamlet in Washington, which is about twenty-seven miles north of Portland, Ore. No details were made public concerning the pursuit.

Announcement of his capture marks another dramatic episode in a case which already has had many sensational developments. His brother, John J. O'Leary, and Arthur L. Lyon, a business associate, were placed on trial in federal court yesterday under an indictment charging them with having aided him to escape from jurisdiction of the court.

Kaiser Ends His Thirtieth Year on German Throne

New York, June 15.—[Special.]—Thirty years ago today the kaiser succeeded his father, Frederick III., on the German throne. On June 15, 1888, the emperor was invested with the authority that he is now trying to stretch into world domination. When Bismarck, the last obstacle to William II.'s power, was removed the kaiser said, as now, that it was an act "ordained by God."

Allies Hold Positions They Won in Macedonia

PARIS, June 15.—The official report in regard to fighting in Macedonia says:

"There were patrol encounters in the Struma valley and artillery activity between Lake Dorian and Ochrida. Southwest of Lake Ochrida we organized positions gained north and south of the Devole river."

McAdoo Going West; Has Throat Affliction

Washington, D. C., June 15.—Secretary McAdoo will leave White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., tomorrow night for an unannounced destination in the west to spend several weeks recuperating from throat illness.

SOLDIER OF SKY WEDS CHICAGOAN

Capt. George F. Campbell Wins Widow of Arthur Greiner.

Mrs. Gertrude Wilkins Greiner, widow the late Arthur Greiner, prominent as a driver of racing cars and automobile dealer, was married yesterday to Capt. George Frederick Campbell of the Royal Flying corps. The marriage took place in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Capt. Campbell gained distinction as the fourth of the British flyers to win the title of "ace," and is credited with having brought down eighteen German planes. He has been wounded twice and has lost his entire family in the war. His father, Colin Campbell, fell at Mons; his three brothers were killed in other battles, his sister was lost on the Arabic, and his mother died of shock.

Avenger of Family.

Capt. Campbell while in Chicago gave a number of talks dealing with his personal experiences in flying fights. He said he became "a soldier of the sky" to avenge the loss of his family. He was serving in India as a lieutenant of the Highland light infantry when his regiment was ordered to the European front, immediately after war was declared by Great Britain against Germany. In a few weeks he was fighting to stem the Hun advance on Paris. Capt. Campbell since coming to the United States has written a book called "A Soldier of the Sky."

At the battle of Neuve Chapelle in 1915 Capt. Campbell was severely wounded, having his hip bone shattered by a bayonet thrust through the abdomen.

Bride's Beauty Famed.

His bride of today is famed for her beauty, and was known on the English speaking stage as Josephine Howard.

Mrs. Campbell has been living with the family of her former husband at 1930 Lincoln avenue and also in the Edgewater Beach hotel. It was in the latter place she met Capt. Campbell, who is on recruiting service here for the British army. They are to spend a short time in the south before returning to Chicago. They expect to make their home in England.

GERMANS SEEK TO MAKE PEACE IN SECRET ACT

ZURICH, June 15.—What is regarded here as an invitation by Germany to the allies to enter secret negotiations looking to peace is a semi-official statement from Berlin published by the Munich Neuste Nachtenrichten.

"In view of previous unpleasant experiences," says the statement, "Germany will never resume her peace efforts by the use of publicity. The government believes the belligerents should endeavor to reach a rapprochement without public discussion."

Frau Wilkins, Arrested, Praises Belgium Invasion

New York, June 15.—[Special.]—Frau Margaret Wilkins, who has appeared in various German plays in this country, was arrested today following the interception of a letter which the actress wrote to a person in South America. The letter contained a bitter tirade against the United States.

Frau Wilkins said at the enemy alien bureau that she thought the Germans did right in sinking the Lusitania and in invading Belgium, and that she had left her husband because he had not joined the army promptly.

Consul Bopp's House Attached to Pay Fine

Oakland, Cal., June 15.—Residence property here owned by Franz Bopp, former German consul at San Francisco, and now serving a term in the federal penitentiary at McNeil island, Wash., for violation of American neutrality, was attached by the federal government today in a move to collect the fine of $10,000 imposed on Bopp in addition to his penal term of two years.

BRITISH GAIN IN FLANDERS ON 2 MILE FRONT

French Retake Position in Line Near Soissons.

BULLETIN.

LONDON, June 15.—British troops have captured the German forward positions on a front of two miles north of Bethune, according to Field Marshal Haig's report from British headquarters in France tonight.

BULLETIN.

PARIS, June 15.—French troops have reoccupied Coeuvres-et-Valsery (southwest of Soissons), an important strategic point from which the Germans have been endeavoring to debouch their troops. The war office announcement adds that ground also has been gained around Montgobert.

PARIS, June 15.—"The third of the enemy's great offensives has been mastered ever since the third day," says an official comment issued this evening.

"When one stops to think that the Germans, electrified by their success on the Marne, expected to overwhelm us and advance along the road to Paris through Compiegne, which was their first objective," adds the comment, "the importance of June 11, which obliged them to stop, can be seen.

"Barrier Again Closed."

"For seven days the enemy was able to make progress in the offensive beginning March 21. Following May 27 his advance was interrupted in the same length of time. On this occasion the Germans, who had let loose their attack on June 9, had to give up after the battle of June 11.

"Our soldiers, inferior in number, have beaten the best assault troops of the German empire and inflicted upon them terrible losses and closed again the barrier. This result gives us confidence in the future."

French Troops Make Gain.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, June 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—French troops today carried out a successful operation for the improvement of their line around the northeastern corner of the forest of Villers-Cotterets on the westerly side of the Marne salient.

Aside from this the infantry on neither side has given much sign of life on any part of the front in the last thirty-six hours.

On the other hand, the enemy big guns have been lively, especially between the River Aisne and Chateau Thierry, on the Marne. This activity appeared to be either for the purpose of covering the relief of their exhausted divisions or by way of preparation for another thrust westward.

Australian Raid Succeeds.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, June 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—Early this morning Australian troops rushed the German trenches at Villers Bretonneux and killed a majority of the occupants. They also destroyed the defenses and returned to their own lines, after hard fighting, with some prisoners.

Drive a "Costly Failure."

LONDON, June 15.—The fourth phase of the German offensive—the drive southward from Montdidier and Noyon—apparently was at an end today.

The Germans have made no appreciable gain here for three days. Their greatest gain is in the center, south of Roye, where they are just north of Antheuily, representing an advance of about five miles.

Considering the number of men engaged, the enemy's losses, and his meager progress, this drive is regarded as a costly failure.

Americans Have Sent Down 28 U-Boats Since Jan. 1

Pemberton, Mass., June 15.—"Since Jan. 1 our navy has sunk twenty-eight German submarines and our sailors should have the credit for it," declared United States Senator John W. Weeks, member of the senate military affairs committee, in addressing the Massachusetts Laundry Owners' association here today. "I believe when a heroic deed is done it should be made public," he added.

U. S. Soldiers Hold Line on German Soil

BY FRANK J. TAYLOR.

[United Press Correspondent.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, June 15.—American troops are holding a section of the Alsace line a few kilometers from the Swiss border, south of Hartmannsweilerkopf.

They have been in this sector since May 25, but permission to announce the fact was only given today.

This is the first American unit to occupy a sector in German territory. The Alsatians welcomed the Americans as deliverers.

A German raid on the American lines was attempted this morning. The raiders were beaten off with losses. One American is missing.

It is now possible also to announce that American troops are holding another sector of the line north of Toul and east of Seicheperey.

Hartmannsweilerkopf, a hill on the north bank of the Thur river, between Thann and Sennheim, was the scene of some of the most sanguinary battles early in the war and has been fought over several times. This announcement definitely establishes American forces on nine distinct sectors—Flanders, Amiens, Marne, Verdun, Toul, Luneville, Woevre, and Alsace.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, June 15.—Eddie Rickenbacker, America's daredevil auto race driver and now an aviator with the American armies, has become America's second ace. He was so recognized today by the French in confirming that he has landed five German airplanes between April 29 and May 30.

LONDON, June 15.—Two enemy airplanes were driven down out of control by British flyers yesterday, the war office statement tonight said. Two British machines are missing. The day, it was stated, was not good for flying, low clouds and a high wind interfering.

PARIS, June 15.—An air raid alarm was sounded throughout the capital at 11:45 tonight. The "All clear" signal followed an hour later. No other details were given in the official announcement concerning the alarm.

MRS. BUSCH TO ASK FOR RETURN OF HER PROPERTY

Washington, D. C., June 15.—[Special.]—One of the first steps taken by Mrs. Adolphuws Busch and her attorney, Harry Hawes of St. Louis, who went to Europe to bring her home, will be to apply to the alient property custodian for the return of her property.

Mrs. Busch is an American citizen, but her counsel, former Secretary of Commerce Nagel, voluntarily placed her property in the hands of Custodian Palmer in compliance with that provision of the law applying to Americans sojourning or resident in Germany.

Mr. Palmer said tonight that Mrs. Busch can regain her property without delay under the provision of the law that the property of Americans returning from Germany shall be restored unles there is evidence that they have aided the enemy or otherwise proved disloyal.

English Arranging to Send Parcels to Yankees

LONDON, June 15.—Arrangements are being made so that American soldiers in France may receive parcels from England and an appeal for cooperation signed by Maj. George, Lieut. Putnam, and Lady Florence Walton was issued here today. The appeal set forth that it was almost impossible for the American soldiers to get packages from home and it was stated it was desired to place them on the same footing with British soldiers, who are more fortunate in this respect.

Senate Passes Million Dollar Lighthouse Bill

Washington, D. C., June 15.—The bill appropriating $1,000,000 for the lighthouse service was passed today by the senate and now goes to the president.

FOES ATTACK ALONG FRONT OF 100 MILES

Austrian Blows Are Repulsed, Premier Says.

ROME, June 15.—The Austrians began a great offensive at 7 o'clock this morning on a hundred mile front from the Asiago plateau to the sea.

This announcement was made in the chamber of deputies today by Premier Orlando, who added:

"Our troops are everywhere resisting magnificently. Nearly the whole of our front is engaged, as the offensive extends with extreme violence from Astico to the Brenta, from the Brenta to the Piave, and along the Piave everywhere, involving the Astico plateau, the Mount Grappa sector, and the plain."

Premier Says Foe Fails.

Premier Orlando declared that the Austrians had failed to achieve even the preliminary results which usually followed a crushing offensive. Describing the operations, the premier said:

"A very violent bombardment began at 3 o'clock and at 7 o'clock an infantry attack was launched along the whole line. The latest news which has reached me summarizing the situation at 1 o'clock is that our troops have offered magnificent resistance."

Masses of Men Launched.

"A comparison of all reports received shows that the offensive was pressed only in the first zone of resistance, and not even at a few points has it obtained the effect which the enemy must have hoped for from his powerful bombardment and the enormous effectives launched — an attack against which our trops are resisting magnificently."

Rome's Report on Battle.

The official report issued early today says:

"The artillery fire between the Lagarina valley and the sea has grown in intensity. It has been extremely violent east of the Brenta river and in the middle Piave region.

"At Tonale our batteries yesterday prevented the enemy from renewing the attack.

Vienna Heralds Blow.

VIENNA, via London, June 15.—The beginning of a great offensive is indicated in the official communication from Austrian headquarters which says:

BEGINNING OF DRIVE

The Rome war office reported that the Italian artillery replied with a counter bombardment, which was becoming more intense.

The cannonading extended from the Lagarina valley to the Adriatic sea. The official report said it was "of extreme violence" from the Asiago plateau to eastward of the Brenta river, and also along the middle Piave.

Hit Most of Front.

This includes more than half of the entire Italian front. The Lagarina valley extends north and south.

The battle lines cross the valley about five miles inside the Austrian frontier and about twenty-five miles due north of the city of Verona. From here the lines run to the Piave river, near Segusino, then follow the Piave southeastward to the sea.

Balk Attack on Pass.

The Asiago plateau lies between the Lagarina valley and the Brenta river, directly north of the city of Vicenza. The lines along the middle Piave protect the important city of Trevino, which is only fifteen miles north of Venice.

The Rome statement also reported that another Austrian attempt yesterday to take the important Tonale pass was prevented by the Italian batteries.

BELIEVE ITALY SAFE.

Washington, D. C., June 15.—Confidence in the strength of the Italian line was expressed by the Italian embassy, and military mission officials here tonight when reports reached Washington of the possible opening of the long heralded Austrian offensive.

Gen. Emilio Guglielomotti, military attaché, who predicted such an offensive was imminent, declared the Austrians will find the Italians prepared.

Belief here is that the Austrian bombardment along the Piave probably is merely preliminary to a drive, which it is thought will begin in the Trentino. Military authorities assert it would be unwise for the Austrians to advance their lines any further toward Venice before they have taken Mount Corno and other points commanding the Italian center.

MILLION IN LAST BLOW

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The last great Austro-German offensive, begun in October, 1917, rolled back Gen. Cadorna's line from the Isonzo front and along the Venetian plain. More than a million enemy troops participated in this operation, and it was not for many weeks that the Italians were able to stay the advance.

About the middle of November the Piave battle began along a ninety mile front in northern Italy, and French and British troops were hurried to reinforce the shaken Italian army.

The crisis was passed about the first of December, and since that time there has been heavy fighting, in which the Italians and their allies carried out many successful counter attacks.

There have been insistent cries from Germany for Austrian action along the Italian front, to coördinate with the German offensive in the western zone, and for months past the Italians have been preparing for just such a blow as apparently is now being struck.

The Italian army has been reëquipped, and Gen. Diaz has succeeded Gen. Cadorna as the commander in chief.

SOLDIERS SAFER THAN BABIES IN CRADLE AT HOME

Washington, D. C., June 15.—[Special.]—It is safer to be a soldier in the trenches than a baby in a cradle, according to figures quoted by the women's auxiliary committee, Minnesota commission of public safety, Council of National Defense.

"While the death rate of men in the trenches is about 2 per cent per annum, the death rate of babies under 1 year in Minnesota is 7 per cent," says a recent report from the committee. "Thus it will be seen that it is safer to be a fighting man at the front than to be a young baby."

Drafted Men to Work in the Copper Mines

Calumet, Mich., June 15.—[Special.]—The two hundred drafted men who arrived at Michigan College of Mines, Houghton, today for special training of two months in mining engineering and sapping will spend two days each week underground in a copper mine working as trammers, miners, and timbermen. This will be in addition to six to nine hours' drill and blacksmith and machine shop work other days.

No Submarine Bases in Mexico, Minister Says

Mexico City, June 15.—Germany is not violating Mexico's neutrality by maintaining submarine bases on or near the Mexican coast line for the undersea raiders which recently have been attacking commerce along the Atlantic coast of the United States. This statement was made today by Heinrich von Eckhardt, German minister to Mexico, in denying the existence of such bases.

361 Enlisted Men Enter Freshman West Point Class

West Point, N. Y., June 15.—Three hundred and sixty-one cadets, including thirty from the enlisted personnel of the army, have been admitted to the United States Military academy within the past two days. Some of the men saw service in France. It is stated that there are still seventy-five vacancies in the freshman class.

Three Sentenced for Exemption Board Bribery

New Orleans, La., June 15.—Convicted of conspiring to defeat the purposes of the selective service act through bribery of a member of a local exemption board, Joseph Rosenberg, an attorney; Michael Lavigne, a merchant, and the latter's son, Louis, were given prison sentences today.

Gotham Subway Workers Get Increase; Back at Work

New York, June 15.—Seven thousand subway construction employes, who struck last Monday for higher wages, have been granted the increase asked and will return to work next Monday morning, according to announcements today by representatives of the contractors and the labor unions affected.

GREAT BATTLE OPENS ON 100 MILE ITALIAN FRONT

Artillery firing, which began at dawn, was intense from the Lagarina valley eastward to the Adriatic sea. There was fighting also on the northwestern portion of the front. Rome says that at Tonale (2) "Our batteries prevented the enemy from renewing the attack."

The official war office statement reads: "The artillery fire between the Lagarina valley (1) and the sea has grown in intensity. It has been extremely violent east of the Brenta river (3) and in the middle Piave (4) region.

Reports from the battle region say that the Italian artillery has countered effectively.

The new Austrian offensive finds the Italian army well prepared for the shock of attack, according to information from allied sources. Gen. Diaz' men are in splendid fighting trim, judging from recent reports of their successes in isolated mountain actions, in which they have strengthened their positions and taken prisoners. The Italians have plenty of men; unofficial reports have put the strength of the Italian army at between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 men. Recently a force of about 200,000 men has been sent to France as part of Gen. Foch's army of maneuver. Besides the Italian army, there are strong British and French units on the Italian front, who helped stop the great Austro-German offensive of last fall when the Italians were driven back to the Piave river.

CLAIM GERMANS SUFFERED HUGE DEFEAT IN DRIVE

Advances Won Failed to Pay for Big Loss in Life.

PARIS, June 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—Despite a slight advance the German offensive commenced June 9 will prove to have been a heavy check to the enemy, says Henry Bidou in the Journal des Debats. Continuing, he says:

"It is evident that the enemy's objectives were undoubtedly Compiegne and the Villers-Cotterets line in order to reach beyond the forest on the left wing and obtain a base for future operations against Paris. There is no doubt that the battle may be considered one lost by the enemy, the Germans having only the doubtful satisfaction of a slight advance in the center, for which precious divisions were sacrificed ruthlessly. The check, however, is merely momentary. We must expect the Germans to make other attempts, as they are in a great hurry to reach their goal, which, owing to decreased forces and shortening time, appears as far away as ever."

Foe Plans New Drives.

The lull along the front of the German offensive is considered merely a period of preparation for new attacks. The six days of terrible fighting east of Montdidier realized mediocre gains, and the Petit Parisien says that the German check gives a good reason for confidence, as the allies' armies are increasing continuously.

It is pointed out that the army of the German crown prince is exhausted and it is believed that Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, whose reserves are far from being equal to those under his command on March 21, will probably resume action on his portion of the front.

Prepare Paris Defenses.

Gen. Guillaumat, who had just succeeded Gen. Dubail as military governor of Paris and commander of the armies in the Paris district, will have as his duty the preparation of the defenses of Paris in coöperation with the newly organized defense committee. These defensive measures, Premier Clemenceau explained to a deputation of the radical party today, are of a precautionary nature for the safeguarding of the capital. The government in this connection has notified private art collectors that assistance will be accorded them in removing their treasures to places of safety.

Gen. Guillaumat is 55 years old and has a record of brilliant service in command of various sections of the French army since the beginning of the war, notably at Verdun and on the Somme.

More than Match Foe.

LONDON, June 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—American soldiers are more than a match for the Germans, in the opinion of Reuter's correspondent with the American forces in France, who has been with the Americans for the last month. Whenever the Germans met the Americans, he says, the Germans have been beaten.

"My impression," he adds, "is that the Germans will find in their new foes men more resembling our dominion's soldiers than the home born Tommy. They are full of tenderness, as the German wounded already have had cause to know. But they will not have mercy on men who do not fight straight and will avenge comrades slain by treachery to the utmost platoon."

Remarking how quickly the Americans are learning by experience, the correspondent continues:

"There is much to be expected from the American army, only, and it must be said with insistence, we want a lot of them. Secretary Baker has promised a million soon. That is good, but a million goes a wondrous small way out here. We want that million doubled as soon as possible. A million soon will be worth many millions later."

Referring to the large infusion of Americans of German descent, the correspondent says that they make good soldiers.

Gives Praise to French.

The London press generally pays tribute to the valor of the French in withstanding and finally checking the recent impetuous rush of a vastly greater German force. At the same time the value of the American coöperation in achieving this result is fully recognized.

BATTLE STATEMENTS

PARIS REPORT

PARIS, June 15.—South of the Aisne a local operation enabled us to drive the enemy out of Coeuvres-Et-Valsery, which we occupied. We likewise enlarged our ground east of Montgobert. One hundred and thirty prisoners and a number of machine guns remained in our hands.

On the rest of the front there is nothing of importance to report.

During the night there was great activity between the opposing artilleries between Montdidier and the Oise, south of the Aisne, and also west of Reims in the region of Champlat and Bligny.

French patrols operating in the Champagne sector captured prisoners.

LONDON REPORT

LONDON, June 15.—The number of prisoners taken by us in the successful operations carried out last night north of Bethune is 196. We also captured several machine guns. As a result of this attack our troops have gained possession of the enemy's forward positions on a front of two miles, securing all our objectives.

In the fighting reported this morning east of Nieppe forest the enemy by a local attack carried out under a heavy bombardment succeeded in driving in three of our advanced posts west of Vieux Berquin.

The hostile artillery was active this morning east of Arras and has shown some activity this afternoon north of Bethune.

A few prisoners and three machine guns were captured by us during the night as the result of the successful raids in the Villers-Bretonneux sector.

A raid attempted by the enemy upon one of our posts in Aveluy wood was repulsed. Local fighting took place during the night about certain of our posts east of Nieppe forest.

BERLIN REPORT

BERLIN, via London, June 15.—Army group of the German crown prince: Southwest of Noyon the infantry activity was limited to local engagements. The intensity of the artillery fire decreased. South of the Aisne the increased artillery fire continued.

Several attacks which the enemy launched in the forest of Villers-Cotterets were repulsed. The number of prisoners captured in recent battles south of the Aisne has increased to 48 officers and more than 2,000 men.

Army group of Crown Prince Rupprecht: There has been lively reconnoitering activity. We brought in prisoners southwest of Merris. Enemy advances in force on the Ancre were repulsed.

In the evening artillery and mine throwing duels revived on both sides of the Somme.

AMERICAN REPORT.

Washington, D. C., June 15.—Gen. Pershing's report, issued by the war department tonight, said:

Section A—Northwest of Chateau Thierry the day was marked by heavy shelling, executed by the batteries at both sides and including the use of gas. There is nothing to report from the other points occupied by our troops.

Yesterday our aviators shot down two hostile machines.

Section B—In the Woevre on the night of June 11 to June 12 a German patrol captured an American sentry at a listening post. The sentry had two grenades, from one of which he managed to remove the cap while he was being taken away. By striking this grenade against the other, then dropping them and making a sudden dash, he succeeded in escaping.

There was no marked activity except that of patrols, at points occupied by our troops. Last night our aviators bombed the station and railroad tracks at ———. A number of direct hits were made. All of our machines returned.

The government in this connection has notified private art collectors that assistance will be accorded them in removing their treasures to places of safety.

Slayer Questions Soldier's Right to Act as Judge

Santa Fé, N. M., June 15.—Elbert W. Blancett of Friday Harbor, Wash., convicted of the murder of Clyde Armour of Sioux City, Ia., through his attorney today asked the Supreme court of New Mexico for a new trial, alleging that E. C. Abbott, the trial judge, because at that time an officer of the federalized national guard, was not qualified to act, that "mob spirit" was shown in the courtroom and new evidence shows Blancett abnormal mentally.

ALLIED AIRMEN HURL BOMBS ON FOE'S INFANTRY

Flyers Play a Big Part in Stemming Drive of Germans.

BY WALTER DURANTY.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, June 14.—[Delayed.]—I visited today one of the aviation groups in the French army where bomb and battle planes were assembled under the command of a young major, himself an ace of aces in the bomb plane branch of the air service.

Important as has been the work of the battle planes during the last three months, it is surpassed both as regards the results accomplished and the risks faced by that of bombers. Since the battle of May 27 especially bomb plane tactics have been enormously developed. The planes go out in huge flotillas. Each unit has its own formation, which is rigorously maintained. The units keep a similar alignment with each other. So thoroughly have the pilots been drilled that the planes are able to fly a small distance apart without the risk of collision.

Fly Close to Ground.

In the long distance bombing of railroad junctions or concentration points they fly at a great altitude of 4,000 or 5,000 yards, where the risk is limited and the losses practically nil. But their new battlefield tactics against the German infantry are far more arduous. Each laden with bombs, the planes fly at a height of only 400 or 500 yards, or so as to be able to distinguish the gray clad targets.

The airmen are exposed not only to the sudden swoop of the Boche battle planes high above them, and the incessant fire of the anti-aircraft cannon, but to the menace of the German machine guns.

But if their work is dangerous, the results more than compensate. It is easy to imagine what the discharge of hundreds of bombs means to infantry massed in a comparatively small area.

Break Up Dangerous Attack.

"Our star performance," said one of the officers, "was when we caught a large force of the enemy ten days ago. We gave them thirty-seven tons of projectiles altogether, and kept it up throughout the afternoon. The Germans were utterly panic stricken, and what would have been a dangerous movement was effectively crushed in the bud.

"On a smaller scale the same thing goes on all day and every day. Since June 1 we have dropped more than 150 tons of bombs, and remember that when our bombs have been dropped we still are able to imitate the battle planes in harassing the enemy with our machine guns."

Senate Against German Being Taught in Schools

Washington, D. C., June 15.—The senate came out today in opposition to the teaching of German in schools when it accepted an amendment to an appropriation bill prohibiting the teaching of German in the public schools of the District of Columbia.

Russian Troops Fighting Along Front in France

Washington, D. C., June 15.—Russian troops, organized as a separate unit, are now fighting alongside American and other allied troops on the western front, the Russian embassy announced here today.

REPORT REVOLT BY AUSTRIANS; CRY FOR PEACE

Germany Said to Be Eager to End War to Get Food.

AMSTERDAM, June 15.—A revolution has begun in Austria, according to reports received here today from the German frontier.

Serious rioting is said to have occurred in Vienna. No details have been received.

"Stop fighting" meetings are said to have been held in various parts of Hungary.

Austrian stocks have slumped on the local exchange.

"Death Sentence Passed."

"The death sentence has been passed on the government and it remains to be seen what course the government will take if the crown declines to accept the coming resignations. This is a state crisis and the Austria of 1867 has gone.

"Premier von Seydler declines to recognize this and the danger of the situation. Berlin must realize that the old signatory of alliance no longer exists and no power on earth, not even Germany's protection, can revive it."

London Gets Many Reports.

LONDON, June 15.—Reports of a serious crisis in Austria are current today. They come from various outside sources, but there is no direct confirmatory news.

A news message today from the semi-official Fabra agency of Madrid says private information from reliable sources states that grave events are about to occur in Austria, where the population is demanding peace at any price.

Amsterdam messages say a rumor was circulated on the bourse yesterday that rioting had begun in Vienna.

An Amsterdam dispatch published in the Sketch asserts that reports along the German frontier say that a revolution has been started in Austria, the people demanding an immediate peace.

It asserts that riots are raging in Vienna and that Austria is facing a political crisis.

Need Peace for Food.

A "stomach peace" is Germany's chief and immediate need, in the opinion of "Pertinax," who writes in the Echo de Paris.

"Within four days the German people will be reduced from 200 to 160 grams of flour per head daily (less than six ounces). Last autumn, according to Berlin official statements, the German government estimated that there would be a shortage of 2,000,000 tons of flour at this period, but it was then hoped that the difference would be made up by shipments from Roumania and the Ukraine.

"However, Roumania has supplied 40,000 tons less during the last ten months than during eight months of last year. The meat ration cannot be increased because of the poor quality of the cattle, and the potato harvest is only sufficient to permit a daily ration of one pound per head."

The writer adds the situation is even more serious in Austria.

GERMAN SOLDIERS AFFECTED

LONDON, June 15.—German soldiers returning from Russia are imbued with Bolshevik ideas, and are everywhere circulating revolutionary pamphlets, Gen. von Risberg said in the German reichstag during the Friday sitting, according to a Copenhagen dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company. For this reason, he said, strict discipline was necessary in the army.

The sitting was marked by sharp attacks from the various members on the military authorities. Herr Mueller of Meiningen, criticizing the preference system in use in the army, declared that there were 3,700 officers in Bucharest, where they are useless.

He charged, it is said, that active officers are kept as far as possible behind the front, that reserve officers are used in the firing line, and that volunteer officers are sent to the front without proper training or passing the necessary examinations. Gen. von Stein, the Prussian war minister, made a violent attack upon Herr Mueller for his revelation of conditions in the army.

Bulgaria Facing Revolt.

AMSTERDAM, June 15.—Attacks on the Bulgarian premier, Vasell Radoslavoff, in consequence of the peace negotiations at Bucharest, threaten to lead to a crisis, according to the Koelnische Zeitung, which says that the discontent is not confined to the political opponents of Radoslavoff. It is feared in government circles that Bulgaria is missing an opportunity to annex the whole of Dobrudja and Bulgarian districts in Macedonia which were given to Greece in 1913.

Attacks are also being made on the quadruple alliance, which is credited with an intention of supporting enemy Greece rather than friendly Bulgaria and rewarding Roumania rather than Bulgaria.

POLITICAL CRISIS GRAVE

Washington, D. C., June 15.—[Special.]—The political crisis in Austria, according to dispatches reaching here, is becoming more and more acute. A telegram received here today from French sources said:

"The internal crisis in Austria tends to become more aggravated. The Germans accuse the Slavs and the Poles of wanting to betray the monarchy for the benefit of the entente and declare themselves ready to fight without mercy.

"The Slavs reply that they will take no notice of the German pretensions and will fight, cost what it may, until they have obtained the victory of their cause.

"Two Czech delegates, Habermann and Tusar, presented themselves on Thursday to the president of the council and notified him that they demand the immediate convocation of the reichsrat and will continue their opposition against the government."

GERMAN TROOPS WIPE OUT 10,000 RUSS RED GUARD

300 Are Arrested for Anti-Soviet Plot in Moscow.

AMSTERDAM, June 15. — Gen. Knoerzer in a telegram to Gen. Eichhorn, the German commander in the Ukraine, reports, according to a message from Kiev, that forces of about 10,000 Bolshevik Red Guards, commanded by Czech officers, have been almost wiped out by German troops to the west of Taganrog, a Russian port on the north shore of the Sea of Azov.

The Bolshevik troops, it is announced, coming from Leisk, landed on the Ukraine coast of the Sea of Azov and were advancing toward Taganrog.

More than 3,000 dead Bolshevik soldiers were counted and this did not include the bodies of those drowned. Gen. Knoerzer claims the losses of the Germans were slight.

300 Anti-Sovietists Arrested.

MOSCOW, June 7—Delayed.—[By the Associated Press.]—More than 300 arrests already have been made by the soviet government in connection with the anti-soviet plot.

Among those under arrest are M. Kishkin, minister of public welfare in the Kerensky cabinet, and M. Malyantovitch, minister of justice in the Kerensky cabinet, and many other Social Democrat and Social Revolutionist leaders.

Partial disclosures made by the soviet government allege that the counter revolutionary headquarters in Moscow has extended its organization throughout Siberia and central Russia under the name of "Union of Defense of the Fatherland and of Freedom."

The organization is accused of planning the overthrow of the soviets.

New Factor in Situation.

LONDON, June 15.—The advent of the large contingents of Czecho-Slovaks in the far east is noted in a Times dispatch from Peking, dated June 10, as having brought a new factor into the situation there. Two divisions of these troops, the correspondent says, are now scattered along the Siberian railroad from Tcheliabinsk eastward, on their way to Vladivostok, while about 14,000 of them have arrived at Vladivostok.

"On the other hand," continues the correspondent, "public feeling everywhere in Siberia is hot against the Bolsheviki. Manifestations against them are growing, but all the centers of population are dominated by the Bolshevik element, which alone has supplies of arms and ammunition, making action against them a difficult matter.

"The universal cry of Siberia is for the assistance of an allied force around which all the moderates can rally."

ON THE CURB

Incident and Observation of the Passing of Red Cross Nurses' Parade.

Not one of the women marchers dropped out of line, despite the exertion. Several ambulances of the various units were scattered along the line in case of an emergency, but the attendants had an idle day.

Despite the fact that it was Saturday afternoon and most offices were closed, hundreds of people saw the parade from windows all along the line. Several people insisted in standing where a puff of lake wind would have tossed them to the street.

Every head was uncovered (some of them by force) when the English and French national airs were played in Grant park, just as they were for "The Star Spangled Banner."

Those who failed to remove their hats to the colors were harshly dealt with by enthusiastic bystanders.

With three brothers and three cousins in the war, Miss Kathaleen Corwall, 3429 Flournoy street, signed up with Red Cross unit 11. She expects to leave for "over there" soon. Miss Cornwall's patriotism won for her a place of honor in the service flag unfurling of Our Lady of Sorrows church, Jackson boulevard and Albany avenue. The flag to be unfurled today is the largest of any church in the state, carrying 703 service stars. Miss Cornwall will carry the banner of the woman's auxiliary of Our Lady of Sorrows church in the parade, which will move at 10:30 o'clock from the church.

RUMPUS RAISED IN REICHSTAG BY SOCIALIST

AMSTERDAM, June 15.—A scene was caused in the reichstag yesterday by Dr. Cohn, a Socialist member, when, according to the Cologne Gazette, he declared: "The border states have become a Golgotha, where lie bleaching the bones of the best in the land, who have been slaughtered by the misled German soldiers."

An uproar followed this declaration, and Deputy Cohn was called to order, but he continued: "The entire war has become a family affair of the Hohenzollerns. It is possible that we may finally remain the only warriors in Europe and the entente will have to submit, but Europe will have become a continent of beggars, and we shall all suffer the consequences of such a peace."

Lieut. Gen. von Stein, Prussian minister of war and state, in reply asserted: "It is not one family in this country which is waging war, but the German people, under the kaiser, is waging war for its existence."

2,200 Red Cross Nurses March to Win Recruits to Service

Twenty-two hundred nurses—graduates and students—made an appeal to the public of Chicago, yesterday, for Red Cross nurses for France.

The nurses represented every hospital and training school in the city. Twenty thousand persons lined Michigan avenue and State street to see them parade. The column started with military promptness at 3 o'clock. It was led by the naval training station band. A detachment of hospital men of the naval station followed.

Twenty nurses, fresh from the shell torn battlefield of the Marne, issued the strongest appeal. Almost every one of them has been decorated for service under fire. They were veterans and looked the part. From the eyes of each came an appeal to the thousands of spectators to come and help in the great work of saving humanity. They are going back—every one of them—to take up the work where they left off. They will go back with thousands of others if Chicago will respond to their appeal.

Camp Grant Represented.

Then came more veterans. Not veterans of the same fields in France and Flanders, but veterans of months of work in the base hospital at Camp Grant. They will be the next over, and, if their appearance in the parade can be taken as a criterion, they are prepared and trained to the finest edge for their important work.

There were five bands along the line. The bands from the various reserve infantry regiments throughout the city played. The base hospital band of Camp Grant came along to furnish music for their nurses. The band of the medical reserve officers' school at Fort Riley, Kas., was present, having been brought from Kansas for the affair.

The reviewing stand held many celebrities. Deans of women from the University of Chicago and Northwestern university were present.

The nurses' uniforms were varied. The white of the field nurse was prevalent. The Camp Grant contingent wore the picturesque blue capes with red linings. The various hospital contingents wore the uniform of their institutions.

Each Has Decoration.

There was a noticeable absence of pomp and display in the parade. There were no floats or gayly decorated automobiles. They were not needed. Each marcher carried with her a decoration—the Red Cross. It was sufficient to stir even the most unthinking person to a high pitch of patriotism. The parade ended in Grant park. The twenty-two hundred women assembled as a solid mass in a final plea to the women of Chicago to join them in their work.

HALTS PARLEY FOR EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS

LONDON, June 15.—Because the German delegates at the British-German war prisoners' conference at The Hague are pressing for the return of all prisoners in Canada and Africa, as well as those in Great Britain, a hitch has occurred in the negotiations, telegraphs the correspondent at the Dutch capital of the Times.

The difficulties of such a course, it is contended by the British delegates, particularly in respect of shipping transport, make it impracticable.

The negotiations have now reached a most critical stage, but the correspondent says there is no reason to think they will prove abortive.

DAUGHTERS OF ISABELLA MEET.

Plans for furthering the Red Cross and surgical dressing units of the society were discussed and arranged at the seventh monthly meeting and luncheon of the National Circle Daughters of Isabella in the Hotel La Salle yesterday afternoon. The members of the thirteen circles will have a week end party at Starved Rock, Ill., July 27 and 28.

GERMANS FAKE SEA FIGHT PLANS TO WORRY FOE

Washington, D. C., June 15.—The German fleet is sending out alarms, two and three times a week and sometimes oftener, intending to worry the American-allied fleet to a belief that the Teutons are coming out to battle.

With a great clatter of wireless the big ships buzz back and forth in their locked-in harbor. Orders, indicating preparations for a dash, snap out over a considerable period. The American-allied fleet picks these up and can distinguish between the signals of battleships and smaller craft.

These facts developed from an official source today.

American craft now operating in European waters will play an important part if any sea action eventually does develop. Hindenburg is understood to be still pressing his colleagues to undertake a sea offensive as the backing for his land efforts. It is recognized that such an attempt by the German fleet probably would indicate a last desperate gamble.

Britain Calls Men Up to 51 for Examination

LONDON, England, via Ottawa, July 15.—Men of 49, 50, and 51 have been called up for medical examination for the army. Sir Auckland Geddes, the man power controller, is quoted by the chairman of the Bristol conscription tribunal as saying he was trying to meet the urgent need for men for a year or two longer and expected that the tribunals would do the same. He said he was aware of the public feeling about calling up older men while younger ones remained, but some of the younger men were essential to the munitions supply.

ONE DIVISION OF AMERICANS HOLDS OFF FIVE

German Letters Reveal Hatred for Troops from U. S.

BY EDWIN L. JAMES.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE, June 14.—[Delayed.]—It is now known that in the fighting of the last ten days one American unit northwest of Chateau Thierry has been confronted by five German divisions and has held against them all. When this unit went into the front line the Germans first sent against them the One Hundred and Ninety-seventh, Two Hundred and Thirty-seventh, and Tenth divisions. When these were unable to defeat the Americans the German high command sent the crack Fifth and Twenty-eighth divisions, with the same result.

It is now known also that during the last ten days' fighting the Americans have put out of action an equivalent of one and a half German divisions, or about 20,000 men. Most of these were killed, wounded, or captured.

Today I received further confirmation of the fact that the kaiser planned especially to prevent the American success. This confirmation is obtained from extracts from letters found on dead Germans, which also show that hate of the Americans has been instilled into them.

Letter Shows Hate for U. S.

Under the date of June 6, from a post before the American forces, Sergt. Klenke of the Fortieth regiment, Twenty-eighth division, said the following in a letter home:

"Another day has gone by, but the night will be worse. At this moment the shells of the Americans are crashing in every direction, and the worst of it is we must lie quietly in our holes, otherwise he would shoot us up. We had much rather attack than sit by. Now comes another long night without any cover, but, then, in the morning we will have a look at the great American. Mercy he may not expect from us, because the burden is too great. We will cut them all to pieces.

"We will succeed. We should have been relieved for a rest, but now the American division has been identified, and therefore our army general staff has selected the best of all our divisions, our Twenty-eighth division. We should give these gentlemen the final death blow. We were again this time the first division to reach the Marne. The kaiser telegraphed to his wife that the Twenty-eighth division was again the first and best. The kaiser watched us from Winterburg."

U. S. Guns Deluge Foe.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, June 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—American batteries last night hurled thousands of gas shells into the German lines along the Marne front northwest of Chateau Thierry. The bombardment was in retaliation for a heavy gas attack by the Germans.

There was patrol activity along the American fronts in the Marne region and in Picardy and some artillery fire occurred in addition to the gas bombardment. There was no infantry action.

The situation, however, is tense along the entire line.

WOMAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

Sparta, Wis., June 15.—Mrs. V. E. Jones of Des Moines, Ia., is said to be dying at a local hospital from a self-inflicted bullet wound in the right temple. She is said to have made an attempt at suicide following her attendance at the funeral of her mother here yesterday.

Maurice Says Perils Are Brought by Lengthening of Line.

BY MAJ. GEN. SIR F. W. MAURICE.
Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.

LONDON, June 15.—Recent news from the front and the tone of the latest German communiques indicate that Gen. von Hutier's attack north of the Oise has been checked. For the present the attack south of the Aisne on the Soissons front has all the air of being a subsidiary movement, which might have been dangerous if Gen. von Hutier's success had been at all comparable with that gained by Gen. von Boehm on the Chemin des Dames front during the first days of the drive to the Marne. But by itself this secondary attack is not alarming.

How do we stand at the end of this fourth phase of the German offensive? The first great German attacks of the year made a great bulge in the allied line astride the Somme; the second, a smaller but still serious bulge to the west of Armentieres, and the third and fourth together another bulge on the Aisne front which is equal in depth to the first.

Allied Line Lengthened.

The result has been to lengthen the allied line, compared with that held in the middle of March, by, roughly, seventy miles, and this must mean that the allies now are compelled to keep from sixteen to eighteen more divisions on the front than they had on the line before the campaign of 1918 began.

Thus, apart altogether from the losses sustained in battle, there has been a serious drain on Gen. Foch's reserves. It is true the enemy also increased his own front, but not to the same extent, for he is everywhere on the inside of the curve. Also he is numerically superior, and, therefore, does not feel the strain of having to hold a longer line as much as we do.

The results of the battle of March and April has been to give the Germans a front of 130 miles, running approximately north and south from Nieuport to Montdidier and to place them within about forty miles of Calais, Boulogne, and on the mouth of the Somme, and they can keep the important railway junctions of Hazebrouck, Bethune, and Amiens under close gunfire.

Small Gains in South.

Further to the south the foes' new front between Montdidier and the Marne is not quite so satisfactory from his point of view. It is true that at one point he is within forty miles of the northern suburbs of Paris, but as long as the French continue to hold the line of the Aisne to the east of Compiegne and to cover the junction of that river with the Oise, his front of attack is split up, and it is difficult for him to make a broad drive directly against the French capital.

When examined in this way upon the map the allied position looks far from pleasant. A smaller advance than the enemy already has succeeded in making would enable him to bring Calais and Boulogne under the long range fire of his guns.

I do not mean of his freak guns, which are elaborate bogeys, intended to frighten women and children, but of his artillery, which can keep up a sustained fire and do really serious damage. In this respect, Paris stands in the same position as Calais and Boulogne, while an enemy drive through Amiens would cut our communications across the Somme.

Choice Lies with Enemy.

We have, therefore, to guard in the channel ports communications connecting the British and Belgian fronts north of the Somme with the rest of France and Paris. The enemy has the priceless advantage of being able to choose which of these vitals he will attack.

He knows they must be defended, and, therefore, attack upon any one of them helps him to his real object—exhaustion of the allied fighting strength. He has made skillful use of this advantage recently and he may do so again. Fortunately there are other considerations which affect the situation besides the position of the front line we now hold as it appears on the map.

Just before the crown prince's attack of May 27, it was estimated the enemy had heavy divisions in reserve and the great danger which faced us was that the whole of this force might have been employed against us in one great combined attack, the direction of which could not be foreseen.

Germans Use Up Reserves.

We have now received, mainly from French sources, revised estimates of the number of troops the crown prince employed in his recent efforts. In the advance to the Marne and subsequent fighting on the Noyon-Chateau Thierry front it is now calculated that from forty-one to forty-five German divisions were engaged. The lowest estimate of forty-one would mean that at least twenty-eight divisions have been drawn from the reserve.

All accounts agree that Von Hutier's last attack was made in the first instance with fourteen divisions and that he was heavily reinforced after the first day. The lowest estimate puts the number of divisions which he used at twenty-one and of these not less than fifteen must have come from the reserve.

Therefore, the crown prince has employed at least forty-three divisions from the total reserves in the west at Hindenburg's disposal in order to get as near to Paris as he has.

Rupprecht Has More Men.

This would mean that of seventy divisions available in the latter half of May only twenty-seven are left, but while the crown prince has been fighting hard, Prince Rupprecht on the British front has been quiet, and we must reckon he has been able to withdraw for rest, training and refitment a certain number of divisions from his front line, which was thickly held at the close of his battles. It also is possible that one or two more divisions may have been brought over from the east, so it would not be safe to reckon that the German reserves now fit to take part in another great battle are less than forty. Hindenburg is thus in a position to make another attack at any time at least equal in power to the crown prince's last two efforts taken together.

I am still of the opinion that the crown prince's attack on the Chemin des Dames was an experiment, which was followed up because it was successful in the opening stages, and that the advance on Paris across the Aisne was not a part of the German plan of last month.

Great as their gains have been in this attack, I consider that, in consequence of the number of troops which they have had to employ in order to obtain them, the menace which the Germans now hold over our heads, though still formidable, is, owing to the steady increase of the American forces, less formidable than it was three weeks ago, and that we may weather the next storm as we have weathered others if we put our house in order and make our plans before and not after it bursts.

'GO SLOW,' BERGER TO SOCIALISTS

Milwaukee, Wis., June 15.—Extreme caution in all speeches was urged this afternoon by Victor L. Berger at the state convention of the Socialist party, which is meeting to select candidates for the fall election. The platform committee will submit it at the session tomorrow.

While the speakers were cautious in their remarks, they did not hesitate to say they are for peace.

"After a thorough study of the espionage law," said Oscar Ameringer, "I have come to the conclusion that a man can say enough in five minutes to go to jail for life. Everybody knows where we Socialists stand in regard to war. You don't have to tell them. Don't say too much. Stand pat on the principles of Socialism. They stand for peace. I for one do not want to go to prison. I believe I can do more good on the outside than on the inside."

Railroads Show Loss of $100,000,000 in 4 Months

Washington, D. C., June 15.—Net operating income of American railroads in the first four months this year was $143,454,000, or about $100,000,000 less than in the same period last year. This reduction represents in a general way the temporary loss to the government in operation of the railroads, since the four months' proportion of the annual guarantee to the railroads is more than $100,000,000 greater than the actual income.

Says Germans Are Halted.

Gen. March, illustrating on the huge general staff war map, the advances made by the Germans in their four drives of the present offensive, showed that, however large had been the gains of German troops reinforced with divisions from the Russian front, they had failed to recover the ground they lost when forced back from the Marne in the first few months of war. What is more important, he indicated that the advancing enemy had been definitely checked.

"All these drives have been stopped," Gen. March emphatically asserted.

For the first time the American chief of staff gave an expression of the view of the American general staff as to the German objective in the present drive.

Foe Seeks Channel Ports.

The Germans' first objective, he said, is the channel ports, capture of which by the enemy would have a more immediate effect upon the prosecution of the war than the capture of Paris. The capture of Paris he holds to be the secondary objective.

Illustrating his points on the war map as he talked to the correspondents, Gen. March said: "The four drives, one beginning March 21, the next April 9, the third May 27, and the fourth one beginning on June 9, are all part of the common scheme of offensive.

What Enemy Has Won.

"Looking at this map, you see this red dotted line of the interior running down to the Swiss frontier, which represents the allied line when the Germans began their advance on March 21. Considering the succession of attacks and as a whole, they first penetrated this line some thirty-six miles into Picardy; the second some thirteen miles into Flanders, and the third drive a distance of thirty-eight miles further along the Marne.

"On the present drive the line has been penetrated an average distance of five and one-half to six miles.

"The total stretching of the line from Reims to the sea is sixty-six miles. In order to hold that extra line the allies have had to have more troops than they had to start.

What the Germans Seek.

"Obviously the objective of the German advance is:

"First, the channel ports, which would make it necessary for England in shipping troops to France to go farther out to sea and a longer distance—making the turn around longer, slowing up the movement and making it more dangerous.

"Second, Paris, which, of course, is a great strategic objective, because of its importance sentimentally and practically to the people of France.

"All of these drives have been stopped. The last advance, the advance which we are now considering in the daily press, the news which you get, is more to straighten out the German line than it is an advance considered as a military movement with a definite and important objective like Paris, for instance.

Peril in Present Lines.

"Taking the general location of the advance along the Oise, you will see that between the Picardy and the Marne advances we have been holding a reëntrant angle, which furnishes the distance in which a dangerous attack could be made on the flank of the Marne advance, and the most desirable thing which Germany could have at this stage would be a straightening out of the line. That is apparently what she had in mind when beginning her advance on June 9.

"She succeeded in that, moving forward for a distance of six miles, and the last information which we have indicates that west of Soissons she is still attacking with the idea of finally straightening out her line along the general front which I have indicated to you."

AMERICAN RAID PROVES MENACE OF SUBMARINES

Raises the Question of Whether a Defeat Is Certain.

BY ARTHUR H. POLLEN.
Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.

LONDON, June 15.—The recent U-boat invasion of American waters has been so successful in tonnage sunk without any apparent loss of submarines that we may be quite sure it will be repeated on a more ambitious scale.

We can, I think, be equally sure that the scale cannot be increased without the risk to the U-boats being magnified out of all proportion, for the American navy will certainly see that coastwise and Caribbean traffic is, so to speak, canalized, and if necessary will extend convoy protection to its more important units.

"Total Defeat Possible?

This incident lends new interest to the whole problem of defeating this conscienceless attempt to paralyze the world's traffic and once more provokes us to ask the question:

"Is the absolute and complete defeat of the submarine a practical possibility?"

In spite of what the navy has done and of the very changed conditions of things today from what they were a year ago, the problem is still intensely serious.

Grave Menace Year Ago.

Speaking at Edinburgh, a week or two ago, the prime minister confirmed, with the full authority of the admiralty, what some observers had already been rash enough to infer from published figures. He told us that the German submarine, though no longer a menace, was still a nuisance.

Hardly more than a year ago it was a menace of appalling dimensions. The German plan and the German expectations were to destroy a million tons of British shipping a month and to frighten all neutral shipping off the seas.

For two weeks in the month of April 1917, the enemy attained this rate of destruction, and, indeed, surpassed it. In three months—April, May, and June—he sank between 1,300,000 and 1,400,000 tons of British shipping alone and very nearly 900,000 tons of neutral and allied shipping.

To call this a "menace" only is to understate the case. It was a sentence of death if it could have been continued. Today not only is the sinking much less than half of this, but, with American help, we are building nearly twice as much tonnage as we were. The Germans' immediate strategic aim then is defeated, for allied tonnage is growing and not diminishing.

"BREVET HONOR"

Miss Alma E. Foerster Was a Member of the Red Cross Commission Honored by the King of Roumania.

Miss Alma E. Foerster received a letter yesterday from Miss Jane A. Delano, director of the bureau of nursing of the American Red Cross, conveying the information that the king of Roumania had conferred the "brevêt honor" upon the Red Cross commission to his country. Miss Foerster, Bernard Flexner, and a number of Chicago physicians were members of the commission, which visited Roumania in 1917.

A number of remarkable experiences fell to the lot of Miss Foerster. The Austro-German invasion created distressing conditions among soldiers and civilians and she and sister nurses worked day and night. She has been overseas twice in Red Cross work and after a vacation here will enter active service again.

She arrived in the United States three weeks ago after a trip across Siberia and Japan. She is living at 5946 East Circle avenue, Norwood Park.

NAVY ESTIMATE ALREADY SHORT, ADMIRAL WARNS

Palmer Tells Congress It Opposes Program Now Inadequate.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 15.—[Special.]—That the American navy is inadequately officered to meet all emergencies and unready to cope with sudden changes in the character of naval warfare abroad is frankly and emphatically asserted by Rear Admiral Leigh C. Palmer, chief of the bureau of navigation, in a letter to Secretary Daniels forwarded to the house naval affairs committee, which has been fighting personnel increases urged by the senate in the naval appropriation bill.

Admiral Palmer declares that the navy should be increased to 225,000 men, with four officers for each 100 men, and indicates that the proposed authorized strength of 131,485 men which house conferees have been fighting is inadequate, although he says, "if that is all congress in its wisdom will allow us, the navy will struggle to the utmost to do with its too small personnel all that the country expects of it."

States Surprising Facts.

Admiral Palmer shows in his letter that Secretary Daniels cut down the estimates recommended by Rear Admiral Benson, chief of operations, and himself, and he sets forth astonishing facts relating to the condition of the navy for emergencies.

"While the navy appears on paper to be ready for emergencies," the admiral says, "it is not, because of the lack of officers of flag rank.

"Until we get officers in sufficient numbers in the higher grades," he wrote, "the organization cannot be made ready to meet the emergency. To fail to recognize this situation is to court national disaster."

Shortage in War Zone.

Admiral Palmer said that a shortage of officers of higher grade should be made up, pointing out that American destroyers now are operating in the war zone without a designated commander other than the British officer, Admiral Bayley. The submarine chaser force in foreign waters is commanded by a captain, the admiral said, whereas there should be at least one rear admiral and preferably two for this force.

The two American divisions of armored cruisers also are without a flag officer, and there is no flag officer for the division of superdreadnaughts which will be added to the navy within a year. Admiral Palmer also pointed out that the admirals and vice admirals in command of American fleets should have rear admirals as chiefs of staff.

Immediate Needs.

"Merely to man our fleet properly and to make our war organization efficient," Admiral Palmer's letter said, "we must have immediately twenty-seven additional rear admirals, and by July 1, 1919, six more, in addition to those we have now."

Admiral Palmer said that specifically 43,144 men will be needed to man the warships which will be turned out during the next fiscal year ending July 1, 1919. This force he divided as follows:

For battleships, 4,400; destroyers, [illegible]; patrol boats, 5,400; seagoing tugs, 2,706; submarines, 1,026; fleet fuel ships, 1,070; gunboats, ammunition ships, etc., 658.

On last April 1, he wrote, 83,475 men were required for the permanent navy, as follows:

On battleships, 33,486; cruisers and monitors, 18,590; gunboats, 3,228; destroyers and torpedo boats, 8,284; supply vessels, 5,304; naval transports and hospital ships, 2,506; tugs, 1,000; yards, stations, hospitals, radio stations, 6,000; submarines and tenders, 5,037.

With a force of 131,485 men he estimated that there might be a surplus over those actually on duty of 5,864 to replace men wounded, on sick or regular leave.

Situation for a Defensive War.

"Our organization of the country into naval districts," said the rear admiral's letter, "is an excellent and farsighted plan and should we be forced into a defensive war tremendous responsibilities will rest on these commandants. The presence of merely one or two submarines on our coast at the present time emphasizes the necessity of this organization. Fortunately we have rear admirals in command of some of the districts, but there are others for which we have no rear admirals.

"In the ninth district a captain has this duty in addition to his duty in command of the Great Lakes Training Station, the largest naval training station in the world. His regular duties at the training station are tremendous and quite all that any one man can perform, yet his additional duties are larger and of more vital importance. The two duties cannot be performed properly by one man.

In the Canal Zone.

"In the fifteenth district, the Canal Zone, the commander of the naval forces afloat has to act also as district commandant. This point may suddenly become a vital one in the war, and yet when it does the district commandant must leave his district to put to sea to command his forces afloat, merely because we have no rear admirals to command that district, which, though small in area, is one of the most vital to the United States, both in war and peace.

"There is another feature that makes our present distribution a dangerous one to rely on. Many of our very important shore billets are filled by retired rear admirals. These officers are splendid men, and are doing their best and will continue to do so, but many of them are old men who cannot stand the war strain, even on shore. Sooner or later these men, who have already given a long life to their country, must break physically, and when they go we have no others to take their places.

Older Men Kept in Service.

"It is a sad commentary that these men should be called on in their old age to sacrifice their few remaining years merely because we are not allowed younger men in their rank to do the work. One feature I have not yet pointed out to you is that, with the exception of Admiral Pond, who is sick, every active officer of flag rank is employed. When officers are weighed and found wanting, their removal from the vital positions is essential. Every nation has long recognized this fact, and acts accordingly, except in our case, in the navy, where, because we have no one with which to replace the unfit, they must continue to perform their duties, although by so doing we jeopardize the national existence. We should have enough officers of flag rank to permit of some latitude in assigning them to duty. We do not have it now.

No Reserve Provided.

"Not only have we insufficient number of officers of flag rank to put proper heads at the top of our various subdivisions but also we have so few that should one break, get sick, or wounded, or die, or be killed, there is not one flag officer available to take his place, except by removing the head from some other subdivision.

"Up to the present time neither the chief of naval operations nor I have been called before the house conferees to explain the necessity for passing this amendment, and since those conferees cannot know the situation unless it is explained to them."

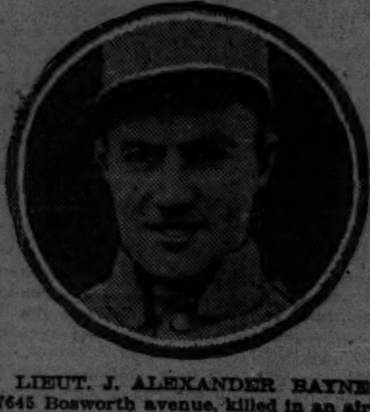
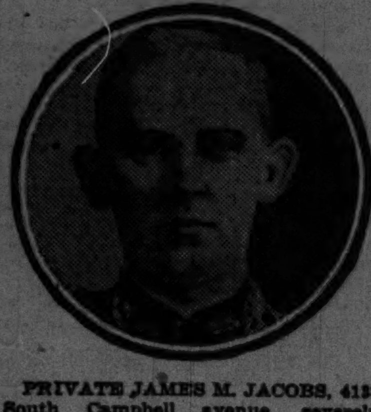
PRIVATE TONY MARCKIE, 4632 Marshfield avenue; severely wounded; had been in America but six years from Lithuania, but he joined the regulars as soon as the United States went to war.

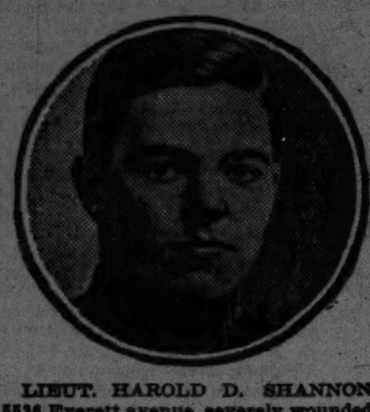
CORPORAL JOHN D. PEOPLES, 4547 Indiana avenue; severely wounded; enlisted with the United States marines a month after the United States entered the war. He was formerly employed by Logan & Bryan in the Board of Trade building.



LIEUT. J. ALEXANDER BAYNE, 7645 Bosworth avenue, killed in an airplane accident, was a member of the Lafayette escadrille. His work won high praise from a French officer.



PRIVATE JAMES M. JACOBS, 4133 South Campbell avenue, severely wounded, is a veteran soldier, having gone over the border with Gen. Pershing at the time of the Mexican crisis.



LIEUT. HAROLD D. SHANNON, 5536 Everett avenue, severely wounded, is with the Sixth marines. This is the second time he has been reported injured since he arrived in France.

DUTCH ACCUSED OF SHELTERING GERMAN SHIP

LONDON, June 15.—The direct charge that the Dutch government sheltered a German vessel at a Dutch port to save it from being captured by the British is made in a British dispatch just made public.

The case was that of the Maria, 4,000 tons, which entered the harbor of Tandjong Priok, Java, Dutch East Indies, in May, 1916. It was flying the German mercantile flag, but is believed to have been a German auxiliary cruiser.

The correspondence between Great Britain and Holland on the subject contains some very sharp language. The British minister at The Hague in a letter to Jonkheer J. Loudon, the Dutch minister of foreign affairs, wrote:

"The question does not stand alone as an instance of the peculiar and unsound views adopted or invented by the Netherlands government during the present war in matters of international law."

The Dutch government, in replying, said it did not wish "to depart from the courteous tone which should mark diplomatic correspondence," and therefore refrained from referring to the strange remark which, nevertheless, caused the government the greatest and most legitimate surprise.

The plea advanced by the Netherlands government was that the Maria was unseaworthy and entered the port for repairs, but having failed to complete the repairs within the given time, was interned.

3 Doctors Examine Grace Lusk for Sanity

Waukesha, Wis., June 15.—Drs. Albert Southoff of Madison and Richard Dewey and P. E. Bradley of Milwaukee examined Grace Lusk in her cell for about two hours today and then held a long consultation at the jail. They will report their opinion as to her sanity and their reasons for it to Judge M. L. Lueck Tuesday afternoon. This is the first joint examination and the most thorough, including physical examination. Miss Lusk, who was aware it was to be held, complained of a violent headache, but made no objection, save to insist that her two nurses retire and a man jailer accompany the doctors. They would express no opinion until time to report in court.

Temps Says France Hears Wilson's Words with Joy

PARIS, June 15.—"Such words are not mere words," says the Temps, commenting editorially on the telegram from President Wilson to President Poincare in answer to the latter's message of felicitation on the first anniversary of the landing of American troops in France. The newspaper continues:

"They are symbols of powerful realities, of intelligence in action and of heroic sacrifice. France hears them with joy; the enemy will hear them with anxiety. He is only beginning to know the soldiers of the United States. He will learn the weight of the will of one hundred million citizens, united behind a chief they have elected and resolute, like him, to obtain peace by victory."

AIR MISHAP CUTS CAREER OF HERO FROM UNIVERSITY

Lieut. J. Alexander Bayne Was Awaiting Transfer in France.

One Chicago man killed and seven severely wounded was the message brought to families and friends here by the overseas casualty list of yesterday.

Lieut. J. Alexander Bayne, who met his death in an airplane accident, was serving with the French escadrille, but had been awarded a commission in the American army aviation corps and was awaiting his transfer when killed.

Artist for Traction Lines.

Before the war Lieut. Bayne was a commercial artist for the street railways advertising company and lived at the home of his sister, Mrs. W. R. Harvey, 7645 Bosworth avenue. He tried to enlist in the United States aviation corps, but was rejected, and he then paid his own way to France and enlisted in the foreign legion in July, 1917.

The French commandant, Lieut. Leps in a letter to Lieut. Bayne's father, wrote as follows:

"It was magnificent to see his boldness. He always was a volunteer for every mission, even the most perilous. He was admired by every one who knew him, and to do our utmost is only to follow his example. If you could judge all Americans by your son you would be more than proud of the assistance you are sending France."

Hero from Midway.

Names of United States marines continue to hold a dominant position in the casualties. First Lieut. James MacBrayer Sellers of the gallant Sixth regiment was reported severely wounded. He was graduated from the University of Chicago in 1917. He lived at the Beta Theta Pi house, 5717 Blackstone avenue. He enlisted in the marines early in the war and sailed for France in October.

Another marine reported severely wounded is Lieut. Harold D. Shannon, a veteran of the corps, who was a member of the contingent that landed at Vera Cruz. He was wounded once before—in the heavy fighting around Toul on April 13. After recovering in a base hospital he joined his command in the front line trenches. Lieut. Shannon made his Chicago home with an uncle, Edward T. Page, 5536 Everett avenue.

Poppies from France.

Corporal Walter E. Lang of the Eighty-fourth company, Sixth marines, reported severely wounded, sent his mother a little bunch of poppies in a letter which he had written on "Mother's day."

Preferred Bullet Music.

Private James M. Jacobs had been in the regular army as a bandsman for three years. But when the United States entered the present war he decided to trade his clarinet for a gun, so he obtained a transfer to the fighting ranks. He is reported as severely wounded. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Jacobs, live at 4133 South Campbell avenue.

The last letter received from Private Tony Marckie of the United States regular army was last Christmas. Yesterday, when his brother, Louis, learned that he had been severely wounded, he said:

"Tony isn't much of a letter writer, but he can fight like hell."

SIX AMERICANS, 4 DEAD, GIVEN SERVICE CROSS

Pershing Cites Acts of Heroism of Men in Battle.

Washington, D. C., June 15.—Award of the Distinguished Service Cross to six members of the American forces in France, four of whom are dead, was reported today by Gen. Pershing.

Those honored were Maj. Alexander Rasmussen, U. S. R., infantry, home, Sherwood, Ore.; Sergt. Gray E. Swingle, engineers, home, Newark, O.; Private Oscar Griffith, ambulance company, home, Gadsden, Ala., and Private Frank J. Goldcamp, engineers, home, Ironton, O., all of whom were killed or died of wounds, and Corporal Thomas A. Carroll, infantry, home, Cincinnati, O., and Private Leslie M. Lane, infantry.

How Crosses were Won.

Gen. Pershing gave the following brief descriptions of the incidents in which the men distinguished themselves:

Corporal Carroll—"While a member of a patrol which was rushed by a greatly superior hostile patrol, opened fire on the enemy at fifteen yards and, although several wounded, displayed marked coolness in covering the retirement of his patrol."

Maj. Rasmussen (posthumous)—"Proceeded to his post of command in spite of heavy bombardment in order to save important papers and while thus engaged was killed by shell fire."

Private Griffith (posthumous)—"Displayed extraordinary devotion to duty in going to the assistance of wounded man and in remaining with him through a heavy bombardment until Private Griffith himself was killed."

Dying, He Saved Patrol.

Sergt. Swingle (posthumous)—"Was in command of a patrol sent out near Bois Destailloux on March 28, 1918. The patrol came under hostile machine gun fire and Sergt. Swingle was mortally wounded. He gave instructions to the patrol to return to their company commander and ordered them to leave him as the patrol was under fire and would in all probability be wiped out. Sergt. Swingle died within the enemy's lines."

Private Goldcamp (posthumous)—"Attempted to rescue Sergt. Swingle on March 29, his patrol leader, who was lying wounded within sight of his lines. While engaged in this work he came under hostile machine gun fire and was killed."

Attacked Enemy Force.

Private Lane—"On the night of April 4 and 5 he was carrying rations to the men in the front trenches. He encountered a large enemy platoon, who demanded his surrender. He refused to surrender and drew his pistol and killed the enemy platoon commander, causing the enemy raiding party to retire. During the encounter he was severely wounded by hand grenades. By his quickness of action he undoubtedly saved the lives of the men in our advanced listening post."

Alaskan Steamer Burns; All Saved Except Cargo

A Pacific Port, June 15.—Messages received here today said the Pacific Steamship company's freight and passenger steamer Ravalli, 777 tons, was destroyed by fire yesterday while en route to southwestern Alaska ports.

When the fire was discovered the steamer was beached and the passengers and crew landed.

The vessel was burning fore and aft when it was beached and the fire was not extinguished until it reached the water's edge. All the baggage was saved, but most of the cargo was destroyed.

SHRAPNEL

A hurry call for a thousand machinists and tool makers to work in a Detroit plant manufacturing submarine chasers for the government has been received at the federal state employment agency, 116 North Dearborn street. A wage of 75 cents to $1 an hour will be paid. There is also a demand for 500 carpenters for government work at Clarksdale, Wis. Transportation is free. One hundred locomotive firemen and brakemen are wanted by railroads.

Miss Elizabeth Tower, daughter of Arthur Tower, society editor of the Evanston News-Index, came alone to Chicago yesterday and was married to Lieut. Thorndyke Harvey, who is in Chicago on a seven day furlough from Camp Custer, where he is stationed. Miss Tower's home was at 748 Hinman avenue.

Another "war" wedding was that of Miss Elizabeth Case to Lieut. Richard W. Northup at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Lincoln Brown, 1453 Maple avenue, Evanston. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Charles M. Stuart of the Garrett Biblical institute.

Charge Attempt to Sell Plans for Concrete Ships

Philadelphia, Pa., June 15.—What is alleged to have been a plot to sell to German agents plans of the concrete ships being built for the Emergency Fleet corporation was frustrated here this afternoon when W. J. Kelly was arrested in West Philadelphia by an agent of the department of justice. In his possession, it is said, was one of two existing sets of plans.

AMERICAN ACE DOWNS 5 FOES IN SINGLE DAY

Sergeant Putnam Credited with Daring Feat; Has 13 Victories.

PARIS, June 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—Sergt. David E. Putnam of Brookline, Mass., is reported to have downed five Germans on June 10. Three of Putnam's aerial victories now are official, and the other two are under investigation. This record, if the five victories are officially accredited, makes Putnam's total thirteen, supplanting Lieut. Frank Baylies of New Bedford, Mass., as the American ace of aces.

The feat accredited to Sergt. Putnam is the most notable performed by an American aviator, and has probably been eclipsed only once during the war. The only other aviator getting a larger bag of enemy airplanes in a single day is Lieut. Rene Fonck, a French ace, who on May 9 brought down six German machines.

Sergt. Putnam's sixth triumph in the air was announced on June 7, and nothing since that time has been received relative to other German machines being brought down. First Lieut. Frank E. Baylies is officially credited with twelve enemy airplanes.

Captures German Airman.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN LORRAINE, June 15.—Two German planes were brought down by American airmen Thursday, it was announced today. One American observation plane failed to return.

Corp. E. Frizzi, a forester engineer, single handed and unarmed captured the pilot of one German plane. The Boche was carrying two pistols. When his plane dropped, Frizzi saw the observer jump out. He ran up to him and hollered:

"Hands up, you damn Heinie, before I knock your block off!"

The German stuck his hands up without attempting to use his pistols. Frizzi seized the Boche's guns and brought him into camp, where the American soldiers entertained him until the French gendarmes arrived.

First Raid a Success.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, June 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—The first raid by an American bombing squadron behind the German lines was accomplished with successful and satisfactory results, the Americans performing like veterans.

The German anti-aircraft batteries gave them a hot reception as they crossed the front, but this shelling was extremely tame compared to what they underwent as they approached Dommary-Baroncourt. Two of the American planes leading the squadron became the particular targets of the anti-aircraft guns. They twisted and dived under a heavy shrapnel fire until they arrived over their objective, a railway junction and the surrounding buildings three miles below.

Bursting bombs laid a perfect circle of smoke about the railway junction. The smoke obscured the buildings as the bombers turned southward toward the American lines.

BATTLE REVIEW FOR WEEK SHOWS ENEMY FAILURE

Slight Gains Do Not Compensate for Heavy Losses.

[By the New York Times Military Expert.]

New York, June 15.—[Special.]—The Marne battle, as matters stood last week, was a failure in so far as a failure consists in not reaching the objective for which a given move is undertaken. There can be no doubt that Germany's object was to stretch out the Amiens position. As was stated last Sunday, every attack Germany launches we must interpret as being a part of one grand major plan.

Individual offensives as such, without relation to each other, and to such a general plan, cannot happen at this stage, for Germany is fighting now to bring victory this year before the advent of winter puts an end to the fighting, and such an end can come only through attacks directed against one objective. What the Germans failed to accomplish by their attack south of the Aisne they attempted during the week just passed to accomplish along the Oise.

Object of the Enemy.

On Sunday, after the usual artillery bombardment, they launched a heavy infantry attack over the front from the Avre at Rubescourt to the Oise at Noyon. Their object here was to beat down the southern leg of the Montdidier salient, widen the angle out, and, by taking Compiegne, flank out the great forests which had barred their advance westward from the Marne.

If this advance could be made along the western bank of the Oise and Compiegne taken, the entire French line east of the river would automatically have to retire coincident with the troops on the west bank, and the entire situation on both banks completely relieved.

Front Held Lightly.

The main German attack then fell along the front from Couchy Les Pots to Noyon. The French in holding this series of positions had followed their usual tactics of holding their front line positions lightly, this line being placed primarily to hold the enemy, but for a short time until the attack developed. These positions gave way under the impetus of the first rush, the Germans gaining ground after hard fighting over the entire front, although the two flanks for the most part held fairly well.

The main defensive line apparently extended across the plateau through Orvillers, thence along the northern edge of the Thiescourt woods and along the high ground which rose along the southern bank of the Divette river. On the French right the Germans took Courcelles and Le Fretoy and almost reached the railroad which comes south from Montdidier and then follows the Oise valley to Paris. But the reaction came quickly and the Germans were driven well back from this road and Courcelles was retaken in heavy fighting.

Could Not Hold Advantage.

In the center the Germans were more successful. For several days they fought their way steadily down the valley of the Matz, losing heavily in men but still moving forward until they reached the village of Marqueglise at the bend in the Matz. Here, stretched out along the southern bank of this little creek the French fought the battle out.

The object of the Germans here was the outflank the French positions to the east, which had been giving them considerable trouble. Along the Divette river, in particular, the French defense had completely mastered the German offensive. The high banks which led rapidly up to the long plateau south of the river gave the French a great advantage of position, which they utilized to the fullest possible extent. But the Germans who had reached the bend in the Matz and who were along the northern bank spread out to the east and cut in behind the Thiescourt positions seizing the insignificant little village of Antoval.

Too Close for Comfort.

This was getting too close to the French rear for comfort. They accordingly withdrew under cover of the forest of D'Ourschamp on the eastern bank of the Oise, giving up the valley of the Divette and establishing a new line, which ran approximately west through Ribecourt. A retirement of this nature placed in an exceedingly dangerous position the French lines on the eastern bank of the Oise.

Now, however, because of the French retirement on the western bank of the river, this section of the French line was reduced to a narrow angle with a very sharp apex at Sempigny. Even a small German gain would have spelled disaster to all of the troops in the angle.

The French, therefore, as a defensive measure, retired from the angle and straightened out their lines through Ribecourt. Here the offensive on this section of the front came to an end. The net result was a decided and very bloody check to the Germans. In fact, it is probably the worst defeat the Germans have suffered for two years, excepting, possibly, that in Flanders of April last. The Germans here used about 300,000 men on a short front of not more than twenty miles.

This number was during the fighting increased by several divisions, all of which were more or less roughly handled. Certainly there is nothing in the German gain which in any way compensates for the heavy losses sustained.

Just as soon as the German checks on this front became positive and the realization was pounded in that she was not to get to Compiegne, another final effort was made to envelop this city. The great obstacles to German success on the western leg of the Marne salient are the forests of Villers-Cotterets and the still greater forests of De Laigue and of Compiegne. These guard Compiegne not only from the east, but to a certain extent from the west as well.

Difficulties Are Realized.

It would be extremely difficult, for example, for any army to march down the valley of the Oise with its left flank resting on the river, while it would be exposed to attack from the enemy shielded by these great belts of woods which line the eastern bank.

On the eastern side it would be almost impossible for an army to reach Compiegne through these forests against an enemy of anything like numerical and mechanical equality. This the Germans of course realized, and therefore they made an abortive attempt to flank the forest positions from the Aisne southward.

The attack which had this purpose was launched on Thursday between the Aisne and the forest of Villers-Cotterets. The French promptly yielded ground to the first attack. They fell back westward for nearly a mile across the ravine of Laversine. But here they stood fast.

Chicago Airman's Diary Telling How He Brought Down First Hun Is Made Part of War Record

Washington, D. C., June 15.—How Lieuts. Alan F. Winslow of Chicago and Douglas Campbell of San Francisco, taking the air together, shot down the first two German airplanes to fall victims to American aviators with Gen. Pershing's expeditionary forces is vividly told in the personal diary of Lieut. Winslow, made public tonight by the war department. For their feat the officers were decorated by the French government and later proposed for the American distinguished service cross.

The account, which discloses that the two machines were sent down within a minute of each other and almost on top of an American airdrome, was not written for publication, but the department explained that because of its historical and descriptive value it was decided to make it available to the public.

Swears and Opens Fire.

Lieut. Winslow, who was the patrol leader, wrote that he and Lieut. Campbell, since designated as the first American "ace," were on emergency call duty on Sunday morning, April 14 last, when, at 8:45 o'clock, information came that two German planes were about 2,000 meters above a city only a mile from the airdrome. The aviators rushed to their machines and were soon off, Campbell in the lead. Winslow, however, was first to get his man.

"I had not made a complete half turn," Lieut. Winslow wrote, "and was at about 250 meters when straight above and ahead of me in the mist of the early morning, and not more than a hundred yards away, I saw a plane coming toward me with huge black crosses on its wings and tail. I was so furious to see a Hun directly over our aviation field that I swore out loud and violently opened fire.

"At the same time, to avoid my bullets, he slipped into a left hand reversement and came down, firing on me. I climbed, however, in a right hand spiral and slipped off, coming down directly behind him and 'on his tail.'

Brings Down Foe.

"Again I violently opened fire. I had him at a rare advantage, which was due to the greater speed and maneuverability of our wonderful machines. I fired twenty to thirty rounds at him and could see my travers entering his machine. Then, in another moment, his plane went straight down in an uncontrolled nose dive. I had put his engine out of commission.

"I followed in a straight dive, firing all the way. At about six feet above the ground he tried to regain control of his machine, but could not, and he crashed to earth. I darted down near him, made a sharp turn by the wreck to make sure he was out of commission, then made a victorious swoop down over him and climbed up again to see if 'Doug' needed any help with the other Hun—for I had caught a glimpse of their combat out of the corner of my eye.

Fight Only 1,000 Feet Up.

"I rose about 300 feet again to see 'Doug' on the tail of his boche. His tracer bullets were passing throughout the enemy plane. I climbed a little higher and was diving down on this second Hun, and about to fire, when I saw the German plane go up in flames and crash to earth. 'Doug' had sent his Hun plane down one minute after I had shot down mine.

"Mind you, the fight took place only 1,000 feet up, in full view of all on the ground and in the nearby town, and it took place directly above our aviation field. These are remarkable facts, for one of our majors who, with the French army since 1915, has shot down seventeen machines, never had one land in France.

Aid Forgets Military Rules.

"When we landed only our respective mechanics were left in the 'drome' to help us out of our flying clothes. The whole camp was pouring out, flying by on foot, bicycles, side cars, automobiles; soldiers, women, children, majors, colonels, French and American—all poured out of the city. 'Doug' and I congratulated each other; and my mechanic, no longer military, jumping up and down, waving his hat, pounded me on the back instead of saluting, and yelled: 'Damn it! That's the stuff, old kid!' Then Campbell and I rushed to our respective Hun wrecks.

"On the way there—it was only half a mile—I ran into a huge crowd of soldiers—blue and khaki—pressing about one man. I pushed my way through the crowd, and heard somebody triumphantly say to the surrounded man in French: 'There he is; now you will believe he is an American.'

"I looked at the man—a scrawny, poorly clad little devil, dressed in a rotten German uniform. It was the Hun pilot of the machine I had shot down. It seems he would not believe that an American officer had brought him down. He looked me all over, and then asked me in good French if I was an American. When I answered 'Yes,' he had no more to say.

"They got much valuable information from my man—the other could not speak. He was a Pole—said he was not an officer because he was a Pole, although he had been an 'aspirant' and a pilot at the front for two years.

BOTH COLLEGE MEN.

Lieut. Alan F. Winslow is the son of Herman Winslow of Winslow Bros., 4600 West Harrison street, iron manufacturers. He is 21 years old and a graduate of the Chicago Latin school. He left Yale to join the Lafayette escadrille, and last summer went into the American aviation service in France.

Lieut. Campbell is the son of Dr. William W. Campbell, director of Lick observatory. He is a Harvard man and was one of the first group of twenty-five men to enter the first government school of aviation in Massachusetts. Last October he took his first flight with an instructor in France. Campbell brought down his fifth plane May 31 and won the coveted distinction of becoming an "ace."

JUNK EXPECTED TO PROVIDE RED CROSS $500,000

At least a half million dollars a year will be realized for the care of the families of Chicago sailors and soldiers through the salvage bureau of the Chicago chapter of the Red Cross, according to an estimate made yesterday by John W. Champion of the local organization.

Already, he said, $50,000 worth of honor coupons have been sold to junk peddlers which will be used in lieu of money when they purchase from the patriotic householder. It is expected that within the next few weeks all of the 1,500 peddlers in the city will have purchased books, which have been distributed for sale among the banks, and that persons who never before cared to bother with saving metal and old clothing will coöperate in not only making contributions to the Red Cross but in adding to the national resources.

The next step in the campaign, Mr. Champion said, will be a meeting of middlemen next Tuesday evening at the Chicago Hebrew institute, 1258 West Taylor street. The wholesalers are expected to indorse the plan and to adopt measures supporting the action of the peddlers.

GAVE SUBMARINE SHELL FOR SHELL IN RUNNING FIGHT

Keemun's Captain Tells Thrilling Tale of Escape from U-Boat.

An Atlantic Port, June 15.—Bringing a thrilling story of its fight with a German submarine off the Virginia coast, the British steamer Keemun docked here today.

The encounter with the enemy raider on Thursday was a running battle, in which the German used five inch guns and showed as much speed as the Keemun.

According to the story by the captain of the vessel, the submarine attacked the Keemun at 6:30 o'clock on Thursday night off the Virginia capes.

Wins Running Fight.

With the first shell from the sea pirate the gun crew of the Keemun opened fire on the submarine, which is apparently one of the largest of Von Tirpitz's undersea fleet.

The range then was 7,000 yards, and with shells from the five inch gun of the U-boat throwing up fountains of spray around the Keemun, a running fight started which lasted until the Keemun fired its last shot at 11,000 yards, or about seven miles.

The Keemun's guns were worked rapidly, returning shell for shell. Both vessels moved through the water at twelve knots an hour. Just how many shots were exchanged could not be accurately learned, but it is said the battle was one of the hottest in these waters between a merchantman and a U-boat.

The Keemun made quarantine early this morning and the naval authorities here obtained a lengthy statement from the captain and forwarded it at once to Washington.

Another Fight Detailed.

New York, June 15.—Another sea fight off the American coast in which the British armed merchantman Delaware sped to the assistance of a ship under submarine attack was reported here today by Ernest Lukis, arriving from Chile.

Off Diamond shoals, on the North Carolina coast, two calls for aid were heard Thursday, he said. The Delaware was acting as escort to an unarmed vessel. It responded to the signal and two hours later heavy firing was heard from the direction in which the call had come. The Delaware was not sighted again, although it had promised to return.

Two enemy submarines are still off the Virginia capes, according to marine information.

Three U-Boats Reported Sunk.

Wellesley, Mass., June 15.—Three submarines were sunk by a troopship convoy on a recent trip overseas, according to letters received here today from members of a Wellesley college unit, who were aboard one of the steamers.

NEW GRAHAM BANK PETITION.

Arguments on a petition filed by Miss Helen Donohue and a number of others, depositors in the defunct Graham & Sons bank, asking that all depositors share alike in the distribution of the bank's assets, will be heard by Judge Carpenter June 24. In a previous ruling Judge Carpenter held that all persons depositing funds in the bank immediately prior to the failure should be paid in full. It is against this ruling that the petition is directed.

MANUFACTURERS' CHIEF WARNS OF STEEL SHORTAGE

Need of Systematic Action to Provide for After War Trade.

Owners of industrial plants were warned yesterday by William Butterworth, president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, that unless prompt and systematic action is taken a large number of factories will be forced to close within a short time.

Mr. Butterworth's warning was delivered at a meeting of members of the association's war industries bureau in the Hotel La Salle. The necessity for organized effort now, in order that manufacturers in the United States may hold their own in the contest for world trade after the war, was also pointed out.

U. S. to Use Steel.

"The government is going to use all the steel that the country can produce, and all the pig iron, too," said Mr. Butterworth. "It will be necessary for you to get all you can as quickly as possible, or you will find there will be none to be had. Allotments of materials and fuel will be made according to the order given in the list of priorities sent out by the government. Find out at once under which classification your plant comes, and act accordingly, or you will find that you cannot get fuel, steel, or anything else that you will need. The industries are classified by products, not in the ordinary way.

"The government is at work on a plan to stabilize labor, so that it will be possible to figure costs accurately when bids are made for contracts. Practical men are engaged in this work, so we can hope for good results. It is a bad practice for manufacturers to bid against each other and to take men out of each other's shops. The government is not doing much of anything to stop these things, and the manufacturers must take united action and correct the abuses.

Eye to Peace.

"We will also have to stand together if we are to do anything in the field of foreign commerce when peace comes. Germany has already arranged to sell a certain percentage of the output of each manufacturer in foreign fields. Their government is aiding the German manufacturers. England is also making preparations to get business. South America is the great field for export trade that all are trying to control. The United States has done nothing in the way of preparation for the commercial struggle. We manufacturers have got to get together and see to it that the problems we will have to face are properly handled."

H. O. Lang of Ferguson & Lang told the members that his foundry and others might be forced to close during the week for lack of iron, although they are working on priority orders.

BATTLING PACIFIST

Mrs. Ruth Lighthall's Drives on Peace and Order Have at Last Reached the Federal Grand Jury.

MRS. RUTH LIGHTHALL, battling pacifist, 3800 Loomis street, recently arrested under the espionage act and locked up in the county jail in default of $25,000 bonds, is deeper in trouble. Her case was taken to the federal grand jury yesterday, and officials predicted that an indictment will be returned against her very soon.

The public career of Mrs. Lighthall seems to belie her pacifist preachings. Highlights from her life follow:

JULY 20, 1917—Hung flag draped with crêpe from window to show she mourned for "lost liberty."

MAY 23, 1918—Arrested on charge of having three times torn down American flag at Jenner Medical college, where she was studying medicine.

MAY 24, 1918—George V. Lighthall, ex-husband, said he hoped "they'd lock her up for life."

According to agents of the government, Mrs. Lighthall has a tongue without bridle, and volubly declares, among sundry other things, that "the I. W. W. is right," and she preferred to be tried "before a man like La Follette" rather than Judge Landis.

"Two Crowded Years"

The interesting story of Archbishop Mundelein's first two years in charge of the second largest Catholic Archdiocese in America.

DIRECTING the spiritual welfare of more than 1,000,000 human beings is no easy occupation, and yet this is the task with which George William Mundelein was confronted two years ago when he was delegated to be Archbishop of Chicago. What Archbishop Mundelein saw in the work before him, what he proposed to do and what he has accomplished are interestingly, entertainingly portrayed in the absorbing new book, just off the presses, entitled "Two Crowded Years."

Whether or not you are a Catholic, you will enjoy reading "Two Crowded Years." You will enjoy it for the Archbishop's beautiful, masterly literary style quite as much as for the clear, connected closely knitted history of Catholic development in the Chicago archdiocese for the past two years which it tells.

Perhaps no clergyman in charge of the religious welfare of any American community has had to meet any more trying situations in so short a period as has Archbishop Mundelein. For his flock includes not only more than 1,000,000 human beings, but it also comprises members of every race and practically every nationality under the sun.

It is only recently that the world at large has begun to realize how much Archbishop Mundelein, in his quiet but efficient way, has accomplished—and yet what he has done marks only the beginning of what he proposes to do. Many of his plans that have not yet been consummated are fully outlined throughout the course of this book, "Two Crowded Years."

ICE PRICES TO THE HOUSEWIFE ARE CUT BY U. S.

Coupon Books to Be Lower; "Carry Stations" Is New Plan.

Washington, D. C., June 15.—[Special.]—Maximum ice prices for Chicago, effective next Monday, were announced by Harry A. Wheeler, food administrator for Illinois, at the conclusion of a conference with a committee of Chicago ice dealers today.

The new prices show a reduction under the schedule of March 1 for the small consumer and an increase in price to the large consumer.

Family coupon books will be sold on the following basis:

One hundred and fifty pounds, 65 cents cash; 500 pounds, $2.12 cash, $2.37 credit; 1,000 pounds, $4.25 cash, $4.75 credit; 2,000 pounds, $8.50 cash, $9.50 credit.

The ordinary rate at present to domestic consumers of ice is 50 cents per hundreweight. Ice ticket books of 1,000 pounds sell for $5 and 2,000 pounds for $10. The rate was raised from 40 cents per hundred last spring.

An innovation is the creation of "jitney ice stations," where ice will be sold on the "cash and carry" plan at a considerable reduction. A committee of ice dealers will decide on locations of these stations, but until permanent locations are fixed and distributed between the companies for operation ice wagons will be located at fixed points as temporary "jitney stations."

Sees Famine Danger.

In announcing the new schedule of maximum prices Food Administrator Wheeler calls attention to the danger of an ice famine in Chicago unless strict conservation measures are adopted. Although 400,000 tons of ice were carried over from last year, the available supply is below last year's consumption and about 400,000 tons below the 1916 consumption. This is due to the storms of last winter, which interfered with the natural ice harvest.

Dealers who produce ice will be compelled to submit to the maximum schedule by the food administration's power to withhold ammonia and other raw materials. Peddlers who buy ice from the dealers and who now serve two-thirds of Chicago ice consumers will be held to the new price schedule by the threat of having their ice supply cut off.

Statement by Wheeler.

Food Administrator Wheeler issued a statement, which follows in part, giving details of the new price schedules at the conclusion of his conference with the Chicago ice committee at the food administration here:

"Negotiations between food administration of Illinois and Chicago ice dealers were brought to a conclusion in Washington today with a declaration of fair maximum prices by the food administration and an agreement with the dealers present to make the new prices effective with Monday, June 17.

"The principal gain to the consumer is a reduction of price on coupon books to $4.25 and $8.50 cash and the establishment of ice stations at convenient points in congested neighborhoods where ice may be obtained at the following prices:

"Fifteen pounds for a nickel, thirty pounds for a dime, fifty pounds for 15 cents, and one hundred pounds for 30 cents.

"Thus by the cash and carry principle ice will be available to the consumers in small or large quantities at a flat price of $6 per ton, or $2.50 below the lowest cash price delivered.

Rebates on Old Books.

"Many consumers have purchased books at prices higher than the fair maximum prices declared by the food administration. The unused portions of these books may be presented to the office of the ice company issuing the same and the rebate on unused coupons will be paid in cash or the value of the unused coupons may be applied to the purchase of a new book at the reduced price.

"Many families are served by dealers who issue no coupon books but who collect for ice as delivered. These dealers are permitted to charge a maximum of 48 cents per 100 pounds, 24 cents for 50 pounds, 12 cents for 25 pounds, and this is the maximum price that will be permitted to be charged the consumer under any conditions.

"The fair maximum price for ice in car lots, bought at the icehouse at lake points, buyer to pay all charges and stand all shrinkages, was fixed at $2 per ton; wholesale customers, including railroads for the icing of cars, $5 per ton for deliveries of 5,000 pounds and over and $5.50 per ton for deliveries between 1,500 and 5,000 pounds. Smaller wholesale deliveries are to be made at the same price as became effective March 1, 1918—namely: $6 per ton for deliveries of 300 to 1,500 pounds and $7 per ton for deliveries of 300 pounds or less."

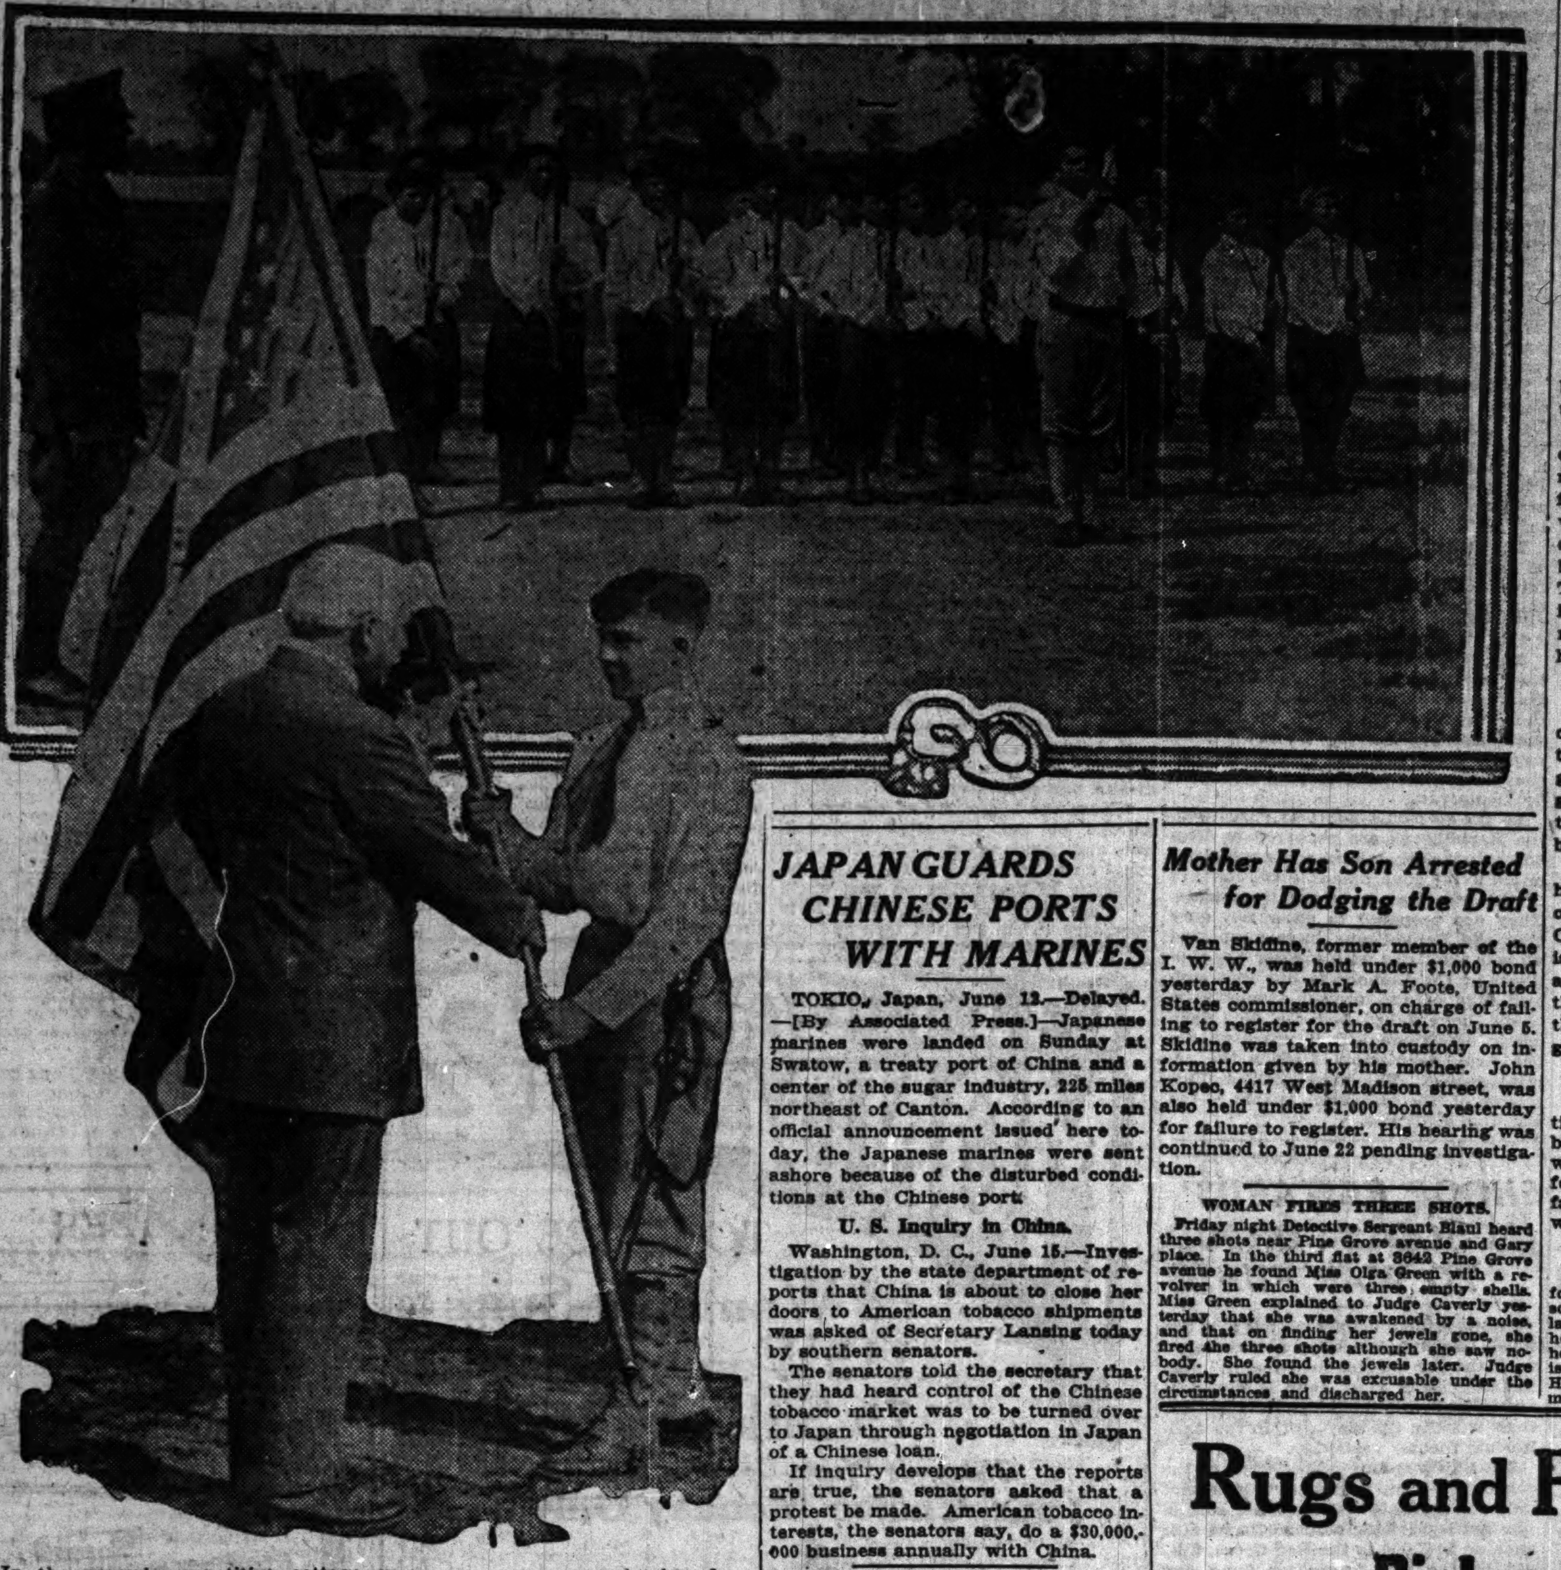
Glenwood Boys' Inter-Cottage Competitive Drill Enthuses Judges.



In the annual competitive cottage drill yesterday at the Glenwood Manual Training School for Boys, Capt. George Bennett of Lincoln cottage took first honors with his squad. Capt. Bennett was presented with a sword, the gift of Col. Walter Scott of New York, and the squad was given a fine silk flag, the gift of Edward B. Butler of Butler Bros.

Mr. Butler made the presentation speech for both trophies, Col. Scott not being able to attend the drill. The drills have been held for twenty-two years and a silk flag has been given every year as a personal token from Mr. Butler.

The drill judges were Maj. John P. Hobbs and Capts. Jacob Judson and Frederick T. Lyon. Four companies were so well drilled that they almost tied for a decision and it war only after a regular army officer had put these squads through maneuvers that the winner was chosen.

"I only wish I could pick twenty men from my command so well trained," said one of the judges at the close of the drill. "These boys would do credit to any military organization."

JAPAN GUARDS CHINESE PORTS WITH MARINES

TOKIO, Japan, June 12.—Delayed.—[By Associated Press.]—Japanese marines were landed on Sunday at Swatow, a treaty port of China and a center of the sugar industry, 225 miles northeast of Canton. According to an official announcement issued here today, the Japanese marines were sent ashore because of the disturbed conditions at the Chinese port.

U. S. Inquiry in China.

Washington, D. C., June 15.—Investigation by the state department of reports that China is about to close her doors to American tobacco shipments was asked of Secretary Lansing today by southern senators.

The senators told the secretary that they had heard control of the Chinese tobacco market was to be turned over to Japan through negotiation in Japan of a Chinese loan.

If inquiry develops that the reports are true, the senators asked that a protest be made. American tobacco interests, the senators say, do a $30,000,000 business annually with China.

Mother Has Son Arrested for Dodging the Draft

Van Skidine, former member of the I. W. W., was held under $1,000 bond yesterday by Mark A. Foote, United States commissioner, on charge of failing to register for the draft on June 5. Skidine was taken into custody on information given by his mother. John Kopec, 4417 West Madison street, was also held under $1,000 bond yesterday for failure to register. His hearing was continued to June 22 pending investigation.

ICE FUND OPENS TO SAVE CITY'S NEEDY BABIES

"Tribune" Will Aid Relief of Poor in Danger of Being Forgotten.

The appeal on behalf of Chicago's babies has brought several contributions to THE TRIBUNE's ice fund.

Those who keep in close touch with conditions among those who have little money, but who must provide for large families, have pointed out that the work that must be done in Chicago during the heated period probably will be unusually strenuous this summer. The reason for this, it is asserted, lies in the fact that the attention of the majority of charitable organizations has been diverted to war causes.

Attention Turns Abroad.

In practically every city and town of the United States every organization that can do so is bending all its energies to the relief of the babies of Belgium, France, Poland, and other war torn countries where the orphans must be given care.

While there is no wish to divert any help from these causes, it is pointed out that there are many little ones in Chicago whose case is also urgent. Ice is a necessity in families where there are babies, during the summer, and there are thousands of homes where there will be no ice unless help is given from outside sources.

Tribune Will Handle Fund.

THE TRIBUNE will accept contributions to its ice fund this season, as has been the custom in former years, and will see to it that the money is spent for ice that will be distributed among families in the thickly settled districts where it is badly needed.

STABBED MAN WANDERS, DAZED.

James Sosnoto of 728 Dekoven street was found wandering about at Forquer and Madison streets with a stab wound in his chest last night. He was unable to make a further statement.

BIG CROWD AT REQUIEM MASS FOR HINES' SON

Memorial services for Lieut. Edward Hines Jr., who died in a base hospital in France June 4, were held yesterday morning at 10 o'clock in St. Mary's Catholic church in Evanston.

The Rt. Rev. Francis C. Kelley, assisted by the Rev. Joseph Harrington, the Rev. F. Seidenburg, the Rev. Leo McNamara, and the Rev. P. J. O'Callaghan of Washington, D. C., celebrated the military requiem mass. Two units of soldiers from Fort Sheridan participated.

The service was attended by more than 1,000 persons, and several hundred were turned away because of lack of accommodations.

CELEBRATES FIRST MASS.

The Rev. William Ward, C. M., son of Albert J. Ward of 513 Fullerton parkway, and one of seven sons, five of whom are in the national service, will celebrate his first mass today at St. Vincent's church, Sheffield and Webster avenues.

CAMPAIGN OPENS FOR U. S. SENATE THIS WEEK

Foss to Cut Loose in the Southern Part of State; Season Is Late.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Carbondale, Ill., June 15.—[Special.]—Southern Illinois is all set for the opening of hostilities in the Republican senatorial contest.

Congressman Foss will begin his first speaking tour the coming week. He is to be followed quickly by Mayor Thompson, and Medill McCormick will be on the job down in this part of the state about July 4.

For the first time in campaigns the southern Illinois counties have not lived up to their record of getting a mid-winter start on state politics.

At this stage of the game usually Egypt is "all het up" over the pending situation.

Universal Slogan: Win the War.

The people want the war won as quickly as is possible, so long as the kaiser gets a 100 per cent licking. They want men at Washington who are 100 per cent loyal and who realize what must be done to back up the soldiers and sailors who have gone and who are going from every township and voting precinct in the state.

It has been found by conversations with the man on the street, in the shops, and in the stores of southern Illinois that this sentiment is substantially crystallizing around the candidacy of Medill McCormick. The judgment of many of the recognized political spokesmen in the four southern congressional districts, as has been expressed this week, is that McCormick now has a long lead over the field in this part of the state.

Foss Big Help to Thompson.

Had the contest rested between McCormick and the mayor, the belief seems to be very firmly established that McCormick would have "cleaned up" in nearly every one of the counties below St. Louis. This calculation has been upset by the recent announcement of Congressman Foss' candidacy. That he will make trouble for McCormick and give heart and courage to the mayor's friends is believed to be a correct statement of the case, prior to the real opening of the campaign.

County leaders who have become strong supporters of McCormick agree that Foss will appeal directly to some of the old line Republicans who have not quite forgotten the 1912 campaign.

Influential Men Back McCormick.

In the Twenty-second district the recognized lieutenants of Congressman Rodenberg are out in the open for McCormick. The Twenty-third district, which is the home of Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson, is reported to be strongly favorable for McMormick. In the Twenty-fourth district Congressman Tom Williams has announced himself for McCormick, and in the Twenty-fifth Congressman Dennison was one of the first of the Illinois delegation at Washington to announce his preference for McCormick.

Player Folk to Entertain Men at Fort Sheridan

Members of "Doing Our Bit" and "The Cohan Revue" companies, attractions at the Palace theater and Cohan's Grand Opera house, respectively, this morning go to Fort Sheridan, where they will entertain soldiers and the students at the officers' camp.

War Will Be the Dominant Issue in the Fall Elections to Congress

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., June 15.—[Special.]—With party primaries being held for the nomination of candidates in the congressional election next November, the country is already in the midst of the first general accounting between government and people since the United States declared war on Germany.

That President Wilson looks forward to the result of the election as a popular verdict on the conduct of the war was indicated when he urged congress to pass an additional war revenue bill before the administrative and legislative branches of the government go before the people for judgment of their stewardship

War Main Issue.

The war in all its phases is the paramount issue of the campaign. Candidates for senate and house of representatives are being judged by their records of loyalty to the nation, support of the government, and attitude on questions of making the country's participation in the conflict most effective.

The people also are standing up to be counted for or against candidates who have proved themselves true guardians of the nation's interest and zealots for the triumph of the United States and its allies over Germany.

Fight for Control.

The Republicans are striving to capture the house of representatives and the senate, their chances of success being considerably more promising in the former than in the latter case. The Democrats are striving to retain control of both branches of the national legislature.

Yet there is noticeably less partisanship in the contest than there would be were the nation not at war. Country is paramount to party as never before, and already it is apparent that whatever senator or representative seeking renomination and reëlection, has served his country well will be hard to defeat, be he Democrat or Republican.

The defeat of Representative Frank Woods of Iowa, chairman of the Republican congressional committee, for renomination has raised the question of the temper of the country toward all the members of congress who voted against the declaration of war on Germany. Mr. Woods voted against war and the Republicans of his district refused him a renomination, though he maintains that local political conditions account for the result. Nevertheless there is much speculation here as to how many of the men who voted against war will be defeated in the primaries or election.

Voted Against War.

Democrats—Almon and Burnett of Alabama, Church of California, Connelly of Kansas, Dill of Washington, Decker, Hensley, Igoe, and Shackleford of Missouri, Dominick of South Carolina, Hilliard and Keating of Colorado, Kitchin of North Carolina, McLemore of Texas, Sherwood of Ohio, and Van Dyke of Minnesota.

Republicans—Britten, Fuller, King, Mason, Rodenberg, and Wheeler of Illinois, Browne, Cary, Cooper, Davidson, Esch, Frear, Nelson, Stafford, and Voight of Wisconsin, Davis, Knutson, and Lundeen of Minnesota, Dillon of South Dakota, Haugen and Hull of Iowa, Hayes of California, Kinkaid, Reavis, and Sloan of Nebraska, La Follette of Washington, Little of Kansas, Rankin of Montana, and Roberts of Nevada.

Also on Wrong Side.

Bacon of Michigan, who was unseated in an election contest, and Johnson of South Dakota, who enlisted in the regular army and has been renominated, also voted against war.

London of New York, Socialist, and Randall of California, Prohibitionist, likewise voted against war.

Some of these men voiced the prevailing sentiment of their constituencies in opposing war and will be returned to congress together with others who, though they ran counter to local sentiment, have found favor by reason of their support of war measures.

Wilson's Acid Test.

Whether President Wilson will seek to apply his "acid test" of pre-war loyalty to the nation to candidates in this election as he did in the recent election of a senator in Wisconsin remains to be seen. The president's acid test of loyalty, set forth in the letter Mr. Wilson wrote to Joseph E. Davies, the Democratic candidate, was the attitude of representatives on the McLemore resolution to warn Americans against traveling on armed ships of belligerent nationality and on the proposed embargo on the export of war munitions.

To apply this "acid test" in this election would strike at more than fifty Republican members of this house who are candidates for reëlection, but it would also impugn the loyalty of twenty-one Democrats, many of whom are stanch supporters of the administration.

The Democrats now have a majority of eight in the senate, but even if they should retain control of the body this majority is likely to be reduced.

Where They Are Strong.

The Republicans are confident that they will gain seats in Kansas, New Hampshire, Illinois, and possibly Montana and Nevada. The Democratic managers are making no predictions beyond expressing the confidence that they will retain all the seats now held by Democrats.

So far as partisanship is concerned, the Republicans are prepared to demonstrate that they have rendered greater aid to the government in the conduct of the war than have the Democrats. They are prepared to show not only that the Republicans have supported all war measures with greater unanimity than the Democrats but that several bills of the utmost importance would have failed because of Democratic defections had it not been for the Republican support given the administration. The most notable illustration of this contention is that of the selective draft law.

ALFRED L. BAKER INDORSES RACE OF M'CORMICK

Thinks Candidate for the Senate Has "More Ability."

Alfred L. Baker, former president of the Chicago Stock Exchange, the Merchants' club, and the Onwentsia club, yesterday indorsed the candidacy of Medill McCormick for United States senator.

A copy of his statement, given out at the McCormick headquarters, read in part as follows:

"I hope Medill McCormick will be successful in his campaign for the nomination for United States senator. Of all the candidates he seems to be preferable.

More Native Ability.

"Medill McCormick is a younger man than the other candidates, has more vision, and much more native ability. He is alert minded, wide-awake, and progressive.

"Since the beginning of the war in Europe he has advocated preparedness and has done everything one man could do to stir the country up to the necessity of energizing its war work. In these times of stress, when it is necessary to cut out red tape and get at the truth of things, the younger men who have native ability, clear vision, and high character and who have not been living in political grooves are the ones to look to for leadership.

"Among these is Medill McCormick, who has vision, ability, and character."

Foss Speaks Tuesday.

Although he will not formally open his downstate campaign until he speaks at Mount Vernon on Wednesday, Congressman George Edmund Foss will deliver an address at a Red Cross rally at Washburn, Woodford county, Tuesday afternoon. From Washburn he will go to Peoria for a conference with Republicans of that vicinity Tuesday evening.

Congressman Foss received by telegraph promise of the support of former Judge W. G. Cochran of Sullivan, Moultrie county.

By telegraph Thursday night THE TRIBUNE was informed that the Negro Baptist convention at Cairo, Ill., had indorsed Congressman McCormick. Congressman Foss received a telegram denying this statement, and investigation by THE TRIBUNE brought a statement that the convention had indorsed none of the candidates, as it does not participate in politics.

First Lieutenant Proves to Be Front Line Faker

Considerable mystery surrounds the arrest of J. Gordon Yates in full uniform of an army officer yesterday by federal agents. Besides wearing the insignia of a first lieutenant, Yates also had sewed to his sleeves the gold chevron showing service in France. Further than admitting that he is not a lieutenant and had no right to wear the insignia, Yates refused to discuss himself. He jingled an identification tag with his name on it against his military wrist watch in proof that he really had been overseas. He was held under $1,000 bond by Mark A. Foote, United States commissioner, pending investigation.

ONCE VOTED FOR MAYOR, SCORNS FREE REPUBLICAN

Another voter who had been notified that he would receive "The Chicago Republican" free of cost for six months yesterday sent THE TRIBUNE a copy of the letter he sent in reply to the notice.

Declining the offer of the free subscription, Albert A. Lynes, 4011 Lexington avenue, wrote as follows:

"Your offer of 'The Republican' for six months I must respectfully decline. Its glaring, distorted headlines on the newstands are enough to make any patriotic American see red.

"Until Mayor Thompson 'sees the light' and openly and publicly declares himself for the government and uses the prestige and influence which are his by virtue of office to aid the government rather than adding to its burdens, I shall not knowingly allow myself to be connected with any movement with which he may be identified.

"Every citizen of average intelligence ought to know the truth as to the policies of our government, as well as those of William Hale Thompson. I do not care to read his swan song or note how nobly he wields the whitewash brush.

"I have no doubt your surplus copies would be welcomed by enemy interests, where I think they would receive a hearty greeting as being in thorough accord with German ideals."

In his letter to THE TRIBUNE Mr. Lynes describes himself as "one who unfortunately voted for 'Big Bill' three years ago."

HOPE TO PLACE NEARLY 500,000 BOYS ON FARMS

Washington, D. C., June 15.—[Special.]—While the common labor shortage in war industries is considered so critical that its recruiting and distributing will next month be handled exclusively by the United States employment service of the department of labor, the situation regarding skilled workers is little less serious. I. W. Litchfield of Boston, chief of the clearance and skilled labor section of the federal employment service, gave officials of the service this information at the closing session of the national war labor conference here today.

As soon as possible, it was stated, the employment service will handle skilled labor recruiting exclusively.

M. A. Coykendall, chief of the farm service division of the employment service, said that farmers must rely largely upon emergency and boy labor, since most of the former supply of skilled farm hands has been drawn into industry. As hard as the task of recruiting emergency farm workers and training boys for farm work, he said, is the task of inducing farmers to take them.

William E. Hall, national director of the public service reserve and the boys' working reserve, said that the latter organization will have placed between 250,000 and 500,000 boys between 16 and 21 on the farms by the end of the season.

NEWSBOYS TO VISIT WHITE CITY.

Newsboys from Chicago and near by towns will be the guests of the White City management tomorrow evening, when they will be admitted to the amusement park free and provided with plenty of rides and attraction tickets.

SHOOP REWARDS SCHOOLS FOR AID TO WAR FUNDS

"Nine million dollars we put into the third Liberty loan does not compare with the joy we get in doing it," was the analysis of Supt. John D. Shoop in awarding prizes to Chicago schools for their work in the last loan, in the Auditorium theater yesterday.

Mr. Shoop recounted the work of the school children, paying a tribute not only for the $9,000,000 in bonds sold in the last issue, but for other large aids such as $347,000 to the Red Cross, $18,600 to the war recreation fund and other sums.

Mrs. Jacob Baur presented shields to the victorious schools, the Lane, Senn, Crane, and Oak Park High schools and the Swift, Stewart, Shakespeare, Kenwood, and the Goudy elementary schools.

Chicago Master Steamfitters
At their last meeting passed the following resolution:
Whereas, it has been ascertained by careful comparisons covering a period of nearly twenty (20) years that the cost of heating installation, both of steam and water, has increased from the low point of about June 1st very considerably until December 1st;
Therefore, in view of this fact, and also of the difficulty of obtaining sufficient material and labor, the Chicago Master Steamfitters Association recommends that such of the public who contemplate installing Heating Systems or making alterations in their present heating equipment this year, do so at once.

WESTERN UNION MODIFIES STAND ON ORGANIZATION

Company Suggests Plan of Restricted Union for Telegraphers.

The Western Union Telegraph company has signified its willingness to permit its employés to organize, providing the organization is one approved by the company. This is indicated by a statement sent out yesterday by Western Union officials. This statement reads in part:

"The board of directors of the Western Union Telegraph company, at a meeting held on June 11, gave careful consideration to the subject of a petition from a number of employés regarding the organization of an association, to be controlled and officered by employés, and which would best serve and further the mutual interests of the employés and the company.

Company Prepared to Help.

"The company is prepared to help in any way it can in the formation of such an association, and to that end the president has been requested to communicate with the employés of all divisions, suggesting that they choose representatives for a convention which shall perfect an industrial constitution, such convention to be held at Chicago on July 10. The essential features of the proposed industrial constitution shall be complete control of such an association by employés, none of whom shall be in a position of authority with the company to hire or discharge. The proposed association shall be as representative as possible of all employés.

Calls for Convention.

"In accordance with the foregoing it is recommended that employés proceed to elect delegates, as hereinafter provided, to meet in convention and who shall be authorized to deal with subjects of a common interest, especially the following, which are tentatively suggested.

"1. The better utilization of the practical knowledge and experience of employés.

"2. Means for securing to the employés a greater share in and responsibility for the determination and observance of the conditions under which their work is carried on.

"3. The settlement of the general principles governing the conditions of employment, including methods of fixing, paying, and readjusting wages, having regard to the need of securing to the employés a share in the increased prosperity of the industry."

The company has agreed to pay the expenses of the convention, including the salary and expenses of delegates.

Officials of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America, which has threatened a strike if the right of Western Union employés to join the organization is not recognized, declared yesterday that this action on the part of the telegraph company was "a blind."

There will be a mass meeting this afternoon of members of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America in room 610 of the Masonic Temple.

Thanks to the Postal.

That the recent action of the Postal Telegraph-Cable company, in complying with President Wilson's request to assist the federal government in the avoidance of labor troubles during the war by granting to its employés the right to organize, has won the gratitude of the president is indicated by a telegram received yesterday by Clarence H. Mackay, president of the Postal company. This telegram reads:

"The White House, Washington, June 13, 1918.

"My Dear Mr. Mackay: May I not express my warm and sincere appreciation of your kind telegram of this morning, and may I not say I was sure of the response which my request would meet? Sincerely yours,

"WOODROW WILSON."

LETTER FROM WILSON.

Washington, D. C., June 15.—President Wilson has written the following letter to S. J. Konenkamp, head of the Commercial Telegraphers' union:

"My Dear Mr. Konenkamp:

"My attention has been called to the fact that the national war labor board, after careful consideration of the questions at issue between the telegraph companies and their employés, have arrived at a decision, the essential points of which are embraced in the following:

"First—That employés have a right to join a union if they so desire and the men discharged for joining a union should be reinstated.

"Second—The company should not be required to deal with the union or to recognize it.

"Third—A committee of employés should be recognized in presenting grievances.

"Fourth—Where employés and employers fail to agree the question in dispute should be determined by the national war labor board.

"Fifth—The telegraphers' union should not initiate strikes, or permit its members to initiate them, but should submit all grievances to the national war labor board.

Suggests the Blame.

"I am informed that the representatives of the union are willing to accept this decision, but that the representatives of the telegraph companies have not accepted it.

"May I not say that it is imperatively necessary that the decision of the board should be accepted by both parties to labor disputes? To fail to accept them is to jeopardize the interests of the nation very seriously, because it constitutes a rejection of the instrumentality set up by the government itself for the determination of labor disputes with a sincere desire to arrive at justice in every case and with the express purpose of safeguarding the nation against labor difficulties during the continuation of the present war.

"All these circumstances being taken into consideration, I do not hesitate to say that it is a patriotic duty to coöperate in this all important matter with the government by the use of the instrumentality that the government has set up. I therefore write to ask that I may have your earnest coöperation in this matter, as in all others, and that you and those whom you represent will assist in setting an example to those who have anything to do with the administration of the affairs of labor.

"Very sincerely yours,

"WOODROW WILSON."

LABOR MISSION REVEALS GERMAN HOLD ON MEXICO

Propagandists Fought All Efforts to Aid the Workers.

BY FRANK EMERICH.

St. Paul, Minn., June 15.—[Special.]—A revelation of the indefatigability of German propaganda was offered at today's session of the convention of the American Federation of Labor by the report of the federation's recent mission to Mexico, read by James Lord, its chairman.

The purpose of the mission was to promote a pan-American labor federation and to ascertain the state of Mexican feeling toward the United States.

"We were the storm center of a most vicious campaign of German propaganda," the report declared. "This propaganda started at the time we crossed the border, and we occupied the front pages of the most prominent newspapers of Mexico every day. Fortunately this campaign was not as intelligent as it was industrious and the vilifications and silly lies all reacted in our favor.

Called Strike Breakers.

"We were called strike breakers, jingoes, and accused of being there in the interests of the brutal allies, and that our object was to force peace loving Mexico to fight her good friend Germany on the side of the thief and murderer America."

The report says the ancient talk of the United States stealing Texas and California from Mexico was revived. It also described the Mexican newspaper situation and stated that the leading journals were pro-German or directly German owned. A résumé of an attempt to reproduce Russian conditions by praising syndicalism was given as mere details of capitalizing of a statement that "the A. F. of L. has forbidden the workers to strike during the war period as proving that the American workmen have been forced to surrender the privilege of striking."

Tried to Break Up Meeting.

The report also accuses these newspapers of deliberately perverting statements of members of the commission and tells of Germans in Mexico preventing the use of a theater which had been hired for a massmeeting for the mission. Another was procured, however, and a big meeting held, where the Germans who had advertised a free lottery at another theater to distract the people's attention appeared to be immensely chagrined.

One of the German propagandists obtained the floor at the close of this meeting and attacked the visitors, but was hooted and laughed at.

The report showed that foundations are being laid for the formation of a Mexican federation of labor, and also of a pan-American federation of workers.

Union Protests Loyalty.

The efforts of the ladies garment workers to foment Socialistic and pacifist discord at the convention, under the leadership of its president, Ben Schlessinger, has brought a storm of protest from the United Garment workers, another organization often confounded with Schlessinger's.

This union has evidenced its loyalty, its officials say, by complete support of the government, fighting against Socialism and refraining from strikes. Frank A. Doyle, Boston, and A. Gordon, Baltimore, members of the garment workers' executive council, issued a statement today, in reply to numerous telegrams of protest from their locals throughout the country.

"The loyalty of our organization cannot be questioned," the statement read. "We are with the government to the hilt to win the war. We emphatically disclaim any connection or sympathy with Schlessinger's ladies garment workers, and keenly regret the similarity of names has served to cause us to be confused with such an organization."

Will Force "Showdown."

S. J. Konenkamp today announced his entire satisfaction with the attitude of President Wilson in the telegraphers' difficulty and said he would issue a formal statement tomorrow.

The "reds," as most of the delegates term the pacifists, met last night, it was reported today, and decided to force a "showdown" of strength Monday or Tuesday, in a last effort to show that pacifist sentiment has a respectable following in the convention.

Several responsible leaders have given notice that "fireworks" may be expected when this occurs.

FORD NOT AFTER OFFICE, BUT MAY BE PERSUADED

Secretary Hints Race for Senate if People Want Him.

Detroit, Mich., June 15.—[Special.]—Upon his return from Washington today Henry Ford, through his secretary, announced that he had no statement to make at this time as to his running for the United States senatorship. If any is made, however, it will be given out next week.

It was also intimated that he would make no campaign, as he feels that he is well enough known to the people of Michigan; that his views on public questions are well enough known, and that if they desire to have him for their representative in the senate he will accept the nomination.

According to what his friends say, Ford takes the request of President Wilson that he accept the candidacy in the nature of an order from the nation's chief executive, wholly aside from any political recommendation.

Called "Democratic Coup."

If State Chairman Mangum may be accepted as the official mouthpiece for the Michigan Republicans there will be no glad hand extended to Mr. Ford as a bipartisan candidate. In a statement issued from Marquette today the chairman calls the whole affair a "Democratic coup."

Former Ambassador to Japan and Italy Thomas J. O'Brien is outspoken in condemnation of Mr. Ford. He says:

"There are many reasons given why Mr. Ford should not represent Michigan in the United States senate.

"More Things to Be Said."

Former Gov. Osborn today remarked: "When I made my statement of refusal to withdraw as a Republican candidate for the senate I made it as a reply to the challenge of the Democratic voters of Michigan. Now that Mr. Ford has decided to be a candidate there will be more things that may be and should be said."

NATIONALISTS IN IRELAND GO BACK TO PARLIAMENT

Anti-Draft and Home Rule Agitation Has Quieted Down.

DUBLIN, June 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—The members of the Irish Nationalist party have decided to return to parliament the week after next.

They temporarily withdrew from attendance as a protest against the government's proposal to apply conscription to Ireland.

At present there is somewhat of a lull in the political situation. Agitation against conscription has relaxed in the face of government proclamation calling for voluntary recruits and no attempt to apply the draft is expected before October and then only in the event of conspicuous failure to obtain the necessary number by enlistment.

Illegal Drills Suppressed.

The visit of protest contemplated by the lord mayor of Dublin to President Wilson has been indefinitely postponed. He is "holding himself in readiness" to go to Washington when the occasion arises, but he has no expectation at present that the occasion ever will arise.

Suppression of illegal drilling proceeds daily and it is greatly helped by the government's warning that if the drilling continues the counties affected will be declared "special military areas."

It is not intended at present to bring to trial the Sinn Feiners arrested at Whitsuntide. Their imprisonment is made regular under the regulations of the defense of the realm act and none of them thus far has taken advantage of the provision which enables him to appeal against imprisonment.

Pro-Ally Propaganda.

The immediate purpose of the government is to make a success of the recruiting campaign. They are handing it over entirely to civilians drawn from all the political parties. Most notable among these workers is Sir Horace Plunkett, chairman of the recent Irish home rule convention at Dublin. Local committees will be formed on this principle in every district.

Pro-ally propaganda, hitherto entirely neglected in Ireland, will be undertaken, and an attempt will be made by suitable literature to explain to the Irish people the real issues of the war.

Civilian Cripples in Jobs; Points Way to War Maimed

What may be done for handicapped soldiers to be returned to Chicago is being demonstrated now in the way in which jobs are being found for handicapped civilians who are being placed by the new "handicapped" division of the federal-state employment office, 116 North Dearborn street.

Several hundred persons partly handicapped by physical defects, but capable of performing many forms of useful work, have lately registered with this department, which is directed by Frederick W. Rawitser, a dollar a year employé of the government.

"Many of these applicants are well educated persons adapted for clerical positions and other forms of office work," said Mr. Rawitser. "Many others are skilled in trades and can perform their work as well as anybody. Others are fit for day labor and would be suitable for general factory work, gardening, janitor work, etc.

Fifteen of the cripples have found work with the H. G. Sall company, 4410 Ravenswood avenue, and are said to be giving great satisfaction.

DOCTORS TO URGE COMPULSORY WAR TRAINING

Plans are being formulated by delegates of the American Medical association to urge the adoption of a law which will make military training obligatory upon the voter. The matter was first broached in resolutions adopted in the house of delegates of the association. The resolution, which has met with the indorsement of the association, follows:

"Whereas, The partial inventory of our national health, made possible by the physical examinations under the selective draft act, showed a large percentage of our young men unfit for military service, and, further, that as most of these disabilities are curable, the American Medical association is prompted to speak formally on this subject; and,

"Whereas, In view of the wonderful mental and physical benefits which have been manifested in the young manhood of America through intensive military training in the national army cantonments; and,

"Whereas, Knowing that this training has done much to inculcate the knowledge and value of sanitation and personal hygiene in the individual; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the American Medical association, in annual convention assembled, urges the early adoption of a permanent national policy of universal military training for all men before the right of suffrage is granted."

FOE QUESTIONS PURPOSE OF U. S. RED CROSS SHIP

AMSTERDAM, June 15.—Referring to the report that the American hospital ship Comfort is to be sent to Europe without escort and that Germany has been notified of this by the American government, the Lokal Anzeiger says:

"We humbly venture to ask the question what will the Comfort carry on its first voyage to Europe, as it will have no sick or wounded aboard. We greatly fear American flying men, and, perhaps, a few dozen airplanes.

"After the ample experience we have had in the course of the war of hospital ships bearing the sign of the Red Cross, the gentlemen of America and their president will perhaps not take it amiss if we ask this question."

Freight at Oriental Ports Piling Up, Tourists Say

A Canadian Pacific Port, June 15.—Freight congestion at oriental ports is acute, according to passengers on liners arriving here from overseas. It was estimated 460,000 tons of freight are piled up on Japanese docks. The bulk of the cargoes are for United States and British Columbia ports.

MINOTTOS MOVE TO GLENCOE.

Count and Countess D. Minotto, parents of the lately interned Count Minotto, who have been staying at Westleigh farm, the home of Lewis F. Swift, at Lake Forest, yesterday moved into a little cottage in Glencoe, formerly the home of Dr. F. P. Patton, at 710 Greenwood avenue.

IRISH LEADER PUTS VICTORY ABOVE HOME RULE

Shane Leslie, Here, Says Ireland Must Not Peril America.

Home rule in Ireland as affecting America's participation in the war was discussed yesterday by Shane Leslie, editor of the Dublin Review, who is visiting Chicago while on tour of the United States. He is stopping at the Hotel Sherman.

"Let us make one thing clear at the start," he said. "The Irish question must be settled in Ireland by Irishmen. That was the principle and policy of the Irish convention, which was far from being the failure we are told it was.

Owe Debt to Irish Here.

"Now we in Ireland owe an enormous debt to the Irish in America, but the time has come when we no longer have the right to press Irish Americans to intervene in our behalf. Irish-American loyalty is rightly estimated at 100 per cent, and we have no right to call on Irish-Americans to seem to lower it by even a tenth of a tenth of 1 per cent if their action would be any embarrassment to their government.

"We believe the Irish cause is sacred and an integral part of the war for democracy, and we are content to leave it to the god of democracy and, if I may reverently say so, to his prophet, Woodrow Wilson.

"Rather than that our hand should hinder America in the least from defeating Germany, I say, let it forget its cunning; and rather than allow our voice to embarrass her triumphant gesture of world liberation let it cleave to the roof of our mouth and our cause remain unheard.

"Strong Words."

"These are strong words for a home ruler to utter, but I go so far as to say that if home rule in Ireland would prevent America in any way from victory let home rule perish. But, on the other hand, if home rule would help and encourage America and aid in the prosecution of the war and the attainment of world democracy then let it be considered by American citizens as still feasible on those merits.

"The feeling of Irish America has been well laid before the British government by such responsible Irish-Americans as Medill McCormick, to whom all Irishmen owe a debt of gratitude, for the advice he and others have undoubtedly given on our behalf. We owe the Dublin convention to American opinion and criticism, and whatever fruits we are yet able to pluck from its labors will be due to America."

SUES TO TIE UP $2,000,000 STOCK.

Robert E. Ricksen, Chicago advertising man, filed suit in the Circuit court yesterday against F. A. Brewer, R. E. Wilsey, and Roy A. H. Thompson, investment bankers, with offices in the Home Insurance building, for a writ of injunction to prevent them from disposing of $2,000,000 worth of stock in the Bunte Bros.' candy manufacturers. The complainant declares he is responsible for the present organization plan of Bunte Bros., and that the defendants have failed to pay him $61,910 in stock, which, he says, they agreed to do in compensation for his plan.

IRISH ALIENS IN AMERICA TO BE DRAFT EXEMPT

New Military Treaty with Britain Ready for Senate.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 15.—[Special.]—Irish aliens in the United States are not to be made subject to draft by this government under the terms of the pending British-American draft convention, which had been months in process of negotiation.

When the treaty was first negotiated and sent to the senate it subjected unnaturalized Irishmen in this country to the draft, notwithstanding the fact that the British compulsory military service does not extend to Ireland.

Australians Also Exempt.

Now the treaty has been revised by mutual agreement between the nations involved and citizen subjects of Great Britain, who ordinarily resided in provinces not subjected to compulsory military service are exempt from the reciprocal draft provisions of the convention soon to be ratified by the senate.

Australians also will be exempt from the draft in this country under this clause of the treaty.

Understanding Is Reached.

Disclosure today also makes it clear that an understanding has ben reached whereby only those Americans resident in Great Britain or Canada who are between the ages of 21 and 31 will be subject to foreign draft.

While British military service acts would make all Americans in England or Canada between 18 and 49 years of age liable to draft in the British army, it has been agreed through diplomatic negotiations that the United States may claim exemption for its citizens who are not within the American draft age limitations.

Ticket Scalpers to Face Tax Evasion Charges

Federal agents are taking steps to round up the theater ticket scalpers in Chicago who have failed to pay 10 per cent war tax. The scalpers have been maintaining that they did not come under the law.

Charles F. Clyne, United States district attorney, holds otherwise, and the matter is understood to have been taken before the federal grand jury. The failure to pay the government's tithe makes possible a penalty of one year in prison, $1,000 fine, and an assessment of twice the tax evaded.

Many of the scalpers are offering to make peace.

18,000 ALIEN ENEMY WOMEN MUST REGISTER

Countess Minotto Among Chicagoans Who Will Report to Police.

Registration of alien enemy women will commence in Chicago tomorrow and all must be registered by June 26. Each woman will be required to report to her nearest police station with two photographs of herself of regulation size. Finger prints will be taken and blanks giving description, birth, and history will be filled out. It is estimated by John J. Bradley, United States marshal, that there are from 16,000 to 18,000 alien enemy women in Chicago.

Among them will be a number of women prominent in Chicago's social world, and one of these is the Countess Minotto, formerly Miss Ida May Swift, daughter of the packer and born here.

She is listed as an alien enemy because a wife takes the citizenship of her husband. The count was recently interned. Count Demetrio Minotto, father of the young count, registered as an alien enemy yesterday, under protest that he is in reality a citizen of Italy.

Huns Call Count Italian.

He lived for a time in Germany after war was declared and said that while he was there Germany compelled him to register as an alien enemy, recognizing him as a citizen of Italy. The count submitted to finger prints yesterday and shared with a common workman a cake of soap used to remove the ink.

Answering a recent challenge that his family has no right to the title of count, the elder Minotto said yesterday:

"I am a member of the only patrician family of the name of Minotto in Venice. In the official book of Italian nobility the Minotto family is listed as dating back to the year 827. That should be proof enough."

Minotto Resigned to Camp.

The count gave his address as Glencoe. He said that he recently received a letter from his son, now in the German detention camp at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., and that he said he is resigned to his internment and expects to remain there for the duration of the war.

Speaking of his residence in Germany, Count Minotto said: "I am a denizen of Germany, not a citizen."

All women who are natives of Alsace-Lorraine, born of French parentage, are urged to apply to the Association Generale des Alsaciens-Lorrains d'Amerique for a card of identification issued by the association which will enable them to change the term "alien female" to "French Alsatian-Lorrainer."

GARBAGE DRIVERS TO GET RAISE AT COST OF OTHERS

A partial settlement of the demand for increased pay on the part of teamsters employed by the city bureau of streets has been effected by Commissioner of Public Works Frank I. Bennett. By an arrangement with the teamsters' union, garbage wagon drivers will receive their increase from $7 to $8 a day and will waive their demand for payment on holidays. Paying the increases, it is stated, will create a deficit of $140,000. It will be necessary to retrench by laying off other teams, such as those on ash removal and street cleaning. The drivers of these are also asking an increase. Bennett says that more than 100 teams will have to be dropped.

Press feeders and their employers will hold a conference tomorrow afternoon at the Grand Pacific hotel to discuss the demands of the members of Franklin local No. 4 for a $5 increase in weekly wage and a reduction of three hours on the night shift.

Seven hundred striking employés of the Mark Manufacturing company of Evanston are expected to resume work tomorrow.

HOW MANY MILES on a SET OF TIRES?

TWIN SIX owners are reporting 10,000 miles and upward from one set of tires. Most of them did not expect a big tire saving; their Packard preference was based on road comfort and road ability.

They view the gain in tire mileage as an extra dividend—one of several assets due to the smooth, even flow of power from the Twin Six engine. This same smoothness of action accounts in part for the low cost of upkeep and the many extra miles wrested from each tank of fuel.

Qualities that are basic in Packard design take on added value when measured by the stern gauge of war-time utility.

A NEW CLAIM TO FAME FILED FOR TEXARKANA GIRL

Stepfather Identifies Picture and Says Girl Is Heiress.

Truth continues to be stranger than fiction ever dared to be in the case of June Cox, once thought the victim of the Texarkana "headless woman" murder mystery, but now held by the Chicago police as a much wanted witness in the Bowie county, Tex., $500 whisky robbery.

Here's the latest in the case, which must make the writers of dime novel thrillers and detective stories turn green with envy.

June Cox, otherwise Mrs. Henrietta May Edwards, alleged associate of desperate gangsters, is an heiress, future owner of "some of the richest oil land in Louisiana." And to her various names must be added a third alias —Henrietta Sutton.

"June" Again Identified.

While "June" was still held at the South Clark street station yesterday there appeared in Texarkana W. A. Odum of Shreveport, La. According to telegraph dispatches from the Texas-Arkansas border line city, Mr. Odum "positively identified" a picture of "June" as that of Henrietta Sutton, his stepdaughter, who disappeared a year ago last Christmas. He and his wife, the girl's mother, had been placed on her trail by reading of the "headless woman" murder mystery and seeing the description given of its supposed victim. Odum told of Henrietta Sutton's disappearance and of the fortune that awaits her.

"Henrietta was 19 years old May 16," he said, "and with two uncles is the heir to forty acres of, some of the richest oil land in Louisiana. This land is near Shreveport. We have been searching for her for more than a year in order that the land might be sold or leased for development purposes.

Vanished at Shreveport.

"She disappeared after she had started with her mother to the railway station in Shreveport to go to Sibley, La., where I was at the time. She left her mother at the station while she pretended to go to a store. Neither her mother nor I had heard of her since until last week, when we read of the 'headless woman' murder."

Odum announced he intended to start for Chicago at once and try to induce the girl to return to Shreveport with him.

Odum's visit to Chicago as one of the long procession of southwesterners that "June's" arrest in Chicago has brought to this city was heralded last night by a telegram received by the Chicago police. This read:

"By all means hold Cox woman until the arrival of her stepfather for further identification." Like a wire received Friday night, it was signed by H. B. Terrell, chief of police of Texarkana.

"June" Appears Elated.

"June" appeared to be highly elated at the seeming perplexity of the Texarkana officials. When told of the receipt of the latest telegram she laughed and remarked:

"Evidently one official does not believe the other in that town."

The procession from Texarkana to the South Clark street police station continued last night with the arrival of J. I. Wheeler, assistant district attorney of Bowie county. He had left Texarkana hot on the trail of Sheriff J. D. Baker, who arrived in Chicago Friday night, just in time to prevent "June" from being handed over to a "phony" sheriff.

Wheeler's arrival served to clear up somewhat the mystery as to the "phony" sheriff. The prosecutor brought with him warrants for the arrest of Tony Anderson, brother of Melvin Anderson, supposed to be the leader of the Texarkana whisky robbers, for Thomas S. Edwards Jr., brother-in-law of "June," for Mrs. Grace Farley of 621 Woodland Park and for "June" herself. All are charged with conspiracy to commit bribery.

The Texarkana officials' theory is that Anderson was the man who impersonated Sheriff Baker on Friday and that Edwards was the man who accompanied the "phony" sheriff to the South Clark street station. Mrs. Farley is said to have been the woman who induced "June" to leave Texarkana to avoid testifying against the whisky robbers. Mrs. Farley is the wife of a Chicago saloonkeeper who was questioned by the Chicago police in connection with the daylight holdup of Rector's restaurant, a few years ago.

Drop Habeas Corpus.

P. S. Roe, the attorney who sought to obtain a writ of habeas corpus for "June," dropped his efforts yesterday when assured that her deposition would be accepted. When Wheeler told him that it would not be he announced he would ask for a writ again.

The gradual clearing up of the tangle still leaves the "headless woman" murder mystery unexplained, but there is apparently no longer any Chicago interest in this crime. The Texarkana officials announce that they will take a new effort to establish the identity of the murder victim.

MARITAL MARTIAL

Evanston Dramatist Enters Married and Naval Career at Same Time.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Edwin Hinsdell

A marital and a martial achievement, all in one week, is accorded Oliver Edwin Hinsdell, dramatic instructor in the school of oratory of Northwestern university. He was married yesterday at "a little quiet family affair" to Miss Glenn Irwin McIntyre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald J. McIntyre of Joliet. And Hinsdell, who has trod the proscenium lumber for some years, is soon to pace the deck of a U-chaser, for he enlisted on Monday in the naval reserve school at the municipal pier.

The couple have been friends from early years. Mrs. Hinsdell attended Miss Lorington's school in Chicago and later Ferry hall at Lake Forest. Mr. Hinsdell was a student at Northwestern university when he commenced his histrionic career. After six years of dramatic work in this country and in England he returned to the Evanston university as a professor of oratory and dramatics.

1 CENT FOR EHLE IN LIBEL SUIT AGAINST TRIBUNE

Jury Sustains Newspaper Charge That He Tried to Blackmail.

One cent damages was the verdict awarded Attorney Louis C. Ehle yesterday by a jury of twelve men in Judge David's branch of the Superior court in his suit brought to recover $100,000 from THE TRIBUNE.

Attorney Ehle, who has an office at 111 West Monroe street and lives at 1360 East Forty-ninth street, claimed his reputation had been injured by reason of an article published in THE TRIBUNE Dec. 24, 1915.

The publication complained of, according to the evidence, charged that Attorney Ehle had attempted to blackmail the Chicago meat packers, and that he (Ehle) had been indicted on a charge of forgery brought by the Fort Dearborn National bank.

Blackmail Is Sustained.

In two special findings accompanying the verdict, which required but a brief time to reach, the jurors stated Attorney Ehle did try to blackmail the meat packers and that THE TRIBUNE had justifiable motives for the publication of that part of the article complained of by Ehle.

The two special findings by the jury were in answer to the two interrogatories submitted to them, which were:

First—Did Ehle attempt to blackmail the packers?

Second—did THE TRIBUNE publish that charge with good motives and for justifiable ends?

Precedent Is Established.

Judge David established a precedent in ruling upon the so-called forgery charge. He held that he would not permit THE TRIBUNE, the defendant, to show that Attorney Ehle, the plaintiff, had been indicted for forgery, because it had been stipulated by counsel that the forgery indictment had been disposed of favorably to the plaintiff, Ehle, at the time of the publication of the article.

The evidence showed that Ehle was formerly an employé of the law firm of Albert H. and Henry Veeder, attorneys for Swift & Co.; that following his leaving that firm he took office room with the late Judge Arba N. Waterman and Carleton Hudson-Betts; that he had a telephone conversation with Attorney Henry Veeder in which he told Mr. Veeder that he had learned sufficient things while in his (Veeder's) employ to send him and his clients to Fort Leavenworth, and that he (Ehle) wished Mr. Veeder to come and take these matters up with his (Ehle's) attorneys.

Suit Against Packers.

The evidence brought out disclosed that following this a creditors' bill was filed on behalf of Judge Waterman against the packers in which allegations were made that the packers had placed certain cotton oil mill properties in Mr. Ehle's name for the purpose of evading certain anti-trust laws.

Attorney Weymouth Kirkland of the law firm of Shepard, McCormick, Thomason, Kirkland and Patterson, counsel for THE TRIBUNE, in the examination of Ben Kendall, a newspaper reporter, brought from the witness (Kendall) the statement that Ehle had told him that he had the goods on the packers and that he (Ehle) expected them to take care of him the rest of his life.

Carleton Hudson-Betts, who has an office with Ehle and who was present in court throughout the trial, was not called as a witness.

BRIDAL SCENES PRESERVED FOR GOLDEN WEDDING

Movie Camera Catches Action at Lambert-Carl Nuptials.

On June 15, 1968, when there is no Germany on the map, Mrs. Lloyd Carl, a bride of today, will gather her children and grandchildren about her to witness the wedding which took place fifty years previously. It will be unnecessary to tell how the bride was dressed. The guests at this golden wedding anniversary will gaze upon the actual wedding itself. They will see the United States colors waving gently, as the smiling bride (explained in the subtitle to be Miss Gertrude Lambert) moves to the altar which is banked with American flags.

Because the father of the bride, T. B. Lambert, president of the American Association of Engineers, looked into the kaiserless future, wishing that his great-grandchildren could see a wedding colored with patriotism, the wedding of his daughter, last night was registered upon a moving picture film.

Wedding Scene Enreeled.

Miss Gertrude Lambert, 3338 Walnut street, was the star, with Lloyd Carl playing the triumphant lover's role. The heroine's father entered as movie fathers rarely do—in the part of aid rather than stumbling block in the harrassed young man's path.

T. B. Lambert, as producer of the film, chose to stage his daughter's wedding in the fraternity room of the Great Northern hotel. The setting was American to the last detail, from the flag draped ceiling to the huge wedding cake of red, white and blue. The Rev. Abel White, pastor of the Oak Park Methodist Episcopal church, played the part of the benign clergyman.

Bride's Father an Inventor.

Lloyd Carl, groom, who is employed by Lybrand, Ross Bros. & Montgomery as an expert accountant, is from New Haven, Mich. The bride is a graduate of the Austin High school.

T. B. Lambert, who is building and cable engineer of the Chicago Telephone company, is engaged in a patriotic enterprise, having completed for the government an invention by which 1,000 words per minute can be sent wireless without any danger of interception by the enemy.

Bank Cashier Arrested on Charge of Extortion

Waterloo, Ia., June 15.—O. R. Powell, cashier of the Blaisdell, N. D., State bank, is held here, charged with making extortion threats. It is said the arrest of Powell is the initial move in the solution of a triangular certificate robbery involving more than $14,000.

Developments brought to light today indicate that Powell threatened Dr. Powers, president of a bank here, with prosecution unless a certificate for $5,000, cashed by the bank, was produced within ten days.

PEDDLER CAR CHARGES TOO HIGH.

Washington, D. C., June 15.—Charges on packing house products, fresh meats, and other commodities in peddler cars from Chicago to Illinois and Indiana points were today found unreasonable by the interstate commerce commission.

CHICAGO'S BOYS TAKING HONORS IN HARVARD, 1918

Many Jobs Fall on James W. Angell When Classmates Go to War.

Cambridge, Mass., June 15.—Chicago boys are prominently represented in the class of 1918 at Harvard, which drifts into graduate-land the coming week. From the point of being in the thick of everything here, James W. Angell is the man of the hour.

This Chicago youth, not yet 20, is chairman of the class day committee. In normal times the head of this body does little else than sign his name to a few documents and look dignified. Angell is doing this now and a hundred more other things.

Army Takes Aids.

He is doing the work of the seven committeemen, and the university authorities have appointed him in addition undergraduate marshal for commencement. As chairman of the class day committee he is scheduled also to head 1918 with the acting marshal on Sunday and class day. But the three class marshals are in service, and it looks as if Angell has been tapped for the double service post. He has been hustling around trying to obtain an orator for the class tree exercises, and after a month of telegraphing and letter writing, discovered that Alfred Putnam, the odist, is in France, and his part is to be abandoned.

The university authorities have now designated Angell to deliver a commencement part, and he hopes that his troubles are over for the moment, although they are really just commencing with the start of commencement week.

Lieut. Thacher Nelson, U. S. R. of Chicago, is with the pioneer artillery in South Carolina, but has found time to compose the class day poem, which will be delivered for him on Tuesday by Ralph G. Brown of New York.

Eight War Crosses.

Maxwell A. Hawkins, a member of the class day committee, is studying aviation. The class has an honor roll of four men and boasts of eight holders of the croix de guerre, one of whom is Henry D. Jordan of Chicago.

Among the other Chicago men entered with the class of 1918 are Ralph Horween, an ensign of the U. S. S. Connecticut; Lieut. Frank O. Magie Jr., aid to Brig. Gen. Kennon; Thomas H. Fisher; William Burry Jr., Hamilton Montgomery, and Charles T. Prindeville.

Lieut. Nelson is one of the engaged men, of whom there are nearly fifty, and Horace H. Silliman of Roxbury, of the ordnance department, has plighted his troth to Miss Bernice E. Schmidt of Chicago, a senior at Wellseley college.

Angell lives at 1314 East Fifty-eighth street; Nelson, Hubbard Woods; Hawkins, 3020 Sheridan road; Magie, Winnetka; Jordan, 5603 Kenwood avenue; Horween, 544 Fullerton parkway; Fisher, 1313 North State street; Burry, 1432 Astor street; Montgomery, 5548 Woodlawn drive, and Prindeville, 3935 Lake Park avenue.

Foes of Nonpartisan League Give 'Other Side' of Program; Townley Is Attacked as 'Czar'

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Fargo, N. D., June 15.—[Special.]—The two field marshals of the opposition to the Farmers' Nonpartisan league are J. D. (Jerry) Bacon of Grand Forks and Tom Parker Junkin. Both have watched the league from the time it was first launched in North Dakota and they furnish the ammunition for the anti-leaguers. The foremost foe of the league in North Dakota has been the Grand Forks Herald, which Bacon owns and which Junkin formerly edited.

Junkin now has headquarters at St. Paul, where he runs a publicity service, dealing mainly with anti-league publicity. Inasmuch as he thinks like Bacon and talks like Bacon, arch enemy of the farmers' movement, Mr. Junkin was nominated to present the arguments raised against the movement.

"I oppose the league," Mr. Junkin said, "because it is not a farmers' movement and there is no such thing as a nonpartisan league—and it is so utterly wrong there is nothing right about it.

Borders on Bigotry.

"Not one per cent of the army of men who are living on the fat of the land at the expense of the farmers they are tricking ever owned a farm. And not 10 per cent of that one per cent ever made a success at farming. If any of them tried the game they made abject failures. Townley is the kingpin of them all in this respect and he ended in bankruptcy court.

"In the second place, it is not a nonpartisan league for the reason it is the most partisan thing ever promulgated and is so strongly partisan, in fact, that it borders on bigotry. The men who have been induced to part with their $16 membership fees are led to believe that all men are their enemies who do not bear the brand of Townley.

Cites North Dakota Case.

"That Townley's great aim is to impose on the states in which he may secure political control—and of the nation if he can—a Socialist régime bordering on Bolshevism, was made clear by what he attempted to do in North Dakota in the 1917 legislature.

"With a governor who obeyed; with a house of representatives in which eighty-three of the 113 members had signed an agreement to abide by the will of the majority of a secret caucus which he instituted, and with a following in the senate lacking but four votes of a majority, also subservient to the secret caucus, Townley and his Socialist henchmen tore into shreds the constitution of the state. He attempted, by legislative enactment, and without having in any way consulted the people of the state on constitutional revision, to replace it with a document so completely socialistic in every particular that the veriest novice in political economy should have seen the purpose at once.

Planned Big Machine.

"Among the startling things Townley proposed was to absolutely remove the bonded debt limit of the state, the counties, townships, and districts to enable them to engage in any and all kinds of public utilities and businesses.

"He proposed to remove all protection from about the university and school funds, amounting to some $60,000,000 accumulated in the lands granted by the federal government for the establishment and maintenance of the public schools and universities of the state, and thus open the way to use this fund for socialistic experimental enterprises. This would provide for the creation of the most gigantic political machine ever dreamed of.

"With the nation on the verge of war the provision for state militia was emasculated to permit of 'conscientious scruples' being made a constitutional objection to military service.

"Is Townley disloyal—or has he been disloyal—to the government? Who can read another man's heart? I cannot and therefore I can only draw my own conclusions from what I know of the history of the man and what I have heard him say, and the things that have been printed in his own publications and literature as 'official.'

"I heard him say, at Devils Lake, N. D., on registration day, June 5, 1917, when the youth of the nation were called on by President Wilson to register for the first army draft of the war:

"'The nation demands that you give yourselves and your sons and your brothers and your husbands and your sweethearts to be taken across the seas and spill their life's blood on the fields of Europe and then comes to you and asks you to subscribe for the Liberty bonds to pay for the expenses of the war. This is the injustice of the war and the manner in which officials of the administration are carrying it into effect.'

"At Williston, N. D., on the following day I heard him say:

"'The flower of the young manhood of this nation is going across the water to bleed, as we are told, for the honor of the country, but it needs some effort for me to believe that these young men are going to fight for the freedom of democracy.

"'I believe and fear they are going to bleed for the profits of the damned pirates who profit from our food and our products. The government stands most of the time crying for the young to come to war. I demand that the United States shall instantly take charge of the transportation of the food and products of the farm before the flower of the manhood of this nation is sent across the water.'

Other Acts Reviewed.

"I heard him say, with a sneer, when called to time for an attack on a most patriotic citizen who had given his son to the service of his country:

"'Yes, I know, many men will sell their sons for a price.'

"I know that Townley was in sympathy with the men who plotted the famous People's council sedition.

"I know that Townley was responsible for the infamous La Follette meetings in St. Paul in September, 1917.

"And having heard and knowing all of these things, I will not say that Townley is or is not disloyal to his country."

The design for the Distinguished Service cross shown in the rotogravure section of today's TRIBUNE has been discarded by the government and a new model accepted. The information printed with it also is incorrect as to fact. The revised design for the cross was pictured in THE TRIBUNE of June 6, with a telegraphed story from Washington stating that the award was to be made "to any person who, while serving in any capacity with the army, shall hereafter distinguish himself or herself, or who, since April 6, 1917, has distinguished himself or herself by extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against an armed enemy of the United States." The Distinguished Service medal is awarded for "exceptionally meritorious service to the government in a duty of great responsibility in time of war or in connection with armed military operations against an armed enemy of the United States."

The design shown in the rotogravure section was sent out by the committee on public information, but the revised design was received when it was mechanically impossible to make the change. Owing to the character of the work in producing the rotogravure section it must go to press several weeks ahead of the date of issue.

CHICAGO TO SEE WAR FRONT FIRE ON THE FOURTH

In every community of Chicago this coming Fourth of July there will be patriotic meetings under the direction of the State Council of Defense. There will be two notable night fireworks displays in this city—one at the Cubs park on the north side and the other in Comiskey park on the south side, both under the direction of Charles R. Macloon, who has handled nearly all the pyrotechnical shows given in Chicago in recent years.

There will be reproductions of the star shells now used to illuminate the European battle fields, there'll be a huge moving "tank" in fireworks, a mammoth American flag in red, white, and blue will be burned, and a portrait of President Wilson in lines of fire will be shown.

Marking Illinois centennial year the state flag will be reproduced and a portrait of Gov. Lowden will be shown in fireworks. The heavens will be made brilliant with shells bursting into every color of the rainbow, there will be scores of special designs and devices and plenty of comics for the children.

This year the War Welfare fund of the Knights of Columbus participates in the receipts from reserved box seats.

BARGAIN FIENDS IN BIG JAM AT 'ELEPHANT' SALE

Police Forced to Close the Doors; Get $1,000 for Children's Hospital.

Policemen and policewomen were required to handle the crowds attending the advance "White Elephant" rummage sale yesterday at the old Calumet club. For an hour before the doors were opened the bargain hunters, including old clothes' men and "cullud ladies" in great numbers, waited patiently on the sidewalk.

When the door swung open patience was at an end and every one tried to be first to enter. Women with babies in their arms and others clutching empty suitcases, in which to carry away their purchases, jostled each other, determined to get first chance at the castoff finery.

Police Close the Doors.

Before all the crowd had succeeded in paying the admission fee of 10 cents and entering, policemen closed the doors, announcing the rooms were full and that those outside must wait a while.

Inside there was great commotion and the society women who were the sales force were kept busy waiting upon their eager customers. The hats, frocks, blouses, shoes, and other summer habiliments were sold rapidly. Soon after noon the entire stock was gone. The sale brought $1,000 for the Children's Memorial hospital.

Those Active in the Sale.

Mrs. Frederick W. Upham, Miss Martha Wilson, and Mrs. J. T. Harahan assisted in managing the crowds, and Mrs. Harry H. Shearson, Mrs. Carleton Holdredge, Mrs. Benjamin F. Taylor, Mrs. John E. May, Mrs. L. W. Lytton, and Mrs. Arthur B. Sawyer sold the wearing apparel.

Mrs. Oscar Johnson, Mrs. Alan C. Dixon, Mrs. W. W. Dixon, Miss Helen Gurley, Miss Alice Voight, and Miss Martha Winslow were in charge of the hat and shoe room, and Mrs. Augustus K. Maxwell and Mrs. Charles R. Crane II. sold golf sticks, tennis rackets, parasols, etc.

Checked Their Parcels.

Mrs. D. Mark Cummings and a policewoman who stood at the exit had the job of examining each purchaser's parcels and of making sure no article without the red seal "Sold" pasted upon it was taken out. They also had to watch closely so that the disappointed persons who were unable to enter at the front door did not slip through the side entrance.

KILLS HIMSELF AS HE BROODS ON BOY'S DEATH

John H. Latky, a garage owner at 2646 Lawrence avenue, shot and killed himself yesterday in a fit of depression over having run down and killed Joseph Doyle, 11 years old, of 7040 Claremont avenue.

Latky's friends said he had been brooding over the memory of the accident in which the boy was crushed to death under the wheels of Latky's automobile on June 1.

The garage man had been exonerated by a coroner's jury of any blame in connection with the death of the boy, but it is said he suffered keenly under the denunciations of the boy's parents. It is said by the police the parents refused to accept the testimony of witnesses that Latky was in no wise to blame.

Latky was at Lawrence avenue and Whipple street on his way to work yesterday morning when he was seen to pause, draw his revolver, and shoot himself. Samuel Nathan of 3497 North Troy street, a street car conductor, saw the act and reported it to the Irving Park police.

CRIME'S SHADOW LIFTED; SOLDIER HAS HAPPY DAY

Allen Thomson Relieved of the Charge of Murder.

Freedom from a murder charge which has been hanging over him for nearly four years, a corporal's job in the army, and the hand of the girl he loves. These are three things that came to Allen Thomson, 1300 Roscoe street, on Thursday, June 13, and the thirteenth, needless to say, is henceforth a lucky day to him.

On the morning of Aug. 12, 1914, Edward Amory, patent attorney in the People's Gas building, was found strangled to death in his office, and Thomson, who was Amory's office boy, was held for the crime.

The case has dragged on ever since. Thomson's fiancée, Miss Emily Schellenberg, 2230 Bissel street, has been waiting all the while for her sweetheart to clear himself. Meanwhile Thomson, who was out on bail, had been drafted. He is a member of Company L, Three Hundred and Forty-fourth infantry, at Camp Grant, Rockford.

His Happy Day.

Last Thursday the case against Thomson was nolle prossed by State's Attorney Hoyne. The same day Thomson was made a corporal at Camp Grant, where he will be in charge of the training of recruits, and Miss Schellenberg—but that's a story that tells itself.

The Amory-Thomson case attracted considerable attention at the time. Thomson was held for the crime by a "shoemaster" coroner's jury and was subsequently indicted. It was thought at first that certain spots on his clothing were blood stains. This was later proved to be false. Thomson, however, increased the element of mystery by offering an "untraceable alibi."

Girl Explains Scratches.

Miss Schellenberg, his fiancé, also figured in the case, testifying that certain scratches on Thomson's face, which had been regarded by the police as evidence, had been made by herself and a girl friend in a playful scuffle.

Alfred O. Erickson, attorney for Thomson, stated yesterday that he thought the case against his client had been one of police persecution.

Federal Sleuths to Meet City Cops on Diamond

Operatives of the department of justice and police of the Marquette station will meet in a baseball game in Grant park this morning at 11:30 o'clock. The teams are made up as follows:

LABORER WINS $25.92.

The suit brought in the Municipal court against Swift & Co. and the Omaha Packing company by Max Roth has been dismissed by agreement. The packers paid over the $25.92 asked by the plaintiff. The money was the difference of 4½ cents increase an hour which the plaintiff became entitled to under the award rendered by Judge Alschuler on April 1, 1918, it was contended.

GUNNERS' BAND FEASTS SPARTA WITH ITS TUNES

Sparta, Wis., June 15.—[Special.]—The band of the Three Hundred and Thirty-first field artillery has been a busy organization since arriving at Camp Robinson. It played for the dance given to the officers by the citizens of Sparta at the Sidney hotel, and will play as an orchestra at the Armory tonight for the dance to be given by the citizens for the non-coms and enlisted men of the brigade.

The band played at Wilton, Wis., Friday, going down in automobiles to be present at the flag raising ceremonies in that town. All these engagements are in addition to playing a concert each night and Sunday afternoon at the bandstand of the camp.

William Laurier, band leader of the Three Hundred and Thirty-first, has been receiving letters from all over the country from musicians wishing to join his organization, which is considered the best in the brigade.

Highland Park Girl Found Tied, Gagged, Unconscious

Frieda August, 23 years old, living at 425 Hazel avenue, Highland Park, was found bound, gagged, and unconscious in some shrubbery near Sheridan road and Elm place early yesterday morning. She was out walking when a man suddenly appeared from behind a tree and advanced toward her, she said. She lost consciousness and did not revive until found later in the morning, she said. Her condition is not serious. She gave the police a part description of the man. She had seen him once before in the Highland Park postoffice, about a week ago, when he tried to accost her, she said.

Pledge Loyalty to Wilson and Poincare of France

Pledges of loyalty and support to France were cabled to President Poincare of the French republic and a telegram of loyalty to the American flag and allegiance to the cause of America were telegraphed to President Wilson by the Association Generale Des Alsaciens-Lorrains D'Amerique, at a banquet in the Hotel La Salle last night. The banquet was in honor of Daniel Blumenthal, French high commissioner to America, with M. Justin Godart, former secretary of war for France, as a co-guest.

CAMP GRANT MAY SEND ARTILLERY STUDENTS SOUTH

Plans Under Way to Make Camp Exclusively for Infantry.

Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., June 15.—[Special.]—Although official orders have not yet been received from Washington, authorities in Camp Grant are preparing to bring artillery training in the cantonment to a close. Announcement from the war department that in the future artillery training will be concentrated in four national army camps indicates to officers here that after the Eighty-sixth division leaves for overseas service Camp Grant will be used exclusively as an infantry training station.

It is believed here that all officer candidates in the fourth training camp battery will be transferred to Camp Taylor, Ky., within the coming week and will complete their race for commissions there. It is expected that 2,000 artillery candidates will make up the centralized training camp at Taylor, where artillery officers will be turned out wholesale in the future.

Program for Luncheon.

Members of the Chicago Association of Commerce have a military treat in store in the "firing line" program planned for the Wednesday luncheon in the Hotel La Salle. Capt. Sidney B. Minch of the Connaught rangers will address the association upon the "spirit of the bayonet." Capt. Minch has made some 50,000 selective soldiers see red through his strenuous training with the cold steel in camp.

Sergt. Barrett, also of the British mission, will be present at the luncheon and will aid his captain in a graphic bayonet demonstration. Capt. R. J. Lathrop, senior American instructor in bayonet training, is another member of the party. He will tell of the fighting spirit developed in camp through the medium of athletics.

Few Men Take Furlough.

Only 1,200 of the 40,000 men in camp found it possible to take advantage of the week end leave privilege today as a result of the recently authorized increase in passenger rates.

To enjoy the military fare reduction offered by the war department men must present official ten day furloughs and officers must present official leave grants. The week end pass system authorized in Camp Grant does not give the men a right to travel on reduced fares.

HOOVER CLOSES FLOUR MILL.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 15.—The Morris City Flour mill at Morris, Minn., and an elevator adjoining, and an elevator at Chokio, Minn., have been ordered closed at once by Herbert Hoover for violating the food administration's rules, it was announced here today.

POLICE UNFOLD NEW I. W. W. FACTS IN ORGY OF RUIN

Sabotage, the burning of railroad shops, strikes, anti-conscription activities, and opposition to "wobblies" taking out citizenship papers, all figured in the I. W. W. trial before Judge Landis yesterday. It is expected that two more days will suffice to complete the government's case.

Several policemen from Butte told of stopping an anti-registration parade on June 5 of last year, the seizing of inflammatory circulars, and a red flag which John Korpi, named as an instigator of the parade, tried to conceal under his coat when arrested.

Documents were also offered to prove that Korpi was a member of the I. W. W. Patrolman Patrick Howe, who arrested Korpi, said "A lady came up and slapped me in the face." He also said she used unlady-like language.

E. W. Byrne, agent of the bureau of investigation, told of finding incendiary documents on the person of Peter Kirkenen when he arrested him. Kirkenen was indicted as a member of the I. W. W., but is not on trial, his case having been continued because of an alleged physical and mental breakdown.

Charles Ashleigh, former Chicago newspaper reporter, and later "press agent" for the I. W. W., figured in the evidence also as a spreader of "wobbly" propaganda. A letter was read from Sam Scarlett, an I. W. W. member, to Vincent St. John.

Mount Greenwood Goes Dry; 7 Saloons Closed

Mount Greenwood village, oasis at the entrance to Mount Greenwood and Mount Olivet cemeteries, went dry last night as result of the action of the village board. Licenses of seven saloons were revoked and no liquor will be sold in the village hereafter.

Activity of citizens with reforming tendencies and jealousies among the saloonkeepers were responsible for the village board action.

A week ago the citizens purchased liquor in three of the saloons on Sunday. They took their evidence to county officials and the village board was notified that the three saloons must be closed. Then the proprietors of these saloons got busy and decided to make the town entirely dry. They got evidence against the other four dram shops and last night when the village board met it was decided to make a clean sweep and so the licenses of all seven saloons were revoked.

Boy Artist Flees Milwaukee Because It's "Too German"

Delbert Cumming, 14 year old artist and kaiser hater, who says Milwaukee was "too German" to suit his tastes, walked into the South Clark street police station last night and gave himself up as a runaway. He told the police that he had left the home of his stepfather, Arberg Lehman, at 948 National avenue on June 9. He exhibited to the police a number of cartoons he had drawn of the kaiser. He was sent to the Juvenile home, where he will be held until a reply is received to a message sent to his stepfather.

PLATINUM TABOO FOR PRIVATE USE LIKELY TO COME

Government May Commandeer the Metal Because of Its Needs.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 15.—[Special.]—To cope with a new type of slacker who is injuring the country's cause in war, the government proposes to commandeer a major portion of the platinum supply in the nation.

The new slacker, according to Van H. Manning, director of the bureau of mines, is the man or woman who buys or encourages the purchase of platinum jewelry.

The reason the government must take drastic action is that the country is and for many years will be desperately in need of platinum in its industrial work.

Would Stop Platinum Jewelry.

"A plan proposed by the federal officials," the bureau of mines announced today, "would stop the use of platinum in jewelry, not only for the war, but for all time.

"In an effort to fill the immediate pressing needs of the government in its war program the war industries' board has ordered that 75 per cent of the stock of platinum in the hands of manufacturing jewelers be commandeered and also the complete stock held by refiners, importers, and dealers; but this, it is said, will only fill a small gap, and that temporarily.

Patriotic Appeals Fail.

"It has been hoped by federal officials and chemists throughout the country who understand the seriousness of the situation that the whims of fashion might yield to national needs and that purchasers of jewelry would demand gold and silver or a white alloy, and so release platinum for its highest use, but the results have been disappointing."

Guyon Quits Dance Chiefs Who Snub Social Workers

J. Louis Guyon, implacable enemy of the fox trot, one step and other dances which he characterizes as immoral, tendered his resignation to the International Association of Masters of Dancing yesterday, which concluded its annual convention at Princess hall, 1519 West Madison street. The primary reason for his action, Prof. Guyon said, was due to the refusal of the dancing masters to receive a delegation of Chicago social workers, who wished to make an appeal in behalf of clean dancing. Among the women named are Jane Addams, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Miss Harriet Vittum and Miss Jessie Binford.

WILSON THREATENER HELD.

Bernard B. Ringwald, wealthy west side cabinetmaker, waived examination before Lewis F. Mason, United States commissioner, yesterday, and was held for trial under $5,000 bond. Ringwald, who lives at 4537 Washington boulevard, was arrested several weeks ago under the espionage act on charge of making threats against the life of President Wilson.

JUSTICE TO HALT HER STEADY HAND FOR BALL GAME

Diamond Battle Between Judges and Lawyers June 29.

Superior, County, Circuit, Probate, and Municipal courts will be closed Saturday afternoon, June 29, and judges, lawyers, and clerks will engage in, or witness, the greatest baseball contest in the history of the legal world—i. e., the game for the championship of Chicago, to be contested for by judges and lawyers.

Signs announcing that there would be no court have been placed in the respective courts, together with the suggestion that tickets may be had from the clerk of the court for 50 cents apiece, the proceeds to go to THE TRIBUNE fund for tobacco for the boys already across the seas.

Grenade Throwers, Too.

An additional feature that bears great promise has been provided for. Judges who are members of the home guard will appear in uniform to engage in a grenade throwing contest, showing the prowess they have gained by their home guard drill. The grenades, as well as any other needed accoutrement, have been offered for the game by Wilson & Co.'s sporting store.

Judge Joseph Sabath announced yesterday that he would give a prize, the nature of which is yet to be divulged, to the person who sells the greatest number of tickets for the event.

Anton Cermak, chief bailiff of the Municipal court, said he would personally oversee a canvass of all of the buildings of the loop to make certain that every legal figure bought a ticket. The Bailiffs' Benevolent association has volunteered to pay for all posters and advertising matter.

Soldiers Send Thanks.

Grateful acknowledgments for smokes that have come from United States soldiers in France are causing former givers to send in more contributions. Postals that have been received from the soldiers prove that the packages of tobacco and cigarets are reaching the men and that they are greatly appreciated.

One of the contributors who sent in $12 nearly a year ago has received a number of postals from France and has sent in another check for a similar amount, which represents $1 a month.

WAR STAMP TAG DAY FIXED FOR CHICAGO, JUNE 28

Millions Throughout Nation to Assemble in Pledging Meetings.

Final plans are being put into shape in Illinois as well as in every state in the union for the greatest patriotic outpouring of people ever held on earth in a single day. This will be the gathering of the people of the United States into meetings June 28, National War Savings Stamp day, in response to the proclamation of President Wilson.

All over the United States the people of the nation, except those in the largest cities, will assemble in the tens of thousands of schoolhouses to pledge their loyalty to the country and their financial support to the war.

Millions to Sign Pledges.

Thousands of speakers will address them and millions of pledges will be signed, all at the same time. It is expected by the national administration that the entire $2,000,000,000 which the country is planning to raise by the sale of war savings stamps will be pledged on that day.

In every county in Illinois except Cook these school meetings will be held. The smaller communities have had their loyalty aroused to a high pitch and not a doubt remains in the minds of Martin A. Ryerson and other officials of the war savings committee for Illinois that Illinois will subscribe for its quota.

Tag Day in Chicago.

Chicago, however, faces a different problem. It is impossible to gather the 2,500,000 people here together in the schoolhouses, so an entirely different plan had to be devised. The campaign here has been turned over to the women and June 28 will be a tag day.

Owing to the impossibility of reaching all the people by a tag day, however, arrangements have been made to have the 1,800 mail carriers of the city carry the tags for a week before June 28 and give them to each purchaser of a $5 war savings stamp. The tags are to be worn June 28.

Stamps for Each Person.

It is the desire of the Cook county committee, of which Lloyd D. Waddell is the head, to have every resident of Chicago, men, women, and children, purchase at least one of the $5 war savings stamps on June 28, or ten days immediately preceding it.

It is further desired, in order that the sales may be as large as possible, that all who can do so buy five, ten, twenty, or up to 200 of the stamps on that day.

This latter feature is to be known as the "big money" drive. The thrift stamp is to be forgotten for a week. Illinois is low in the list of states in per capita purchases of the stamps, and June is relied on to bring it closer to the top.

EVANSTON CITY BEACH OPENS.

About a dozen persons attended the opening of the municipal beach at the foot of Lincoln street in Evanston yesterday. Improvements costing $2,500 have been made at the beach since it closed last fall.

GET YOUR HANKY READY, MATE; IT'S A SAD, SAD TALE

Tears and Beer Flow Sobbingly Through Pitiful Yarn.

It was pitiful.

One shudders when women weep, but when strong men, faces haggard in some poignant sorrow, trudge behind the cortége of death, tears coursing their cheeks—well, it's no joke.

Funerals have been averaging one a day in Hammond and Indiana Harbor, Ind., for a week or more since these towns went dry. Slow moving processions wending their silent and sorrowful way from West Hammond, Ill., which still is wet and has fifty saloons and is building a new city hall with the proceeds.

Dying at High Speed.

"It begins to look," said the chief of police of Indiana Harbor, "as if most of the population of West Hammond must be dying off. It seems strange, though, they should feel a honin' to be buried in Indiana Harbor."

Even as he spoke along came another funeral. With bowed head the driver of the hearse sat as one who takes a particular interest in his art. Dolefully the pallbearers plopped their feet along the dusty pavement, eyes downcast, and sad of feature as ravens. Then came the friends of the late lamented. They took it very hard.

"Leave me think," observed the chief, as he spat reflectively and hooked his thumb in his armhole. "There seems to be mostly men in that sad lookin' bunch of crows."

Story Grows Sadder.

That's right. Mostly men. All men, in fact. Yet they were sad. A regiment of women could have mourned no more emphatically. It was a parade of the lugubrious blues. The chief rubbed his chin.

"That's too bad," he said. "I'll have to inquire into the antecedents and general obfuscation of the deceased."

Meets the Late Lamented.

He beckoned to the grieved hearse driver. "Pull up," he said. "I'd admire to meet the late lamented if you don't mind."

A worried grin overspread the chops of the driver, but he drew rein. The mourners slanted cautiously from under reddened lids and prepared to make a quick, silent sneak. The chief opened the hearse door. The mourners broke and fled.

The hearse was loaded with beer.

BURGLAR BEATS SLEEPING WOMAN AND TAKES RINGS

Wife of Hotel Planters Manager Is Victim of Attack.

Mrs. John P. Harding, 1133 North Shore avenue, is slowly recovering from a beating administered by a burglar, who entered the Harding home at about 10:40 Friday night and tried to force her to tell where money and valuables were hidden.

John P. Harding, her husband, who is manager of the Planters' hotel, was awake in his room just across the hall from where Mrs. Harding was sleeping with her 18 month old grandchild. Martin, the 18 year old son, was in the living room in front, not fifteen feet away, and the maid was in her room, just back of Mrs. Harding's room.

The burglar gained entrance to the apartment by forcing the window of the daughter's, Edith's, room, while she was at the theater. He immediately went into Mrs. Harding's room, discovered her sleeping, and struck her with his fist over the eye, stunning her.

She was dazed for a minute, but recovered and started to scream, whereupon the burglar choked her almost into insensibility and took her wedding ring from her finger. The he went across to Mr. Harding's room.

Harding had heard the scream, but thought it was his grandchild crying. He saw a hand pushing the door open and called, "Is that you, Mart?"

The door was quickly slammed and the burglar bolted, snatching a dinner ring belonging to Miss Harding on his way out.

SUES TO MAKE FATHER OF WIFE'S SON "SWEAT"

The motive which actuated Henry Siegerdt, 2232 West Superior street, to institute habeas corpus proceedings against Robert F. Davey, a city fireman, 2323 Diversey boulevard, in order to gain the custody of Robert Block, the three year old son of Mrs. Siegerdt, was to make the father of the child, H. C. Eggleston, 2312 North Hamlin avenue, "sweat," according to the testimony of Davey before Judge Johnston yesterday.

The boy, who was born before the mother's marriage to Siegerdt, has been living with Mr. and Mrs. Davey for three years, since it was two weeks old. Mrs. Siegardt says the father of the child took it to their home and that she was induced to sign papers consenting to its adoption while she was ill and did not know what the documents were.

Siegerdt said he would waive all claims against Eggleston and take steps to adopt the child himself, if he were given the custody. He said he wanted the child, so that his wife would stop worrying. The case was continued until Monday.

Oak Park to Have Its Own Censors of Films

Oak Park will for the present do its own movie censoring, it was announced yesterday in a letter by Trustee G. W. Hales of the suburb to Ald. George M. Maypole, sponsor of the proposed Chicago ordinance providing a plan whereby the present plan of censorship will be superseded. It is explained that Oak Park takes its action because the censorship situation is somewhat jumbled up by the suspension of Deputy Funkhouser. Heretofore Oak Park has accepted the Chicago rulings.

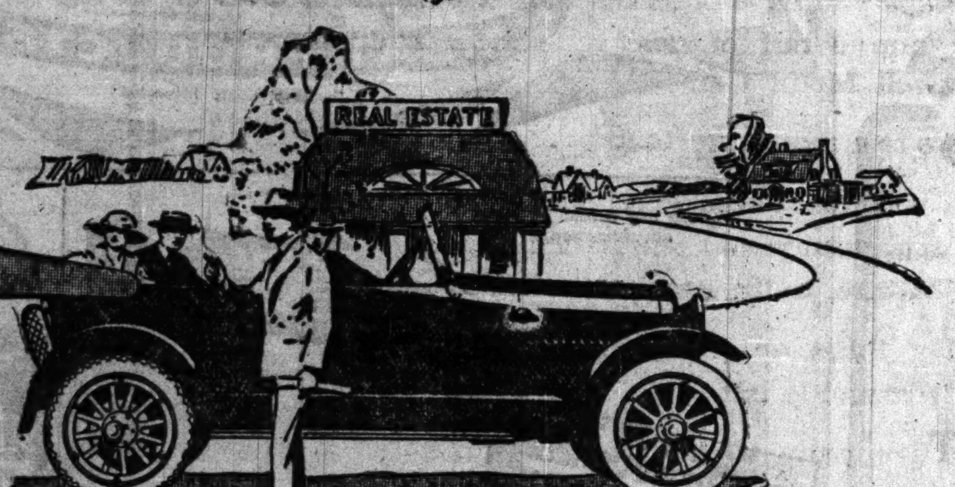
PAIGE
The Most Beautiful Car in America



Out There
After months of hibernating, it is a great privilege to hike for the "open" when the first days of summer arrive. That is the season when every normal family wants to forget sweltering cities, party manners and all the other features of unnatural living. A tiny cottage with a ten foot garden begins to look mighty interesting—for the grass is actually green, the air is pure, and there are wonderful possibilities for a hammock and a good book.
Why not break away from the "cliff dwelling" this summer. It is really quite simple. Pick out a spot not too far from the office—buy yourself a sturdy, dependable five-passenger car like the Paige "Linwood"—and just see what happiness it will bring to you and every member of the family. Remember, there are no mile posts when you own a Paige.

FUNKHOUSER HAD CHIEF SHADOWED, ALCOCK CHARGES

Alleged to Have Employed Vicious and to Have Wasted Funds.

Insubordination, inefficiency, conduct unbecoming a police officer, and making a false report are the formal general charges filed with the civil service commission yesterday by Acting Chief of Police Alcock against Maj. M. L. C. Funkhouser, suspended second deputy superintendent of police.

In a bill of particulars filed with the charges forty-one specific offenses are alleged against the major. Of these only one has to do with the censorship of moving pictures, the most important charges being that Maj. Funkhouser retained in his employ "persons of ill repute and character to investigate and report moral conditions and to regulate and suppress vice" and that he allowed "large sums of money to be expended in shadowing well known men and women of unimpeachable character for purposes unconnected with the duties of his office." Chief of Police Schuettler is named as one of the persons thus shadowed.

With the charges against the major were filed ones against Joseph A. Thoney, morals inspector, and Hugh F. Borland, manager of police property, also under suspension.

At the request of the chief the civil service commission set the trial of Funkhouser and his aids for Monday, June 24.

Some of Charges.

Among the charges made against Funkhouser in the specifications are:

Having retained "cadets, thieves, pickpockets, former convicts, shakedown artists, and others of ill repute and character as inspectors of moral conditions."

Directing and permitting his subordinates to dog the footsteps of county, city, and state officials and prominent men and women identified with local civic reform. Chief Schuettler and his assistants are named as among those shadowed.

Failure to comply with an order of Sept. 15, 1917, calling for detailed reports on vice conditions every twenty-four hours.

Disobeying an order of Alcock that morals inspectors be accompanied by regular policemen in inspecting and suppressing vice.

Disobeying an order directing the submission of all reports of one Burkhardt, a discharged investigator.

Disobeying an order to remove all stationery in the West Madison street warehouse directed by Borland when manager of properties and to suspend Borland.

Failure to report reports of gasoline and tire consumption and to close the West Madison street warehouse.

Waste of Funds Charged.

Haphazard and unbusinesslike methods in the conduct of his office and waste of city funds in useless investigations.

Payment of $5 to Harry E. Ayers as a morals inspector when Ayers did no work.

Suppressing information of violations of police regulations by members of the department.

Failure to drop ten men and one woman for whose pay no appropriation was made by the city council.

Procuring the dismissal of a statutory charge made against one Williams by a 6 year old girl when the case against Williams is said to have been strongly established.

Failure to report the theft of "Henrietta," a Ford automobile assigned to the use of his department.

Retention of stolen property recovered by operatives of his staff and neglect to inventory said property.

Money from Civilians?

Retention of a $5 bill and one cigar received by a subordinate from Dennis Cooney of 1834 South Dearborn street.

The "holdout" of five $1 bills received from Joe Morris, a saloonkeeper in the old levee district.

Failure to supervise properly the censorship of films.

Use of his office and electrical power supplied by the city in the promotion of a stock selling scheme in connection with a moving picture enterprise.

Abuse of his position by compelling employés to perform personal services for him under threats of discharge.

Disrespect for his superiors.

Ten Against Thoney.

Ten specifications are made against Thoney. They cover the general charges of being morally unfit for his position, of accepting money and gifts from keepers of disorderly resorts and prostitutes, of being on familiar terms with such characters, failure to properly account for city funds, and suppression of reports on violations.

Thoney is accused of personally shadowing prominent citizens.

The general charge against Borland is negligence, inattention to duty, disobedience, falsifying reports, and conduct unbecoming a police officer.

The charges were filed after a conference between Alcock, Acting Second Deputy Superintendent of Police Lethardt, and Assistant Corporation Counsel Frank Righeimer.

"It is to the interest of the people that these charges be thrashed out at once, and we're ready for trial tomorrow, if Maj. Funkhouser is," said the chief. "We have absolute documentary evidence that Funkhouser and his subordinates shadowed good and reputable citizens for reasons absolutely out of the line of police business, and we have the statements of his own assistants that the [illegible] in vogue in his department was [illegible]."

Denial by Funkhouser.

Funkhouser made a general denial of the charges and specifically of the one that he shadowed Chief Schuettler and citizens of good moral character. He admitted, however, that one man prominent in civic reform had been trailed.

"I will answer the charges through my attorney, John S. Miller," he said. "I will be ready for trial in a short time and will meet this attack with a [illegible] defense."

LYTTON BRUTAL TO HIS CHILDREN, WIFE'S CHARGE

Brutality to their three children was the chief cause of the trouble which led Mrs. Louise W. Lytton to seek a divorce from Walter Lytton, according to her testimony, which led Judge Brothers to grant her a decree yesterday. Lytton is the son of Henry C. Lytton.

"In December, 1916, my husband hit my oldest boy and knocked his head against the bookcase," testified Mrs. Lytton. "I interfered, which made Mr. Lytton angry, and we were forced to lock ourselves in another room for protection against him. He jammed the lock in trying to get at us, and finally had to call the houseman to let us out."

Two servants testified in Mrs. Lytton's behalf.

"He would just about put his hands on her and then Mrs. Lytton would begin to cry and he would stop," said Charles Kaksta, a butler. This happened nearly every day, according to Kaksta.

"I would have packed up and left if he had used the language toward me that he did to her," said Mrs. Alice P. Trube, another servant, while on the witness stand. Mrs. Trube said that Lytton at other times absolutely ignored his wife.

Alimony was agreed upon for the present at $250 a month. It was stated that Lytton now has an income of about $600 a month, but that it is not definite. Judge Brothers told Mrs. Lytton she could come in at any time and see about further support for the children, if Lytton's income should warrant it.

The three children, for the sake of whom, according to Mrs. Lytton, she so often caused her husband's wrath to descend on her, are Henry C. Lytton II., 8 years old; Walter, 6, and Louise, 4. They live with their mother at 2618 Lake View avenue.

WANT LABOR AND CITY AGENTS IN NEW CAR SYSTEM

Committee of Aldermen Suggests Changes in Ordinance.

Representation for the city and employés on the boards of directors of the surface and elevated lines may be made a part of the ordinance for the unification of the lines and the construction of a subway system.

A subcommittee of the city council committee on local transportation, which has been preparing the ordinance, made this proposal yesterday. It adopted resolutions providing that the employés shall have one representative on the board and that the city have one until such time as the latter is entitled to more in the same proportion as the city's investment in the unified system bears to the investment made by the companies.

Leonard A. Busby, spokesman for the surface and elevated lines, did not accept the subcommittee's proposition. He said he first would have to take up the matter with the security holders and obtain their consent.

Changes Recommended.

In addition to recommending the representation on the directorship matter the subcommittee also recommended these changes:

In lieu of the 45 per cent of the net receipts to go to the companies, which shall not be less than 1 per cent of the gross receipts per year, as recommended by the Chicago traction and subway commission, the companies to be allowed 35-100 of 1 per cent on original capital account only.

All refunding is to be at cost, subject to the board of control. If refunding rate is higher than present rate the increase to be added to the 6 per cent return. If rate be lower the decrease to be deducted from the 6 per cent return.

Mr. Busby was satisfied with the refunding proposition, but objected to the rate of return on new money. This is a virtual guarantee of 6.35 per cent.

Answer Ready Soon.

Mr. Busby said he would take up the matters proposed by the subcommittee with the security holders, and have their answer ready for the aldermen in a few days.

Walter L. Fisher, special counsel for the city in traction affairs, and Mr. Busby engaged in several verbal disputes. Mr. Fisher does not approve of the recommendations made by the subcommittee. He has predicted that the voters will reject an ordinance based on what the subcommittee has done up to date.

Ald. W. F. Lipps, who proposed the representation plan for the city and employés on the boards of directors, said he felt sure that no other city had this sort of an agreement. He said this plan would insure fair treatment for employés, and would be an assurance that the city would at all times be certain that its interests were being protected.

A Year Ago and Today

NOBODY will deny that we have more sentiment today than we had a year ago, and nobody will deny that we use better judgment in the performance of our daily tasks, in our entire mode of living, today than we did a year ago.

THE reason is—we have learned from the example of a great nation what a calamity it is to utterly lack sentiment; we have seen to what depths a people may fall when they no longer use their good judgment.

TODAY we have much more real sentiment about a funeral than we had a year ago; there is much less ostentatious display, and the service is much more impressive. Today, too, we use our God-given good judgment much more than we did a year ago, and eliminate all unnecessary expenditure.

MY beautiful chapel, including screened organ and organist, is for the free use of any bereaved family, and my experience of a quarter of a century—plus exceptional good judgment—is at the service of any one who wants to eliminate all unnecessary expenditure without sacrificing refinement and impressiveness.

Perhaps you have observed that we seldom feature any one detail of design or construction in a Maxwell Motor Car.

There is a reason for that.

In a product where excellence is uniform, there is no opportunity—no temptation—to emphasize any one feature, to the exclusion of others.

Today there are more than 250,000 cars of this same model in use.

For five years it has been manufactured in practically its present form.

If there ever was a weak link in the chain, it was long since strengthened.

But there wasn't—from the first this proved to be a wonderfully reliable, exceptionally economical and altogether a most satisfactory automobile.

Special features are all right.

It is permissible, of course, to emphasize any advantage a car may possess over its rivals.

But in the case of this Maxwell we feel the strongest thing we can say is that it is just as good at one point as at another—good all over and all through.

In a word, featureless—a standardized, dependable motor car.

250,000 other careful buyers and experienced motorists endorse your judgment.

Who Likes Trouble?

A check forger does not like it, but he gets into it sometimes when he imitates the written name of a man who has got some money in a bank—some money that the check forger wants, and the only way that he can get it is to forge the signature of the man to whom the money in the bank lawfully belongs. So he wants the money so badly that he gets into trouble.

The chicken-roost snatcher, who prowls about at night with a sack under his arm, once in a while gets into trouble because the chickens make too much cackle at a time when they should have been asleep. Of course the chicken thief doesn't like to get into trouble any more than the check forger liked his trouble.

If the check forger had gone to work and produced something with his own hands and with his own brain which would have made it possible for him to have laid aside some money in a bank that he would have been honestly entitled to, two people would have been saved trouble: The man who had his money stolen from him and the man who did the stealing.

The chicken thief could have, by honest labor, owned a few chickens of his own, saving himself from the act that he is now being penalized for.

"PIGGLY WIGGLY" is the name of a certain type of store. The name itself is distinctly different and unlike all other trade names, having been originated and put into use especially for its peculiar distinction. The store over which the name Piggly Wiggly presides uses as a part of its equipment a certain patented store apparatus that is patented in the United States, in Canada, in Mexico and in Spain. The United States patent number is 1,242,872, issued Oct. 9th, 1917. Patents have been applied for in fourteen other foreign countries. Other patent applications covering certain improvements are now pending.

This patent and other applications are the exclusive properties of Clarence Saunders, Memphis, Tennessee, and so is the particular name, "Piggly Wiggly," the exclusive property of this same person.

These properties are his because he created them out of his own brain, and commercialized them out of his own talent and with his own money. Licenses have been granted upon certain considerations throughout various parts of the country for use of the trade name, "Piggly Wiggly," and the patented Saunders self-serving store equipment as is illustrated by the photograph herewith.

A swinging price tag that is used in connection with the Piggly Wiggly stores, special lighting equipment, a special multiple checking counter arrangement, a double-sided refrigerator, a grill mesh work of a novel appearance, specially constructed display cabinets, fruit rack, stockroom equipment, are particular characteristics of a Piggly Wiggly store, presenting as a whole a most distinctive appearance unlike all other store interior views, which has been evolved as a part of this system of stores through the brain work of the said Clarence Saunders, and the expenditure by him of large sums of money.

A blue and white color scheme is also a part of the distinguishing marks of the interior of every Piggly Wiggly store. A blue, white and yellow color scheme is a distinguishing color combination identifying the exterior front of a Piggly Wiggly store. These distinguishing color marks of identification were originated by the said Clarence Saunders, and are claimed by him as his own personal property in connection with his legal right in the establishment and operation of Piggly Wiggly stores. The interior view of a Piggly Wiggly store and its exterior are the result of certain combinations of structure, arrangement and colors that were invented and put into practice by the said Clarence Saunders, and are claimed by him as his exclusive personal property.

Patent law is the subject of such limited knowledge on the part of folks in general that there is quoted on this page certain illuminating sentences that are given as quotations, with proper citations as to authorities.

If there be not an honest streak to appeal to in the make-up of those individuals who are now practicing imitation, or who contemplate an imitation of the rights enumerated above, then for the sake of avoiding trouble, remember that Clarence Saunders is the author of what has been said, and that he means every word that is in this article, and that whoever is guilty of making a theft of his rights will be most vigorously held to account for such action.

A Piggly Wiggly store is the original of the type store known by that name, and illustrated in the photograph reproduced hereon.

Any store at any place that looks like a Piggly Wiggly store—because it could not look like a Piggly Wiggly store unless it imitated such a store—is an imitation, and while it may take a few months to legally have a store like this definitely stated by a court as an imitation, the same as it may take a few months to put a man on the rock pile after he has stolen something, the people should know who is an imitator while legal action is being taken, and this is to give the public notice of the knowledge that a Piggly Wiggly store is the ONLY store in the world that is entitled to look like a Piggly Wiggly store, and the only one than can legally look like one.

Every Piggly Wiggly store has conspicuously displayed therein a license notice authorizing the use of my trade-marks and my copyrighted and patented instrumentalities employed in the operation of the Piggly Wiggly system.

What the Law Courts Say About Infringement

"The infringement of a patent is the unauthorized making, using, or selling of the invention during the lifetime of the patent."

Vol. 30 Cyc. of Law, p. 971.

A patent conveys exclusive right to make, use and vend; therefore, "infringement may consist either in making, using or selling the invention, or in all three."

Vol. 30 Cyc. of Law, p. 972.

"It is not necessary that every feature of the invention disclosed in the patent be used in order to constitute infringement, but it is sufficient that the essential features as set forth in the claim are taken. Substantial identity is all that is required. If the essense of the invention is taken, variations in detail will not avoid infringement."

Vol. 30 Cyc. of Law, pp. 973-974.

"A construction employing substantial equivalents of mechanism and performing the same function is an infringement."

Gage vs. Herring, Vol. 107, U. S. Supreme Court Rep., p. 640.

"To infringe a patent it is not necessary that the thing patented should be adopted in every particular. If the patent is adopted substantially by the defendants they are guilty of infringement."

Sewall vs. Jones, Vol. 91, U. S. Supreme Court Rep., p. 171.

"Authorities concur that the substantial equivalent of a thing, in the sense of the patent law, is the same as the thing itself; so that if two devices do the same work in substantially the same way and accomplish substantially the same results, they are the same, even though they differ in name, form or shape."

Macomber on Patents, p. 342.
Union vs. Murphy, Vol. 97, U. S. Supreme Court Rep., p. 120.

PIGGLY WIGGLY
PIGGLY WIGGLY

OPENING DAY AT DAYTON, OHIO

"It is an established doctrine that a person is guilty of infringement, who, by the substitution of other known devices or equivalents, accomplishes the same result as that achieved by the patent alleged to be infringed. The substantial equivalent of a thing, in the sense of the patent law, is the same as the thing itself; so that if two devices do the same work, in substantially the same way, and accomplish substantially the same result, they are the same, even though they differ in name, form or shape."

Vol. 20, Ruling Case Law, p. 1155.

"The Court will look through the disguises, however ingenious, to see whether the inventive idea of the original patentee has been appropriated, and whether the defendant's device contains the material features of the patent in suit, and will declare infringement even when those features have been supplemented and modified to such an extent that the defendant may be entitled to a patent for the improvement."

Rogers on Patents, Vol. 2, p. 1429.
Crown Cork Co., vs. Aluminum Stopper Co.
Vol. 108 Fed., p. 845; Vol. 48 C. C. A., p. 72.

"Contributory infringement is the intentional aiding of one person by another in the unlawful making or selling or using of the patented invention, and this is usually done by making or selling a part of the patented invention with the intent and purpose of so aiding. The essence of contributory infringement lies in the concerting with others in an unlawful invasion of the patentee's rights."

Vol. 30 Cyc. of Law, p. 989.

"Selling parts adapted and intended for use in making the patented invention in violation of the patent is contributory infringement."

Vol. 30 Cyc. of Law, p. 989.

"A party is no less an infringer because he did not intend to infringe or because he did not know of the patent."

Vol. 30 Cyc. of Law, p. 973.

Any contractor—any builder—or any mechanic who has any part in building a store that is to be an imitation of a Piggly Wiggly store—or any person who sells parts adapted and intended for use in making the patented invention that constitutes a part of a Piggly Wiggly store, will be held strictly accountable for contributory infringement of the rights as disclosed by the inventions that are used by a Piggly Wiggly store as part of its working units.

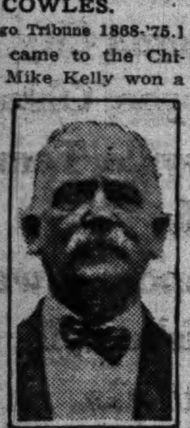
HOW KING KELLY WON A PENNANT FOR WHITE SOX

Bumps Rival Baseman in Crucial Game in 1881.

BY T. Z. COWLES.

[Sporting Editor Chicago Tribune 1868-'75.]



T.Z. COWLES

How Mike Kelly came to the Chicago club and how Mike Kelly won a league championship for the Chicago White Stockings is a story worth telling.

Certain it is that no one player—not even Anson himself—ever contributed more of value to the success of the club than did Mike Kelly. In respect of the ginger, the pep, the activity of mind and body, and above all the intense desire to win, it would be hard to find his equal among all the ball players of the last fifty years.

There never was but one "Kel." As batter, base runner, right fielder, and change catcher, he was a gold mine of usefulness to his club. There was one particular field play in which he was more successful than any other right fielder. It was throwing out a man at first base on an apparently safe hit.

Plays for the Batter.

According to his judgment of batters, which was exceptionally correct, he would play deep in his field or half way, as the case might be. On a clean grounder between first and second Kelly would race to meet the ball, pick it up on the run, and by a quick throw get his man at first base. This was smart ball indeed. It was Kelly ball.

It was "Boss" Hulbert's good judgment, backed up by Anson's correct estimate, that brought Kelly to Chicago. But THE TRIBUNE had something to do with it, as we shall see. In 1881, when the writer was night editor of THE TRIBUNE, and a sporting authority emeritus as it were, the White Stockings were playing against the Cincinnati Reds on the lake front grounds. I was there as a spectator.

Cigar Starts Fanning Bee.

Hulbert came to the press stand, tapped me on the shoulder, and said:

"Don't you want to smoke?"

"Yes," was my answer.

We went over to the right hand bleachers and lighted up. Cincinnati was in the field. The team of that year embraced Deacon White as catcher; Will White, his brother (always wearing gold-bowed spectacles) pitcher; Cal McVey, first base; Pete Hotaling, left field; Dickerson, center; Kelly, right field. No matter about second baseman, short stop and third baseman. They weren't much account anyhow.

"If you had your pick of those fellows out there," said Hulbert, "which would you choose?"

Cowles Picks Kelly.

"There's but one man in the whole bunch I'd take as a gift," was my reply.

"Which one?"

"The right fielder. He's worth more than all the rest of the outfit put together."

"That's exactly what I think," said Hulbert.

Kelly was signed to play for Chicago before he left town. There was no reserve rule in operation then. A player could sign with another club at the expiration of his season's contract. Along in the winter Hulbert asked to meet him at lunch. Two men from Cincinnati were waiting for us, by appointment.

They were Justus Thorner, manager of the Reds, and Judge Hendrickson of Cincinnati. They had come to Chicago to beg Hulbert to release Kelly back to their club, and they pleaded earnestly against being compelled to lose their best man. It would hurt their club, they urged, and cut down gate receipts. Hulbert listened patiently to their arguments. Turning to me he said:

"What do you think about it?"

Chicago Needs Kelly.

"Chicago needs Kelly and ought to have him," was my answer. "Cincinnati needs him, too, but will profit more by his absence than by his presence. Baseball receipts in Chicago when it has a winning team are twice or three times the receipts in Cincinnati, win or lose. Cincinnati stands to win more money out of Chicago games than it could hope to get out of home games. Kelly should play with Chicago, by all means."

And it was settled that way.

How Kelly won the league championship for Chicago was this way. It was in 1882, as I remember, that Providence and Chicago were tied in the race and had but one more game to play. That game would decide the championship. They were playing on the lake front grounds.

Radbourne was pitching for Providence, little Gilligan was the catcher, Joe Start the first baseman, and George Wright the shortstop. Harry Wright was the team manager. For

GRANT RING MEN DEFEAT CUSTER; GOODMAN LOSES

Battle Creek, Mich., June 15.—[Special.]—In an afternoon of fast sport Camp Grant boxers took another fall out of Camp Custer's ring representatives. The final score stood 3 to 1 for the Illinois outfit, with three battles going to a draw.

The feature was the defeat of Danny Goodman by I. Berland of the Three Hundred and Thirty-seventh infantry. Berland, whose fighting name is Lewis Hahn, is a newcomer at camp and had never been seen in action before. His decisive victory over the Chicago boy made him a popular hero in short order.

Ritchie Held to Draw.

Spot Cunningham came back at Johnny Ritchie so viciously in the last round of the bantamweight mill that he won a draw. In the lightweight class Walter Jacobson of Grant took Berger across the ropes in the last two rounds, winning an easy decision. Lewis Shultz of Grant did the same with Sergt. John Evans at the middleweight.

Andre Anderson a Winner.

Homer Smith, the Michigan heavyweight, hurt his hand and could not fight, so Jim McLaughlin of the Three Hundred and Thirtieth machine gunners at Custer volunteered from the crowd to fight big Andre Anderson. McLaughlin was game, but in no condition to meet the Swede, and at the end of the second round Brig. Gen. Penn, the presiding officer, ordered the decision awarded to Anderson. Floyd Fitzsimmons of Benton Harbor was the referee.

CHIP TO BATTLE EDDIE M'GOORTY

Despite Phil Harrison's fear of Eddie McGoorty, there will be a match in Racine. Promoter John Wagner has substituted George Chip, the Newcastle middleweight, for Harrison, and it will be Chip vs. McGoorty. Wagner also changed the date. Instead of holding the bout on Friday, as was planned, it will be decided on Tuesday, June 25. Chip should give McGoorty a great argument. He is one of the rough, tough middleweights of the game, a fighter who has dodged no one and whose peculiar style should give McGoorty trouble. The date was shifted to give him more time for training.

Sailor Friedman and Charley Scully will appear in the other half of the double windup. There is considerable interest in this match in Ghetto circles, and Harrison's running out won't affect the Ghetto gang.

Maurice Flynn, Boxer, in Chase of Submarines

Maurice Flynn, west side lightweight, and one of the first local boxers to don the navy blue, is, or will soon be, chasing German submarines somewhere on the broad ocean. He tired of the life at Great Lakes and asked for more action, which request was filed. Clint Flynn, his younger brother and also a boxer, intends to enlist as a jackie this week.

Chicago, June 17.

Dear Laurence—

Laurence, I am afraid you may of misunderstood something I said to you just a few minutes before we parted Saturday night and I want to explain it to you so you will not take my meaning in a way which it was not meant. Do you remember when you asked me if I was disappointed and I said: "Yes, a little." Well, Laurence, I got to thinking over my reply after you had gone and I got to thinking that perhaps it sounded like I meant I was disappointed in you. Well, dear, I wasn't disappointed in you—just the reverse. And when I said that I was a little disappointed, I meant in the way things had happened. Do you understand me now?

I was disappointed because I was with you for only such a short time and because I wasn't alone with you only for a moment. That is why I was disappointed, Laurence, and please don't think it was you whom I was disappointed in. Oh, my dear, far from being that I was—— But I mustn't say too much or you will think I am a perfect f——l. Or do you think so already? I'll bet you do and I don't blame you.

Please don't think I am hateful when I say I wished more than once Saturday that Corporal Graves was dead. I know he is your "pal" and that you are the kind of a man that will not allow anything uncomplimentary to be said about your friends. Well, Laurence, I don't mean anything personal against Corporal Graves, but oh, how I wish he hadn't of come along and had I known that he would be with us all Saturday afternoon and evening and that he would drag you off to Oak Park to spend Sunday, I believe I would of murdered him or something. I know that doesn't sound very ladylike, but one can't always be "ladylike" where their feelings are concerned.

And another thing that hurt me, dear, was you calling me Miss Conklin and I know you wouldn't of done it had not Corporal Graves been with us all the time and I suppose that is another reason why I feel the way I do toward him. Oh, Laurence, never did I realize before how true is the saying that "Two is company while three is a crowd." Him being with us made things so different than they would of been without him. There was so many things I wanted to say to you, so many questions I wanted to ask, but they were questions I could not ask in front of a third party and now I don't suppose I will have another chance for months and months, perhaps never. Oh, Laurence, please come again soon and COME ALONE.

But, dear, don't be so foolish as to suppose I was disappointed in you. You were simply—— But if I told you what I really think, I am afraid your hat would be too small for you and I don't want to put you to the trouble of getting another one.

Seriously, Lawrence, were you disappointed in me? I just knew you were and I know I acted crazy and talked like a f——l, especially while we were at McVicker's and on the car afterward going home. But please, Soldier Boy, don't think I am always like that and I must lay the blame for the way I acted on Corporal Graves because I simply couldn't be myself when I kept thinking all the time: "Oh, if he would only go home and leave us two alone, together!" Poor Corporal Graves! I don't suppose he had any idea that he was the unwelcome member of the triangle, but perhaps I ought not to say that, for how do I know you didn't keep him with us on purpose because you didn't want to be alone with me?

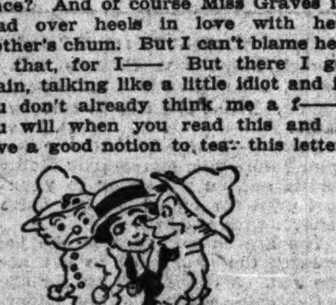
Laurence, you must write to me right away and tell me what you really think of me and if you were disappointed or the reverse and tell me if you thought of me yesterday at all or if the Graves made it so pleasant for you that you never had a thought for poor little me. I'll bet your friend has a pretty sister, and you were so busy admiring her that you didn't have time to even think once of the little girl who was with you the evening before and whose hand you squeezed so hard when we parted. Am I a good guesser, Laurence? And of course Miss Graves is head over heels in love with her brother's chum. But I can't blame her for that, for I—— But there I go again, talking like a little idiot and if you don't already think me a f——l you will when you read this and I have a good notion to tear this letter up. But please, dear, don't hate me or laugh at me for anything I have said. It would kill me to have you stop caring for me and you do care for me a little, don't you, Laurence, or you wouldn't have held my hand so long.



Laurence, I dreamed about you Saturday night and again last night. I won't tell you what I dreamed, but it was simply wonderful and oh, if it would only come true. We were together, dear, and there was no third party with us and—— But I won't tell you the rest of or you would think I must be crazy or I couldn't dream a dream like that. Yours [?],

HORTENSE.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Sam Hardy's steadfast driving to the base lines and his calculating defensive play earned him a berth in the Chicago city tennis finals today as the opponent of Walter T. Hayes. Hardy yesterday eliminated Ralph H. (Bill) Burdick after a taut match of three hours, which resulted in enough features to keep a good gallery intent and applauding through five sets.

Burdick started ahead, then Hardy broke through in the second set, and at various times before the end each seemed to have the match won and lost again. Final score was 2—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—8, 6—4.

Hayes advanced to the final round by a decisive victory over Arthur Hubbell of the South Side Tennis club, 6—1, 6—2, 6—4. Hubbell made Hayes work for every point, but had to give way before the battering ground stroke attack of the veteran. Hubbell led, 4 to 0, in the last set, only to have his margin melt when Hayes took the next six games straight.

Misses Waldo and Neely Win.

The title of women's doubles champions, the first championship of 1918 to be decided, went to Miss Katherine Waldo and Miss Carrie Neely. They defeated Miss Marion Leighton and Miss Amanda Falker, a good deal of the credit going to Miss Waldo for her volleying and energetic work in the fore court.

Both Miss Leighton and Miss Falker played their shots softer and safer than customary with them, and this gave Miss Neely and Miss Waldo fine opportunity for well placed returns.

Walter Hayes met one of his infrequent defeats in mixed doubles when Miss Emily Scully and Ed Fabrice beat Mr. and Mrs. Hayes. The final matches will be played off this afternoon. This includes the concluding contests of the boys' and junior divisions, which were started in eight different sections of the city a week ago.

MEN'S SINGLES.

Semi-finals—Sam Hardy beat R. H. Burdick, 2—6, 6—4, 6—2, 6—8, 6—4. W. T. Hayes beat A. P. Hubbell, 6—1, 6—2, 6—4.

WOMEN'S DOUBLES.

Final—Misses Katherine Waldo and C. B. Neely beat Misses Marion Leighton and Amanda Falker, 6—3, 9—7.

JUNIOR SINGLES.

First round—Joseph McCain beat Gilbert Rosenthal, 6—1, 7—5. James Anderson beat Gair Tourtellot, 6—2, 7—5. J. R. McKnight beat Henry Magenson, 6—2, 6—0.

Semi-final—J. R. McKnight beat Joseph McCain, 6—3, 6—4.

BOYS' SINGLES.

First round—Menard MacNeill beat William Frisbie, 6—4, 6—4. Irwin Kline won by default from H. Duchsler. Jack Rodeheaver beat Art Wold, 6—4, 6—2. Bradley Guyton won by default from George Hutton.

Semi-finals—Menard MacNeill beat Jack Rodeheaver, 6—3, 6—2; Bradley Guyton beat Irwin Kline, 6—0, 6—0.

GOOD SHIP SOX SUNK DESPITE YEOMAN FABER

Red Earns Shutout, but Errors Hand Griffs Game, 3-1.

Hargrove to Army

William Patrick Hargrove added another star to the White Sox service flag yesterday when he left the team to report to his draft board in Wichita, Kas., ready to be converted into a soldier. He expected to be sent to Camp Funston for training.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

You wouldn't blame Yeoman Red Faber, if you saw yesterday's game, if he never came back to pitch another battle for the White Sox the way his old pals treated him in the second chapter of the Washington serial. He pitched a shutout game, yet Washington won, 3 to 1.

All three of the enemy's tallies were handed out by Faber's backers, and they were quite as weak offensively as they were on the defense. Only three singles could be garnered off Harper, southpaw, who was so bad he gave eight bases on balls, hit one batsman, and made a wild pitch.

The Rowlands had somebody on in every round except the sixth. In six of the nine innings they had a man on second base with one out or less. Only once could they deliver the necessary blow to drive in the runs that would have made it easier for Faber. But Red should worry, because he added nine innings without an earned run scored to his official pitching record, and that counts more than a game won in the American league.

Only Five Hits Off Red.

The Senators made five hits off Faber, including one triple by Picinich which did not count in the result. He gave them only one pass, which was canceled at second base in the opening inning. And all the hits would have been sterilized if the White Sox had given Red the support his flinging deserved.

A fumble by Capt. Trowbridge Collins in the fourth inning paved the way to the first Washington tally. Errors by Schalk and Weaver, following a couple of hits in the eighth, were responsible for the two winning counters. One of the three hits off Harper got behind a pass, a sacrifice, and a passed ball in the first inning and saved the White Sox from a shutout.

Sox Get Run at Start.

Murphy started that domestic first round with a walk. J. Collins sacrificed. E. Collins fouled out and Felsch rammed a single to center on which Murphy rode home. That was all for us, but it was not for lack of chances.

Weaver and Risberg walked with only one out in the second. Schalk hit into a double play. Faber started our third with a walk and got as far as third when the side was retired. Gandil singled with one out in the fourth and Weaver hit into a double play. Risberg, first up in the fifth, walked, and was left on second.

One down in the seventh, Risberg was hit by a stray curve and Schalk made the third and last single off Harper. Faber sacrificed, putting it up to Murphy in the pinch, and Mique rolled to Morgan. Felsch walked with two gone in the eighth and Gandil popped out. Weaver led the last attack with a stroll and was left on third.

Griffs Tie It in Fourth.

The Senators could not get a safe hit off Faber until the fourth. Judge then singled with one out. Milan hit a bounder to Collins, who booted it, as Judge hurdled the ball just before it reached him. That put Judge on third, from where he registered on Shanks' fly to deep center. Milan tried to make second after the catch, but was doubled up. Judge had crossed the plate before the third out, however.

Two Senators struck out in the eighth before the blow fell. Shotton singled and stole second. Foster trundled a hit over second and Felsch grabbed the ball in time to shoot it home ahead of Shotton, who is some speed merchant. The ball bounded through Schalk like a bullet, letting Shotton score and Foster race to third, from where he went in when Weaver booted a grounder from Judge.

Notes

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 15.—[Special.]—Three more with the Robins before the Cubs start westward.

Though the Robins have been drawing only a few fans on week days, there were about 6,000 present today, which isn't many for a perfect Saturday afternoon.

Max Flack earned $50 by his home pearclear the fence, but hit the tobacco sign, then bounded over, all of which was carefully observed by the official scorer.

Hollocher startled Brooklyn fans with his playing, just as he has stirred 'em up in every city in the east. His snappiest play was when he took a hit away from Daubert in the fourth, snatching a line smash. Another time he lost a popup in the sun, but made the catch with one hand.

Young Harry Weaver, who rejoined the team last night just before bedtime has been suspended for ten days by Manager Mitchell for not explaining his absence since last Saturday night satisfactorily. The lad said he was taking examinations for the navy, but he was supposed to be with the team Tuesday. He stated he will not have to join the service for thirty days.

NOTES

Washington again today.

The Senators gave Harper perfect support, otherwise the Sox would have made a lot of runs, for they almost always had a man ready to count on any old thing.

McBride, whom the fans had commenced to forget, accepted nine chances at short, and several of them were tough ones.

Murphy, Risberg, and Weaver had only four official times at bat among them, although each was up four times. Murphy drew two passes and made a sacrifice, leaving him only one time at bat. Risberg was passed twice and hit by pitcher once, so was at bat only once. Weaver drew two passes in four times up.

Morgan robbed Schalk of a hit in the fifth by a clever running stop and throw from back of first base.

Weaver staved off a hit for McBride in the seventh. The ball squirted off Faber's arm toward short. Buck scooped it on the run and winged the pill to first in time to get the verdict.

CAMP GRANT NINE DEFEATS LOGANS IN 13 ROUNDS, 5-3

Camp Grant's slugging baseball crew put over a 5 to 3 victory on the Logan Squares at Logan Square park, but it took thirteen innings to do it. The soldiers hit Ed Stack consistently, but did not bunch hits until the last round. Then the smash came with a triple by Williams and singles by Casey, Dixon, and Kerningham.

J. Walsh pitched six innings for the soldiers, allowing the Logans only three hits. Kerningham took the mound in the seventh and stayed to the finish, two hits being nicked off him in that time. Errors assisted the Logans somewhat. Score:

NICK ALTROCK VS. SOX TODAY

Nick Altrock, your old playmate of 1906, White Sox fans, will pitch this afternoon for Washington against the team which he helped win its first world's pennant.

Manager Clark Griffith of the visitors, in response to a request from some of Nick's old friends at the "yards," announced last night that "Handsome Nick" positively would appear on the mound, and Manager Clark always keeps his promises.

Altrock, who had been assigned to a coaching and comedian rôle, astonished the baseball world by essaying and winning a comeback appearance in the recent series against Detroit's Tigers.

HENDRIX ADDS FOUR-HIT GAME TO HIS STRING

Flack Poles Homer and Deal a Triple in Big Innings.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 15.—[Special.]—Tremendous blows by Max Flack and Charley Deal, combined with blunders by the enemy, enabled the Cubs to run off with the first game against the Brooklyn Robins today. The final count was 6 to 1, and a home run drive by Flack in the ninth and a three baser by Deal in the sixth made the victory an easy one. Those swats accounted for four runs.

Only with the help of the one error made by the Cubs were the Robins able to score, for Claude Hendrix was on the mound with increased effectiveness and won his seventh straight game. Claude is threatening to lead the whole league and everything in pitching this season. He was in his dandiest form, holding the enemy to four scattered blows, and would have shut them out with ease had not Mr. Muscle Merkle let loose with a bad chuck when a man was trapped between first and second with another runner on third.

Get Eight Hits Off Coombs.

The veteran Jack Coombs, who shut out the Cubs not long since in Chicago, was opposing Claude but was no match for our Claude in his present form. Coombs was nicked for eight blows, including two triples and a homer.

For four innings it was a speedy pitchers' duel, with Hendrix having the better of it, but in the last of the fifth Zack Wheat led off with a single and was pushed to second by Myers' sacrifice. O'Mara was retired on a ground ball, letting Wheat reach third, after which Hendrix walked Schmandt.

On the first ball pitched the latter started for second and Killefer headed him off with a shot to Hollocher. The man was trapped between first and second, but in the chase to get him Merkle made a bad heave and Wheat scooted home from third. That was all for Brooklyn. They never had another chance.

Deal's Triple Scores Two.

Immediately after that episode the Cubs swung into their winning stride and the Robins went to smash. Flack opened the sixth with a blow to right and Hollocher bunted and was safe when O'Mara made a wide heave to first. Mann was called out on strikes, but Merkle delivered a blazing drive to right, which Johnston muffed, and the bases were filled.

Merkle deserved a hit, but the local official wouldn't stand for it. In this pinch Paskert delivered a sacrifice fly, letting Flack get home with the tying run, and Deal then settled the day's argument with a three bagger over Wheat's head to the left wall, sending Hollocher and Merkle home.

Flack Counts Home Run.

Those three runs were more than enough to win for Hendrix, but in the ninth the Cubs made the victory complete. Deal started with a walk and Zeider bunted him to second, Killefer popped out, then Deal stole third while the Brooklyn fellows were not looking. Before Hendrix had a chance to send Charley home he scored when Coombs allowed the ball to slip out of his hand while winding up. It rolled back toward second far enough to let Deal in without a slide.

Hendrix then swatted the single which was to have done the business, and Flack followed with his four base drive over the west wall, sending Claude in ahead of him. Hollocher got a single while the hitting was good, but was left on the bases when Mann popped out.

Murray of Notre Dame Declines Phils' Offer

Notre Dame, Ind., June 15.—[Special.]—Patrick James Murray, the sensational southpaw twirler of the Notre Dame team, will remain with the Blue and Gold for another year. Murray declined to accept a flattering offer to sign with the Philadelphia Nationals, and Doyle, the Philly scout, went home disappointed. The scout has watched Murray work in nearly every game and has been endeavoring for a month to sign him. Murray is a junior in the engineering department.

RED CROSS GOLF TODAY ENLISTS STARS OF GAME

Red Cross Golf

Time and place—Westmoreland G. C. at 3 p. m.
Players—Miss A. Stirling and Perry Adair vs. Miss Elaine Rosenthal and Bobby Jones.
Route—Northwestern railroad or "L" road to Central street, Evanston, thence west by street car or auto.

BY JOE DAVIS.

The greatest talent in the mixed four ball line that has appeared in a Red Cross exhibition this year will play at the Westmoreland Country club this afternoon, Miss Alexa Stirling of Atlanta, national champion, and Perry Adair of Atlanta meeting Miss Elaine Rosenthal of Ravisloe, former western champion and runner up in the national event of 1914, and Bobby Jones of Atlanta, southern champion.

Miss Stirling made her first bow to the Chicago golfing public in the national championship in 1915 at the Onwentsia club, when she was defeated in the semi-final round by Mrs. Clarence Vanderbeck at the twenty-second hole, the extra holes being played in a driving rain. The following year at Belmont Springs Miss Stirling, then 19 years of age, won the national title from Miss Caverly of Philadelphia, 2 and 1, having defeated Miss Rosenthal in the semi-finals by a similar margin.

Records of Other Players.

Miss Rosenthal won the western championship in 1916 and last year was Florida and United North and South champion.

Bobby Jones was the sensation of the season of 1916, when at the age of 14 years he competed in the national championship at Philadelphia, and, after defeating Dyer, the Pennsylvania champion, and Eben Byers, former national champion, gave Bob Gardner a hard fight in the next round. Since then the young southern champion has added considerably to his weight and no longer looks like a boy player.

Perry Adair, who has been runner up in the southern championship, has been seen on Chicago courses several times, competing in the western junior championship, the western amateur championship and in a Red Cross match.

Should Be Close Battle.

The match this afternoon should be close, as Miss Rosenthal has been playing the best golf of her career this summer. The Westmoreland club is 6,446 yards in length, with a man's par of 73. Westmoreland extends an invitation to the golfing public and expects a big crowd out to welcome the famous Georgia visitors. A jackie band from Great Lakes station will play before and during the match.

Westmoreland is located west of Central street, Evanston, and arrangements have been made to have automobiles meet visitors at the end of the Evanston car line between 1:30 and 2:30 o'clock.

TALES of A TEE-BOX TOURIST

EDWARD A. ENGLER, secretary of the Western Golf association in 1908 and treasurer in 1909, is a veteran member of the Glen View club. In the language of the rural scribes he "shoots a good stick." The visit of the American medical golfers to Glen View on Monday recalled a previous visit in which Edward rendered valuable assistance to the medical men in running their tournament.

In recognition of his services he was elected a member of the association with the title of "Dr." at the dinner at night. This honor, it was asserted, carried with it a free medical treatment for the rest of his life. The lumberman at that time was not in the best of health. So he accepted the honor with thanks.

Later in the evening a telephone call came for "Dr." Engler and he hastened to the phone.

"Please hurry over to the Ira J. Couch cottage," said the voice at the other end, "our pup has been taken sick suddenly."

This was "Dr." Engler's first and last call as a member of the medical profession.

GAME GOES 44 HOLES WHEN NAYLOR BEATS BURNABY IN CUP PLAY

Two feature shots marked the afternoon play at the Oak Park Country club yesterday. S. M. Gunderson scored a one on the seventeenth hole, 200 yards, and C. W. Shunk scored a two on the seventh hole, 400 yards. His full brassey shot ran to the green and then disappeared in the dugout.

Norman C. Taylor and F. H. Burnaby set a long distance record for this season at the Westmoreland Country club yesterday when they battled to the forty-fourth hole in the semi-final round for the Argyle cup.

A week ago they were all even at the eighteenth hole and a similar condition existed yesterday. They continued for nine more holes and at the eighth Naylor nailed a victory, 2 and 1.

Extra Hour Brings Defeat.

Burnaby attributed his defeat to the extra hour of daylight, as under normal conditions they would have been tied and he would have had a chance to come back at some future date. Naylor, on the other hand, was anxious to decide the issue, as he is chairman of the committee in charge of the Red Cross exhibition today.

In the lower half of the draw J. D. McMechan defeated H. H. Kerr and will meet Naylor in the final. J. D. Archer led the field in the Liberty cup handicap with a total of 83—5—78.

ELMHURST.

Elmhurst featured the first round for the President's cup with the following decisions: B. O. Lantz defeated J. Buzicka, 6 and 5; J. Cox defeated H. Wilder, 2 and 1; R. Pentecost defeated D. Craft, 6 and 5; J. Kent defeated H. Lott, 8 and 5; I. Hansen defeated S. E. Deab, 5 and 4. Byes—P. Burnett, W. Lovegrove, M. Morrell.

GLENVIEW.

Grandpa Robinson, through the aid of a liberal handicap and the presence of several descendants, won the Grandfathers' cup at Glen View with 97—20—77. The stroke allowance of the contestants was increased one figure for each grandchild present. Several of the players had their handicaps cut down by the presence in Europe of grandsons, but each one expressed satisfaction that his boys were handicapping the Germans "over there."

In the semi-finals for the Maturity cup J. J. Charles defeated R. W. Hunt, 2 up, while W. H. Freeman disposed of H. Hoge, the leader in the qualifying round, by a like margin.

Fellowship Cup II., first round—P. B. Bass won by default from J. M. Glenn; C. J. True defeated A. O. Jones, 2 and 1; A. D. Langworthy won by default from T. E. Cunningham; W. B. Sawyer won by default from K. L. Ames.

War savings stamps sweepstakes—O. A. Cook, 87—13—74.

BEVERLY.

R. C. Clark, 82—10—72, had low net score in class A in the ball sweepstakes, while Dr. B. A. Duffy, 79—3—76, registered the low gross in all divisions and tied with "Phil" Sheridan, 86—10—76, for second place in the first squad.

In class B Dr. A. W. Aiken and R. S. Lindstrom tied with respective cards of 86—12—74 and 89—15—74.

Class D—F. G. Desson, 104—26—78; R. L. Pennington, 100—22—78.

Liberty Bond tournament, first match round—J. B. Mudge defeated D. J. Normoyle, 2 up; Charles Baker defeated J. L. Bohlen, 2 and 1; Dr. B. A. Duffy defeated G. D. Hopkins, 2 up; Dr. G. B. Hole at Cleveland Course Gets Place in O'Neil Series

BY GEORGE A. O'NEIL.
[Lake Shore Country Club.]

The choice of Hoover Bankard, chairman of the greens committee at Midlothian, and of Joe Mitchell and W. V. Hoare, professionals at the Cleveland Country club and Omaha Country club, respectively, falls to Mayfield, Cleveland—a course selected by Vardon as one of the best in the whole west. The particular hole chosen is the fourteenth, and it is, indeed, a golf hole every inch of the way, as might be expected from the judgment and experience of its sponsors.

Each of these gentlemen has had a world of opportunity to see and know the best. They have traveled the country over and have taken part in several championships. Joe Mitchell and Willie Hoare are from the old school of early professionals, beginning their careers back in the '90s. Willie, although a midget in stature compared with some of the golfers who took part in the open championship at Baltimore in 1899, carried off the honors in the driving contest on that occasion. To Joe Mitchell must be given the credit of being the first professional to hit the rubber core ball, which, invented by Coburn Haskell, has revolutionized golf in the last twenty years.

Students of Golf Architecture.

Mr. Bankard is well known in golf circles around Chicago. He is supervising personally the construction work at Midlothian and has traveled much for the express purpose of gathering ideas to realize in the development of his club course. He has done more to put Midlothian on the golf map than any other member, except G. R. Thorne, founder of the club.

A glance at the sketch will show why this hole was selected.

The tee is located in a clump of trees on an elevation thirty-five feet high, giving the player a commanding outlook upon the hole, with a full view of all traps and bunkers. In front of the tee and on the sides of the fairway there is rough grass, and as the fairway does not attain its full width until about 165 yards from the tee, a very accurate drive is definitely called for. On the left, from 160 to 200 yards, a series of sandfaces lie in wait to penalize the medium or long driver with a hook. Paralleling the right side, a stream takes care of a slice from the tee or a sliced second shot.

Trouble Plenty for Unwary.

About 340 yards from the tee the fairway bottlenecks in such a manner that in order to have a chance for an open shot home the tee shot must be played to the right center of the course. The player who hooks far to the left has a hard road to travel, for the course bows out enough to block the view to the green and at the right corner of the green is a well placed trap. Only by a very long, well controlled, hooked second shot can he hope to avoid the large yawning trap that guards the green or the water hazard to the right.

Here's Chance to Win Prize.

Donald Ross (who is universally known to every golfer) has agreed to contribute what he considers the best golf hole in the United States. The course from which he has chosen his selection is famous and well known to all the experts.

A prize will be offered to the person sending in the first correct answer. If merely the town is chosen a pair of wooden clubs will be awarded. If the course, one dozen No. 40 balls, and if the correct hole is given, the winner will be awarded a set of clubs. The contest will close the third Sunday in July.

Answers to Queries

Cleveland, O.—[To the Editor.]—Although I get good distance with my driver, I am greatly handicapped by slicing. What can I do to correct this fault? G. SHAW.

Answer—I suggest that you shorten your back swing temporarily. Roll your wrists and do not swing to your left foot until the club head has come in contact with the ball.

You are timing your stroke badly, causing the club head to cut across the ball. A common cause for slicing is tightening the grip on the downward swing, thereby stiffening the arms and blocking the snap of the wrist upon which depends control.

The simplest and best remedy is as suggested. Practice with a short easy swing until control is established.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—In making my half mashie shots occasionally my right forearm tightens and spoils the shot. How can I get rid of this fault? L. KITCHELL.

Answer—You probably are trying too hard to help the club do the work. Get rid of your feeling of responsibility. Relax your mind and all your muscles. Throw the club head with a free, easy swing and take results. You will find that the club head can best do the work without supervision or aid from you after the swing has been started.

OAK PARK.

In the thrift stamp event at Oak Park C. L. Peniston won the low gross and T. S. Swirles the low net with 91—19—72. One hundred and ten players competed.

PUTT OF 30 FEET BY CHICK EVANS WINS BIG MATCH

McLeod Shoots a 67.

Par for the 6,346 yard course is 70, and in the morning McLeod led with a card of 67. Barnes came next with 69, Hagen being 71 and Evans 73. The Chicago star appeared to be off with his long iron shots and was putting only indifferently well. The morning match finished even.

In the afternoon the match was still even at the turn, McLeod winning the short thirteenth with a 2, only to lose this advantage when Hagen ran down a birdie 3 on the fourteenth. McLeod had a chance to become dormie 1 up at the seventeenth, but missed a three foot putt for a 3, and Evans sank his long putt on the final hole to win the match, scoring 71 for the round.

Included in the gallery were scores of officials of the government and many army and navy officers. An airplane of the aerial mail service, driven by Capt. Weideman, U. S. S. C., performed flying stunts over the course, while the afternoon round was in progress. Chicagoans in the gallery were Donald Edwards, William I. Howland, Charles B. Field, and Frank C. Lewin.

JOINS NAVY

Art Staff, Winner of "Tribune's" Silver Skates Derby, Enlists at Great Lakes.

ART STAFF

FOLLOWING the example of other well known skaters who have joined the colors, Art Staff, winner of THE TRIBUNE's first Silver Skates derby and former indoor and outdoor international amateur champion, has enlisted in the navy and now is in the detention camp at Great Lakes Naval Training station. Staff learned to speed on the steel blades on local park lagoons. He won many amateur titles, then turned professional last winter.

As a pro Staff defeated Harley Davidson, after which he raced Norval Baptie, but owing to a misunderstanding of officials and a bad spill by Staff, this pair never settled the question of supremacy.

Staff, who has received a rating of carpenter's mate, will be a valuable addition to the athletic department at the station.

Staff is the last of the "big four" of local skating circles to join the service. Roy McWhirter, Art Reed, Sigurd (Brick) Larsen, and Fred Buendgen are the others.

BIKERS SCORCH TODAY AS THEY DID YEARS AGO

Hundred Cyclists to Race in Handicap Contest This Morning.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

In an effort to revive bicycle racing in Chicago, the game which has been dormant for twenty years or more, the Franklin Skating and Athletic club, assisted by every old time bicycle enthusiast in the city, will hold a ten mile handicap race this morning over the five-eighths mile course at Palmer square.

The club, which has worked hard to arouse interest in the event, has secured seventy-three entries.

"Farmer" Blum to Race.

Those interested in the game, which was one of the main sports on the calendar before the automobile came along, will remember William "Farmer" Blum, who won the big Chicago road race in 1901. Jules Arens, Fred Schlewitt, and Earl McIntosh are others who will ride today.

Matsadi Otanni of Tokio, who is a pupil of A. A. Stagg's coaching class at the University of Chicago, will be active referee. The Jap is learning how to teach American athletics to his countrymen and is much interested in the bicycle racing game. William Gerschow, a member of the west Chicago commissioners, will be honorary referee, and Walter Eckersall of THE TRIBUNE will be starter. The race will start at 10 o'clock.

Uniform Mileage

The Crowning Tire Triumph—Due to Uniform Tires—Built by Champions

A MIGHTY response has greeted Miller's announcement that Uniform Tires are now an achieved fact. That this world-gift is ready—that stabilized mileage is here after years of vain trials.

Previously, Miller Tires differed in mileage as others do. Now 99 Millers in 100 outrun standard guarantees.

Mechanical methods do not account for this triumph. For they are shared by all makers.

But Tires contain much handwork. And Miller has excelled by conquering "human variables."

To make workmanship uniform, Miller had to make workmen uniform. They had to take picked men only. Then they had to make each man a master tire builder.

Tires 99% Excellent

Today these Miller experts are called world champions.

Their personal efficiency averages about 96 per cent. Less than one per cent of the tires they build need adjustment.

That means that Millers are 99 per cent excellent.

Our Allotment Limited

Such tires as these cannot be produced without limit. For picked men are rare.

It takes years to make champions. Miller output, therefore, is bound to be limited. So if you want to be sure of getting Miller's this year, order your set at once.

Miller Cord Tires are the fine, big fellows with the extra large air capacity. There is nothing more luxurious, yet they cost less per mile than the regulation type.

REDS START OFF WITH SIX RUNS, BUT GIANTS WIN

Kauff's Homer with Two on Bases Big Factor in 8 to 7 Victory.

New York, June 15.—[Special.]—The Giants won a sensational uphill game from Cincinnati, 8 to 7. Causey, a young local pitcher, starting his first big league game, was batted hard, Cincinnati getting a six run lead. The score was tied in the seventh, when Kauff hit a home run with two on base.

New York won in the ninth. Burns doubled and reached third on a fielder's choice. Fletcher hit a short fly to Neale, whose throw to the plate would have retired Burns, but Wingo failed to stop the ball. Score:

SWIFTS TAKE LEAD IN YARDS LEAGUE BY 2 TO 1 TRIUMPH

Swift & Co. went into first place in the Stockyards league by defeating Libby, McNeill & Libby, 2 to 1, at Hamilton park. The game was a twirling duel between Gollings and Conlon. The latter allowed fewer hits, but Gollings was better in the pinches. Gollings helped win his own game when he grabbed the first hit off Conlon in the sixth, stole second, and scored on a single by Vilim. The game should have finished 1 to 0, for the other two tallies of the game came on errors. Score:

PLAYGROUNDS BOYS, 7,000 STRONG, ENTER BIG 'TRIBUNE' MEET

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

With nearly 7,000 boys, representing sixty-nine playgrounds, coached and trained for their best efforts, interest of Chicago's kid athletic world will center around the preliminaries in THE TRIBUNE's first annual playground athletic tournament to be held in eight districts of the city next Saturday. The finals will be decided in Grant park June 29.

Through the coöperation of the bureau of parks, playgrounds, and bathing beaches THE TRIBUNE has been successful in its endeavor to interest the boys in the first city-wide tournament ever held. Reports of directors of the various playgrounds show the boys have taken unusual interest in the contests, which have given them an idea of athletic training which will make them strong and sturdy in their youth and fit them to fight the great battles of the world when they reach the age of manhood.

Boys Start Training Early.

Since first announcement of the tournament was made the boys, encouraged by the directors, have trained. Long before the snow was off the ground some contestants started work in various gymnasiums, while others took part in long hikes to improve their wind and make their legs stronger.

As soon as the weather became warm enough to permit outdoor training the boys settled down in earnest. They were given marks which they must equal or better to win enough points to place them high enough in the all-around standing to qualify for the finals. They were efficient in some events, but poor in others at the start of their work. As the training days wore on they rectified their faults in certain contests and improved so much in others that some sterling boy performances should be made in the course of the tournament.

Benefits Reach Great Number.

The number of boys actually competing is really far fewer than the number who have derived benefits. Directors have entered only the boys whom they believe to have chances to win in the preliminaries. The average of actual contestants from each playground will be about 100. Practically every one of them is as physically fit as boys of their ages can be.

In order that none of the boys shall suffer any bad effects from too much competition, the health department will detail a city physician to each playground where the preliminary trials are held. It will be his duty to stop any contestant from further competition who shows the slightest signs of exhaustion. The physician also will take care of skin bruises resulting from any falls on the track.

Deputy Commissioner of Public Works William Burkhardt will detail police to each playground to keep the track and jumping pits clear of spectators.

Surveyors Measure the Tracks.

During the last week city surveyors have been sent to each playground to lay out the courses and to see that all tracks are accurately measured. This was done to avoid protests.

John Richards, superintendent of playgrounds and sports of the south parks system, has issued a permit for the use of Grant park for the finals. He also said that the track at the foot of Monroe street would be put in shape and the pits installed by employés of the system.

As performances of each contestant will have to be tabulated in the preliminaries in order to get perfect all-around scores, officials or athletes living in the vicinity of the playgrounds where the trials will be held are asked to volunteer their services either in the morning or afternoon. They are requested to report to the director in charge of the trials at any one of the eight districts.

Grammar Division in Morning.

Owing to the large number of contestants, preliminaries in the grammar school division will be held in eight districts in the morning. The first event will be called at 10 o'clock. Contests in the open division will be held in the afternoon, with the first event called at 2 o'clock.

Supt. Gross of the playground system will be in general charge of the day's preliminaries. He will be assisted by H. J. Fischer, who is in charge of athletic activities at the grounds, while every director in the system will be pressed into service in some capacity. Following are the districts in which the trials will be held together with the playground and its location, where the trials will be held, and the directors who will have charge.

Ravenswood district—Field branch playground, North Shore and Greenview avenues; W. P. Sonnenleiter in charge.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—A man makes a hit and overslides second base and is called out. Does he get credit for a single or a double? Also, if a batter overslides third base, does he get credit for a double or triple? J. S.

Answer.—A single in the first case and a double in the second case, provided, of course, the play was so close the runner had to slide and failed to touch, or hang to the base after touching it. If a player overruns a base too far and is nipped trying to get back he gets credit for as many bases as he makes on his hit.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—What is a Texas leaguer in regard to a fly ball? Does it have to be a ball impossible for any fielder to reach or is it usually one which falls between two fielders and which either can reach but waits for the other to catch? W. A. LEE.

Answer.—"Texas leaguer" is used to indicate any pop fly between the infield and outfield, whether or not it is caught and whether or not it could have been caught. If caught, it is a Texas league fly, if not caught a Texas league hit.

PILOT IS VICTOR IN YACHT EVENT

FOSTERS ANNEX 9 TO 2 VICTORY AT GARDEN CITY

Rout Mitchell by Piling Up Seven Runs in Three Rounds.

Rube Foster's American Giants bumped the Garden City nine, 9 to 2, at Garden City park. Wickwear, for the Giants, allowed only five bingles. The Giants leaped on Mitchell, who started for Garden City, and in three innings had seven runs. Then Eddie Griffin of Burlington went to the slab and held the Negro aggregation safe the rest of the way. Dixon starred for the visitors with a single, double, and triple. About 1,500 fans turned out to see the fracas. Score:

TENER UPHOLDS ROBINS' PROTEST

New York, June 15.—President Tener of the National league today sustained the protest of the Brooklyn club and the game between the St. Louis and Brooklyn teams played at Brooklyn on June 3 has been stricken from the records and ordered replayed.

In the sixth inning Baird of St. Louis was on second when the batsman hit a fly to center. Baird started with the pitch and had touched third base, but when he realized the possibility of a catch he ran back toward second. The ball was not caught and Baird, from a position fifteen or twenty feet from third, cut across the diamond and scored. Umpire Rigler allowed the run on the ground that the runner was not required to touch third base a second time; that he had not run out of line to avoid being touched, and that no play had been made on him at the home plate.

Quoting section 13 of rule 36, President Tener decided that it clearly applied in this instance, and that when Baird retraced his steps toward second he nullified whatever technical right he had acquired to third, and when he again tried for home he was "advancing," and it was necessary for him to touch all bases in order.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

By A. R. Metcalfe

IT is often necessary, especially when playing no-trump declarations, to encourage the enemy to attack the wrong position.

An old but very clever method is illustrated in the deal following:

West secured ten tricks.

The trick used by west at trick 1 is among the oldest in the game, but it is never detected. West knew that north would switch to spades if the queen of diamonds won the first trick. It was impossible, of course, to secure game without establishing the club suit.

North could only place the queen of diamonds with his partner and naturally led a low diamond at trick 4.

It was necessary for west or east to have the ten of diamonds in order to make this play. Having a suit headed by king-ten, north would lead the king if he knew his partner held the queen.

South might have the queen alone, but, holding more of the suit, he would recognize his partner's demand and play the queen upon the king.

The discard of west at trick 8 was intended to induce north to throw away his remaining diamonds. It could hardly succeed in this deal after south had refused the suit, but it did no harm to try. The best players are careless at times.

The play in the next deal is more important, as more opportunities occur for its use. It is called the bluff lead.

West secured nine tricks.

The declarer had a melancholy prospect after dummy put down his wretched cards. Even the club suit was spoiled by the singleton in the east hand.

The best chance for west was to have clubs or diamonds led by his adversaries, and he therefore led a spade from dummy—the suit of which he was most afraid.

Had he failed to deceive the enemy no harm would have been done, as north and south were certain to play spades if west started any other suit.

The diamond suit worked out splendidly for west, and the club discard at trick six was even better.

The blame for this play should rest with north. Had the ten of spades been won with the queen at trick two south might have divined the ruse which west had employed. It was a useless false card play, and taken in connection with the fact that north appeared to be guarding something in clubs, completely deceived south.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—My partner bid one spade and the next player passed. I had one little spade, five hearts to the jack, ten, and nothing else in my hand. Should I have taken my partner out with two hearts? I did not, and she lost fifty points. When do you take your partner out of suit bid? J. A. F.

Ans.—You should not bid from the hand you describe, except to take your parnter out of one no-trump.

No serious harm could result from the bid of one spade, but that would not be true of a two-heart bid. You should congratulate yourself on getting out of a bad deal cheaply.

You should take your partner out of a suit bid—

1. When you can make a declaration which offers a better chance for game.
2. When your partner has bid one in a suit which you cannot support, and you have a good bid in some other suit or at no-trump.

BOXER MILLER REAL FIGHTER AGAINST HUNS

BY RAY PEARSON.

"Over there" battling the Hun for the big decision is a young Chicago lad who hand a clout to any argument that the boys in the pugilistic game aren't doing their bit. His name is John Miller, but he is more familiarly known as "Jack." Of course a lot of folks reading this will say, "Who is Jack Miller?"

JACK MILLER

Before going further the writer will tell something about Miller. The kid has made Chicago his home for three years. He left St. Louis with his family when he was 18 years old. Before going, Miller's education in boxing hadn't been neglected. In St. Louis he frequented the Future City Athletic club, which used to stage boxing shows. The Future City club was in charge of Brooklyn Tommy Sullivan, about fifteen years ago a mighty clever featherweight. So in boxing at the St. Louis club Miller became a pretty smart boy with the padded mitts.

Drops In at Howard's Gym.

Then came the move to Chicago and one day a young man showed up at the Arcade gymnasium and told Kid Howard, the proprietor, that he wanted to box some one. Howard gave him the once over, told him to strip and get on togs. Miller weighed 116 pounds and for his inaugural gym performance in Chicago Howard sent him against one of the good amateur bantams. It was a grand success for Miller. He showed considerable boxing ability and with it a good head and a world of fighting spirit.

The young chap kept right along with the game after that, and almost all of his spare time was spent in the gymnasium. He boxed with all the amateurs and professionals of his weight. But that didn't satisfy him.

"Give me a crack at some of the heavier fellows," he said to Howard one day. But Howard paid no attention, for he didn't want to take the chance of spoiling a good prospect.

Kid Makes Good.

"Anyone with the fighting spirit of that kid will make good in any game," said Howard. Finally Miller got a couple of professional tilts and showed that he possessed the goods by winning.

But while the kid was getting wise to the pugilistic wrinkles, he was not neglecting another game, that of making a living. He got a job working for a fire insurance company, and there, too, he made good in a hurry. He held a good job until war was declared on Germany.

Private John Miller enlisted in a local infantry regiment of the Illinois national guard April 3, 1917. Then came the move for Miller from Chicago to Camp Logan, which was followed by another to Camp Upton, and on his arrival in the New York army camp he had moved up to the rank of second lieutenant.

On May 15 he was among a lot of others who crossed the water and he is now battling the Germans in France.

FEATURE EVENT TO MADAM MAC

Madam Mac, 2:07¾, the big, free-legged pacing mare, was the star of yesterday's west side matinée racing. Lillian T., 2:02¾, placed the season's track record at 2:09¼. Those two fast trotting rivals, Algier U. and Glenard, met again, and this time the veteran Dave Leary had the winner in Algier U. Charley Hazzard, E. J. Moriarity's good 2 year old, scored his third straight victory. Summaries:

KENWOOD CLUB WINNER AT CHESS

Final standings in the city tournament conducted by the Chicago City Chess league show the Kenwood club winner with a percentage of .688. This gives the club a leg on the silver cup, on which the Northwest Chess club won a leg in 1916 and the Chicago Chess and Checker club a leg in 1917. The cup must be won twice for permanent possession. K. T. Lundeberg of Kenwood stood highest among the individuals in this year's tourney. All prizes are thrift stamps. Standings:

Company E was second with 35½, and Company B third with 16.

Whiteside won first places in the high and low hurdles and cleared the bar in the high jump at 5 feet 2 inches for another five points. His performances were considered good because he did little training for the contests. Private Gillespie of the winning company team gave his teammate able assistance by scoring ten points.

The officers' sixty yard dash was won by Second Lieut. Kane of Company G. He got away to a good start and ran the distance in :08. The twelve pound shotput was won by Northrum, who will be remembered as a Hyde Park High school athlete in the late '90s. He was an added starter and shoved the ball 39 feet 5 inches.

One hundred and ten members of the regiment took part in the competition, which was seen by 3,000 persons. Summaries:

SUMMER MUSKIE FISHING.

THE best season of the year to take muskies, in our opinion, is October, when there is an Indian summer haze in the air and the mornings and evenings make a leather lined vest or sweater coat feel "comfy." So many of us, however, must take our "measly l'il ol' two weeks" in the summer that a few hints on summer muskie fishing may not now be out of place.

The angler ambitious to take a "big feller," who cannot wait until autumn, should go as early in the season as possible, and thus avoid the heated period, when the muskies often have trouble with their teeth and have the irritating, to put it politely, habit of merely following your lure instead of taking a healthy wallop at it.

Muskie fishermen generally can be put in three classes—to wit: as the law sharks say: first, we have the novice, who "feels confident" that he can land, on bass tackle, any muskellunge which is suicidal enough to pick out his particular lure to strike. Secondly, there is the old timer, who knows where he is at. Finally, we have with us, folks, Old Safety First, who totes a young clothesline, a sapling, and terminal tackle to match.

Of the two extremes perhaps the latter has the edge on the light tackle novice, since he is less likely to smash his tackle and lose a big fish if one happens to strike, but, chosen with a little horse sense, muskie tackle can be amply strong without being coarse and clumsy.

One of the most successful anglers we know uses a 5½ foot, two piece bamboo rod weighing about six ounces, a number three reel, and a line testing about eighteen pounds. He lands many big fish on this rig, although, of course, many ten and twelve pounders fall before a big lunker comes along.

And right here let us emphasize that fact. The displays of taxidermists and old muskie fishermen leads the novice to believe that thirty pound muskies are as common as black flies. They're not. We know an expert angler who has fished in Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Canada for twenty-six consecutive years and has yet to get one over twenty-eight pounds. Then, on the other hand, a friend of ours went north for the first time a few years ago and got a forty-two pounder the second day out—that's what makes the game so interesting!

The best natural bait for muskies is the black sucker, but they are not always to be had. A Chicago angler has solved the problem by using the common white sucker, and he says it is just about as good. He gets them from a market fisherman and ships them up packed in ice. For that matter any minnow or other fish weighing about half a pound will turn the trick if Sir Muskie is in ye mood—and if he isn't, that's an end to't. Nor is the common frog to be sneezed at. Either with or without a spinner it makes a tempting lure to a hungry fish.

The tendency is to use spinners that are too large, especially if the water is reasonably clear. There is nothing in the idea that a spoon the size of a tin plate is particularly attractive to big fish; and in most cases a medium size, say a number five, six, or seven, is a better killer.

Spinners are often used with the old style treble hooks concealed by a bunch of guinea feathers, but anglers are learning that they are not as reliable hookers as the single hook nor as attractive as many of the newer bucktail lures. Bucktail, in the water, has a little wriggle all its own that you can never get with feathers, and the modern bucktail "fly" with a single hand forged hook is now the choice of those who have had opportunity to make comparisons.

The ideal day for muskie fishing is when the sky is overcast and there is just enough wind to put a riffle on the water. On such a day the muskies are fired with an ambition to lay in a supply of fodder. Perhaps they think that it is going to storm and that they had better make provision for a period of poor hunting. Of course, nobody knows what a muskie thinks, but then it doesn't cost any more to think about it anyway!

Remember: a darkish day and a riffle on the water—and may your tackle and your nerve both meet the test when the granddaddy of 'em all takes hold!

PEEL PRESIDES AT SOCCER MEET

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 15.—[Special.]—The fifth annual meeting of the council of the United States Amateur Football association, the governing body of soccer football in this country, opened today at the William Penn hotel and will continue until tomorrow night, when the election of officers will wind up the business of the meeting. President Peter J. Peel of Chicago presided at the opening session and several delegates were present from various parts of the country.

The morning session was devoted to a discussion of rule changes, nineteen of which are proposed. At the banquet tonight the national challenge cup, presented by Sir Thomas R. Dewar of Perth, Scotland, was handed to William Sheridan, manager of the champion Bethlehem Steel works team. Addresses were made by President Peel and others.

BELMONT STAKES FOR WHITNEY NAG

New York, June 15.—Harry Payne Whitney's imported Johren added another race to his increasing string of victories at Belmont park racetrack this afternoon when he distanced a field of four and won the Belmont stakes at a mile and a quarter. His time was three seconds slower than the record, but he won in superb fashion. He finished in 2:20 2-5.

War Cloud, A. K. Macomber's entry for the stake, finished second and made a game effort against Johren, but was worn down in the stretch.

Lanius and Cum Sah were prominent for a time, but gave up to their stronger rivals. Each of the horses went to the post with 126 pounds.

Maj. August Belmont's Lucullite, which has shown remarkably well in workouts, was scratched, a disappointing feature, for he was rated as an even chance with Johren and War Cloud. The latter was favorite in the betting.

The ninth inning found Providence one run ahead—score, 7 to 6. Chicago must get two to win, one to tie. One man was out and one on third base. Kelly had reached first base on a safe hit. Anson at bat. It looked like one run in and a tie at the worst. Kelly was leading off first to coax a throw and give the man on third the chance to score, but Radbourne was too foxy for that. He held Kelly on first long enough for the fatal play that was as follows:

Anson batted a swift ball to the ground and it landed in George Wright's hands on the first bound. A double play, the side out, and the league championship for Providence was what it looked like. George Wright, always rather fond of posing on the ball field, spilled the beans, by the aid of Mike Kelly. With Kelly the game was never out till it was played out. At the crack of the ball from Anson's bat he set sail for second base. Wright had oceans of time, but he chose to make a showy play. His foot on the second base bag and Kelly was out on a force. There was no hurry about firing the ball to Joe Start and completing the double play, as Anson was a rather slow runner.

Kel Bumps George Wright.

But Kelly didn't seme to know when he was out. He kept right on to second base at the gait of an express train and a good deal of its force. Just as Wright had raised his arm to throw to first base Kelly bumped into him pell mell, the ball went fifteen feet over Joe Start's head, and into the bleachers. Anson easily made the circuit, with the man on third ahead of him. The game was won by the White Stockings, 8 to 7, and the league championship was won with it.

Harry Wright made a dreadful kick over Kelly's "interference," but the umpire ruled that Kelly had the right of way on the base line and the two runs were scored.

Ball players of the long ago period were not like their fellows of 1918, born with gold spoons in their mouths. The epoch of princely salaries had not dawned. They traveled in ordinary sleeping cars at night, when they could get them. If not, they sat up. No special Pullmans for them.

Sox Captain's Salary $2,000.

Jimmy Wood, second baseman and captain of the White Stockings of 1870, got $400 a month for five months' play. John McGraw, manager and field captain of the New York Giants, is supposed to receive $30,000 a year. Excepting Wood, no man in the Chicago team of 1870 received more than $300 a month; some of them only $200 a month.

MANUFACTURING PROPERTY IS ACTIVE

FRANKLIN PARK DEAL FEATURE OF THE WEEK

Foundry Site Conveyed to Steel Company for $400,000.

Owing to a spurt of activity at the close of the week the real estate market was able to make a fairly good showing, though hardly up to that of the previous week. There were several encouraging features, however, notably the activity in manufacturing property, the purchase by the Congress Hotel company from the Merchants Loan and Trust company, trustee, of the Ethel Field Beatty trust of the fee at 508 South Michigan avenue, under the Congress hotel, the reported lease of the Chicago theater property at Wabash avenue and Eighth street, and the continued activity in cheap properties, the number of recorded instruments last week showing only a slight falling off as compared with the corresponding week a year ago.

Apartment property made only a fair showing, as did residence property.

Franklin Park Deal.

Transactions in manufacturing property were distinctly the feature of the week's market, in one of which, filed for record late in the week, the Franklin Park Foundry company conveyed to the Northwestern Steel corporation, said to be a Minneapolis concern, the plant of the former in Franklin Park, for an indicated consideration of $400,000. One transfer ran to the Northwestern Steel corporation, with $350 worth of stamps on it, and another with $50 worth of stamps covered the transfer to Hosmer A. Brown of a number of parcels of residence and vacant property in Franklin Park. In connection with the transaction the grantee company gave a trust deed to the Chicago Title and Trust company securing a loan of $400,000, due April 1, 1928, at 7 per cent. It is said the grantee company plans to make extensive improvements and occupy the premises with its business. The property, unoccupied for several years, formerly was occupied by the Forster-Waterbury company. The land comprises about ten acres, the improvements consisting of a two story office building and a one story foundry building covering about two acres. It is said that the actual consideration was in excess of $400,000, stock also figuring in the transaction.

Buys Locomotive Plant.

Chicago Heights furnished one of the most important of the transactions in the deal by which the Parrett Tractor company, a Delaware corporation, has acquired by quitclaim conveyance from Thomas Barbour, trustee, et al., the former plant of the Central Locomotive and Car works, the revenue stamps on the deed indicating that $250,000 was paid for the property, no incumbrance showing.

The property is on Seventeenth street, about two blocks east of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad right of way, and comprises between eleven and twelve acres. The improvements consist of four one and two story buildings, occupied as machine shop, erecting shop, and warehouses. It will be recalled that the purchasing company a few months ago sold its plant in South Chicago to the Liberty Car and Equipment company.

In an important deal in the Clearing industrial district, involving an extensive improvement, H. D. Crooks, owner of the Chicago Storage and Transfer company, has purchased from the Chicago Transfer and Clearing company a tract of 67,000 square feet of land in West Sixty-fifth street, and has employed the Walter company, engineers and contractors, to construct thereon a one story building twenty feet high containing 40,000 square feet of floor space, with concrete shipping platforms, and served by the Belt Railway of Chicago, to cost between $80,000 and $90,000. The building will have a floor carrying capacity of about 1,000 pounds per square foot, which, with the installation of modern piling and conveying machinery, will double the ordinary capacity of the building.

History of Building.

The purchasing company started business at this point five years ago with a three story building containing 66,000 square feet of floor space, erected by the Clearing company and occupied under a lease, which property has since been purchased and an additional building 342 feet wide erected connecting with the original building. The last addition will give about 200,000 square feet of storing space, with a continuous frontage on Sixty-fifth street of about 800 feet. Louis B. Beardslee was the broker.

The Weller Manufacturing company conveyed to the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, which takes title for a purchaser whose name is withheld, the former plant of the Weller company in North avenue, 150 feet west of Clybourn avenue, lot 150x149 feet, north front, improved with three story brick and steel manufacturing building, which is at present vacant. The revenue stamps on the deed indicate the consideration was $60,000.

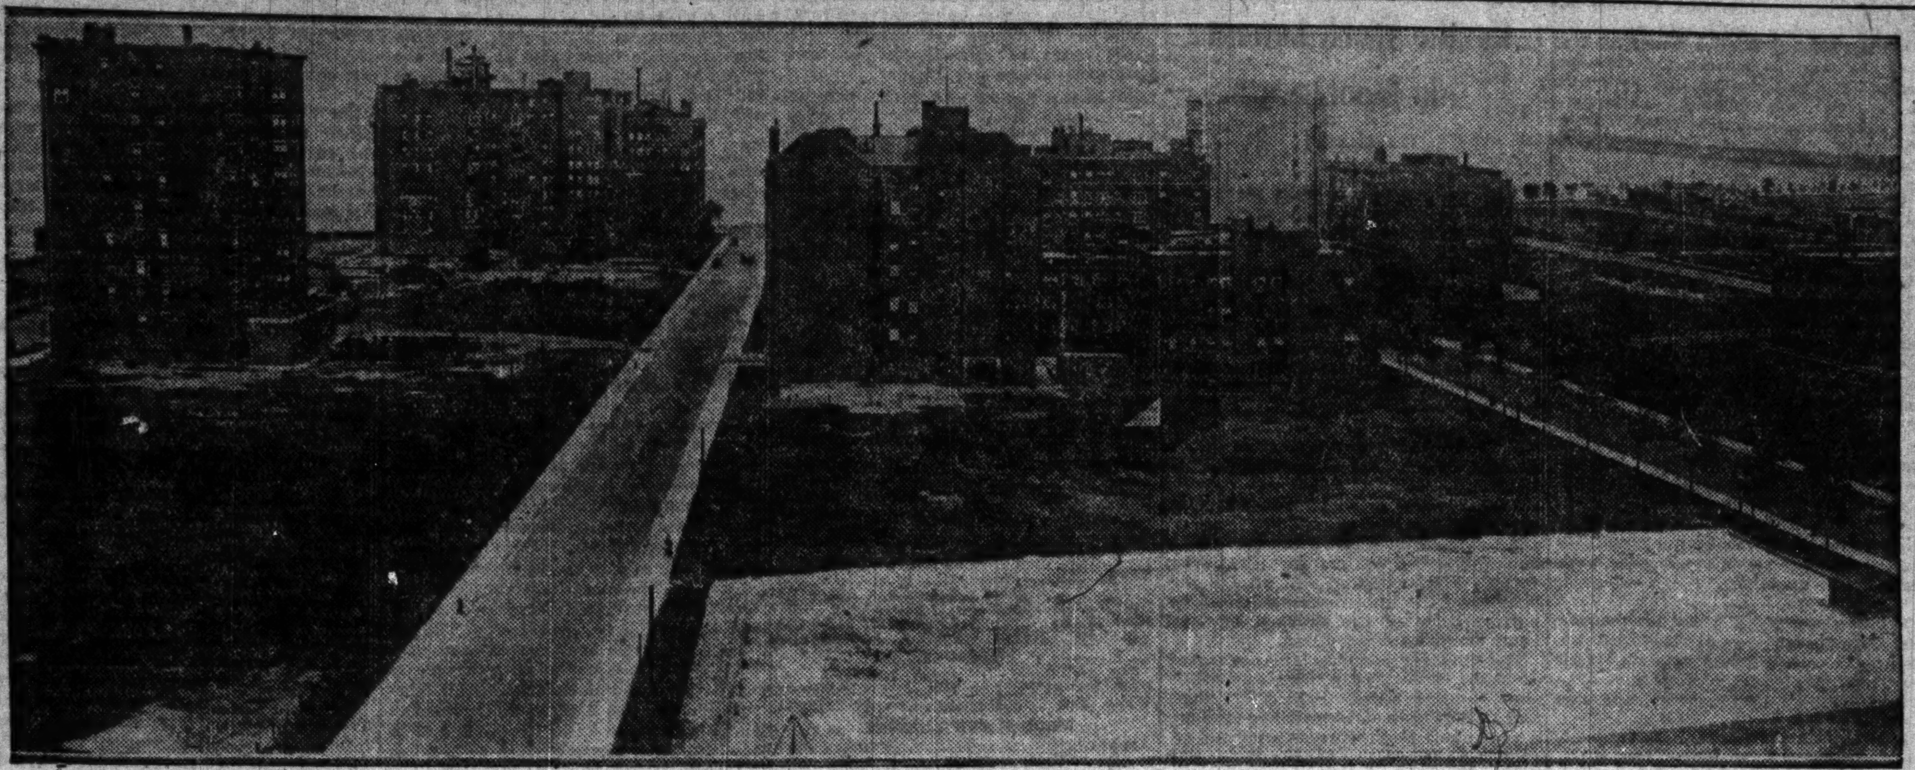
Record was made of the transfer by the trustee of the Bryce Pie company to the Purity Cake company of the property at the southeast corner of Lincoln and Walnut streets, 60x100 feet, with factory improvements, for an indicated consideration of $18,500, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000.

Seventy-fifth Street Corner Property Sold

A transaction of unique interest has been closed in the sale by John J. arrity to Charles D. Abercrombie of the property at the southeast corner of Seventy-fifth street and Euclid avenue for an indicated consideration of $17,940, subject to an incumbrance of $17,940. The improvements comprise a one story building occupeid as a saloon, and it is said the value of the property consists in the fact that the territory immediately to the east and north is "dry." Peter Foote & Co. were the brokers.

CHICAGO'S SMARTEST FLAT COLONY

Here's a Glimpse of "Streeterville," the City's Newest and Most Fashionable District for Ultra High Grade Apartments.



"Streeterville," with its plebeian name and elegant and fashionable habitations, presents one of the most interesting studies in a real estate development way in the history of Chicago. With its present land values running all the way from $350 to $1,200 a front foot, it is not to be wondered at that the doughty "Cap'n" George Wellington Streeter put up a long sustained and spectacular fight to establish his self-made claims to the ownership of the "deestrict."

Its boundaries probably may be said to be Pearson street on the south, the outer drive on the east, the Oak street extension of the drive on the north, and North Michigan avenue, formerly Lincoln parkway, on the west. While there are more costly and elegant apartment buildings in other cities, notably New York, and in some other parts of Chicago, it probably is safe to say that in proportion to the total number of buildings in the district, it contains a larger number of ultra high grade apartment buildings than are to be found in the same area in any other city in the world.

Rentals run from $2,400 to $7,500 a year, and the apartments represent about the last word in luxurious appointments and generally attractive surroundings. The first of the high buildings, a nine story structure, was erected by Ogden T. McClurg at the bend in the drive, and its success was so immediate that it was quickly followed by others, and with a steady appreciation in the value of the land, despite the annoyance occasioned by the Streeter claims.

The above picture is taken from North Michigan avenue, just south of Walton place, looking towards the lake, the government pier showing in the right background. The buildings in the left foreground face on the Oak street extension, the first one being known as "188 Lake Shore drive," owned by Marshall & Fox. Delaware place is the first street to the right of Walton place, Chestnut street coming next.

FLAT PROPERTY AT LOW RECORD IN WEEK'S TRADES

Twenty-four Apartment House Sold to John H. Birren.

As indicated elsewhere, apartment property did not cut much of a figure in the week's market, although the showing was about up to that of the previous week.

The most important transaction was the sale by Thomas E. Grubb and Joseph J. Verplank to John H. Birren of the twenty-four apartment building on 95x120 feet of ground at 7632-38 North Marshfield avenue, being 179 feet south of Jonquil terrace, east front, for an indicated consideration of $88,500, subject to an incumbrance of $66,500. The apartments contain four and five rooms and the building is said to have a gross annual rental of about $12,000.

Mr. Birren conveyed in exchange the property at the southeast corner of Broadway and Catalpa avenue, improved with a store and flat building having an annual rental of $3,700, for an indicated consideration of $27,000, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000; also the vacant 75x125 feet, east front, in Kedzie avenue, 151 feet south of Montrose avenue, subject to $1,800, and a two flat building at 4450 North Artesian avenue, subject to $3,600, and property in Park Ridge. J. E. Renninger of Whiteside & Wentworth was the broker.

A noteworthy transaction in Evanston apartment property covers the twelve apartment building known as "The Illinois" building, at the northwest corner of Monroe and Sherman avenue, on a lot 50x125 feet, which has been purchased by Dr. Phillip Sattler from Fred W. Thumm for an indicated consideration of $40,000, subject to an incumbrance of $25,000. The purchaser conveyed in exchange for the equity the four flat building at 1360 Austin avenue and the 190x125 feet of vacant on Congress street between Albany and Kedzie avenues. Louis J. Krejci was the broker.

The twenty-two apartment building at the northwest corner of Flournoy street and Spaulding avenue, having a gross annual rental of $8,240, has been conveyed by Edward Carson to Harry C. Luders for an indicated consideration of $50,000, subject to an incumbrance of $27,500. In connection with this transaction Albert R. Fricke conveyed the equity in the six apartment building at 5316-18 Michigan avenue, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000, and Harry C. Luders conveyed to Bird Manheimer the three brick residences at 2626-30 Wilcox street for a reported consideration of $6,000, clear. The Logan Square Bond and Realty company represented all parties.

Edward J. Piggott has conveyed to Anna Ahern the seven story apartment building with 75x180 feet of ground at 3714-18 Lake Park avenue, having a gross annual rental of about $12,000, for a reported consideration of $92,500, subject to an incumbrance of $30,000. The purchaser conveyed for the equity the property at the southwest corner of Ninety-first street and Baltimore avenue, lot 75x125 feet, with frame and brick store and flat improvements, at an indicated consideration of $33,000, subject to $7,000 incumbrance, three acres on Main street on the river at Burnham, eight acres in the town of Worth, and nine parcels of vacant south of Jackson park. Byron M. Hopkins & Sons were the brokers.

The twelve apartment building of four rooms each on 37x144 feet of ground at the southeast corner of Winnemac and Glenwood avenues, having a gross annual rental of $5,100, has been conveyed by John T. Wheeler of Baird & Warner to Herman Franze and wife, for an indicated consideration of $33,000, subject to an incumbrance of $18,000, the purchaser conveying in exchange for the equity the ten room modern residence on 60x125 feet of ground at the northeast corner of Bernard avenue and Ainslie street at an indicated consideration of $15,000.

Charles Brosseit has purchased from Amelia Peters the property at the northwest corner of Diversey and Campbell avenues, lot 48x130 feet, south front, with flat improvements, for an indicated consideration of $37,000, subject to an incumbrance of $32,800. In part payment the purchaser conveyed the 38x145 feet in Clybourn avenue, 312 feet north of Rees street, for an indicated $11,000.

Harry I. Coy, wholesale grocer of South Chicago, has sold to Murray Wolbach the eight apartment building on 50x130 feet of ground at the southeast corner of Sixty-ninth place and Dorchester avenue for a reported consideration of $25,000, subject to an incumbrance of $14,000, taking in part payment vacant on West Seventy-ninth street, near Eggleston avenue. Byron M. Hopkins & Sons represented both parties and will have charge of the property.

Oliver F. Roberts has purchased from Clifford C. Farmer the apartment property in Clifton avenue, 104 feet north of Sunnyside avenue, lot 50x105 feet, east front, for an indicated consideration of $23,500, subject to an incumbrance of $13,500.

The apartment property at the southeast corner of Prairie avenue and Sixtieth street, lot 69x120 feet, has been conveyed by Julia M. Ranstead to Carl Ireneur for an indicated consideration of $25,000, subject to an incumbrance of $16,000.

Edward Mueller has conveyed to Henry A. Stolze the property in Drake avenue, 148 feet south of Leland avenue, lot 60x125 feet, east front, with flat improvements, for an indicated consideration of $25,000, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000.

I. C. WRECKING CORNER BUILDING ON 53D STREET

The Illinois Central Railroad company has begun wrecking the buildings at the northeast corner of Fifty-third street and Lake Park avenue preparatory to the construction of its new Hyde Park passenger station at that point. Bids for the work of construction are to be asked for next week, and it is expected to begin building operations about July 1. The proposed building will front 125 feet on Fifty-third street, extending from Lake Park avenue to the road's right of way, and with a depth of about 66 feet to the alley just south of the Hyde Park police station.

While all of the details have not been decided upon, the building probably will be two stories high and will cost in the neighborhood of $120,000. It will take care of both the through and the suburban traffic of the road, and it may be the road will rent some of the upper floor space for office purposes. It is expected to have the building completed about Nov. 1 next.

Navy Medical Director Fined for Hoarding Food

Washington, D. C., June 15.—Dr. Francis S. Nash, a medical director in the navy, was fined $1,000 today in the District of Columbia Supreme court after entering a plea of nolo contendere to a charge of unlawfully hoarding food stuffs. An identical charge against his wife, Caroline S. Nash, was dismissed.

CONGRESS HOTEL BUYS FIELD LOT ON SO. MICHIGAN

Property Under Lease to Company for 99 Years.

In the exercise of an option of purchase the Congress Hotel company has acquired from the Merchants Loan and Trust company, trustee in the Ethel Field Beattie trust, the fee at 508 South Michigan boulevard, under the Congress hotel, for $125,000. The property, which is sixty-two feet south of Congress street, has a frontage of 26 feet and is under lease to the hotel company for ninety-nine years from May 1, 1892, at an annual rental of $5,000, making the purchase on a 4 per cent basis.

The original lessee was William Fitzgerald, the lessor being C. W. Fullerton, on whose death the fee came into the possession of Jartha Hill, from whom it was acquired by the Merchants Loan and Trust company as trustee under the Ethel Field Beattie trust. The transaction has a special interest in the fact it is practically the first sale by the Field estate of any of its fees in the downtown district, although in the acquirement of the A. S. Trude property, at Wabash avenue and Randolph street, it was compelled to give in exchange the fee under the Corn Exchange bank and one under the Peoples Gas building. In the present transaction Albert L. Strauss was the broker.

An interesting transaction in North Avenue business property made a matter of record was the sale by Charles Stein to Michael Ilitz of the premises at the southeast corner of Wood street, lot 100x94 feet, improved with a three story and basement brick building, with six stores on the ground floor and apartments above, for an indicated consideration of $40,000, Mr. Ilitz giving back to the Chicago Title and Trust company a part purchase money mortgage for $20,000, five years, at 5½ per cent.

There was filed for record the quitclaim conveyance by the Regan & Dignan company to Harry A. McKinnon of the property in Halsted street 250 feet south of Twenty-ninth street, west front, 72x133 feet, with garage improvements, and the 25x133 feet of vacant, west front, twenty-five feet south of Twenty-ninth street. A nominal consideration is given, but the property is said to have sold for about $32,000.

The property in West Twelfth street seventy-three feet east of Turner avenue, lot 24x117 feet, north front, with store and flat improvements, has been conveyed by Samuel H. Wolk to Joseph Reeder for an indicated consideration of $27,000, subject to an incumbrance of $10,000.

$350,000 to Be Cost of Industrial Structure

Despite the government's opposition to all so-called nonessential building, there continues to be a fair amount of construction work, but mostly for factory and residential purposes.

It is stated R. C. Wieboldt, builder, will erect a three story factory building to cost about $350,000 on 468 feet of south frontage in Wabansia avenue, east of West Van Buren street, which he has purchased from the Isham estate. He is now constructing a one story sprinkled building on 175x125 feet opposite the Isham property to cost about $50,000.

John T. Fitzgerald of the legal firm of Kelly, Burns, Daly & Fitzgerald, plans the construction of forty bungalows and two flat buildings at Throop and Ninety-second streets to cost about $5,000 each. Because of the great industrial activity in the South Chicago and Calumet district there has been a sharply increased demand for living accommodations.

Albert J. Schorsch & Co., owners of a twenty acre subdivision bounded by Irving Park boulevard, Grace street, Austin avenue, and Meade street are constructing thirty-five bungalows and three and four flat buildings at a total cost of approximately $200,000.

GET RICH QUICK HIGH SCHOOL BOY LANDS IN COURT

Howard Webster determined to get rich quick and, my gawsh, how the money rolled in until an interruption in the form of the w. k. hand of the law occurred. Howard was arraigned yesterday before Judge Hugh J. Kearns in the South Clark street court on charges of larceny and forgery.

First, he was alleged to have diverted checks from the American Red Cross to the value of $311 while working in the offices of the United States food administration on June 10. He placed the checks on deposit at the Kedzie State bank. Then he is charged with having forged a check of $50 on Mrs. Bell Lund, 4643 North Campbell avenue. The third offense concerns the diamond ring of Laura Culver, 6140 Dorchester avenue, which disappeared in Webster's pocket, it is alleged.

After he had admitted the charges, Judge Kearns ordered him committed to Dr. W. J. Hickson of the city psychopathic laboratory for examination. Webster said he had tried to enlist in the army, but was rejected. Although but 19 years old, he registered in the last draft at board No. 34 in the Sabin school.

Mother Recovers from Effort to End Her Life

Miss Edna Irving, who tried to end her life on Friday because A. Frederick Tellander, the father of her two children, would not permit her to see her 3 year old boy, did not report for further treatment to the Iroquois hospital yesterday. It was said there that the emergency treatment given her after she had swallowed poison was sufficient to assure her recovery, and they are confident that she is now practically well. When Miss Irving was released from the South Clark street station Friday night, where she was held for a short time in the matron's quarters without being booked, she went to the home of some friends.

No Credit at Laundries Along the North Shore

There will be none except gentlefolks along the north shore after July 1, if there is any truth in the adage hat "a gentleman never owes the laundress."

All laundries have sent out notices to their patrons explaining that owing to the financial stress of the times it will be necessary after that date to collect for each washing as it is delivered.

The notice explains that the request is no reflection on the credit of the patron, but just the same the cash will be necessary.

Two Boys Arrested While Unearthing Jewelry Hoard

Police of the Fiftieth street station believe they have in custody the perpetrators of a number of burglaries on the south side through the arrest early yesterday of Frank Ribukoski, 17 years old, 6033 South State street, and Fred Stella, 16 years old, 6027 South State street. They were followed and arrested in a vacant lot on South State street, where they were digging up a hoard of jewelry and money. They are said to have confessed to robbing the home of R. A. Coleman, 512 West Sixty-fifth street.

SALE REPORTED OF A CHICAGO THEATER BLOCK

Aryan grotto No. 18, M. O. V. P. E. R., a Masonic organization, is said to have about completed negotiations for the purchase of the Chicago Theater building at the northeast corner of Wabash avenue and Eighth street, and the leasing of the ground, 83½x171 feet, for ninety-nine years at a reported annual rental of $10,750 for the first ten years, $12,000 for the succeeding ten years, and $14,000 for the remainder of the term. It is said the organization will use the property for its headquarters and sublet the building for conventions and similar purposes. The owner of the property is W. C. Seipp, who purchased it from Charles P. Treat in May, 1905, for $225,000. The board of review valued the property at $293,934, of which $30,000 is in the building. It is understood the lease calls for the erection of a building to cost not less than $100,000 within twenty-five years. The deal involves the cancellation of the unexpired part of a lease to Thomas P. Brooks, the bandmaster, for twenty-five years from Feb. 10, 1905, at a net yearly rental of $10,750. Shortly after the making of the lease the present building was erected and called Brooks' casino. Subsequently it was called the American Music hall, and later the Chicago theater.

Kenilworth Residence Is Transferred for $35,000

A transaction in high grade Kenilworth residence property was closed in the purchase by Harry Vissering, railway supply dealer, from Albert H. Gunnerson of the property at the northeast corner of Kenilworth avenue and Essex road, for an indicated consideration of $35,000. The house is an attractive ten room colonial brick structure on a lot 125x192 feet, with a two story garage in the rear. It was erected about two years ago after plans by Architect George W. Maher.

Fred M. Simpson has purchased from Emma D. Locke the nine room residence in Aldine place, 282 feet west of Broadway, lot 55x125 feet, for an indicated consideration of $20,000, subject to an incumbrance of $5,000.

Alice N. Macauley has bought from Florence C. Anderson the nine room stucco residence at 1445 Estes avenue for a reported consideration of $12,000. Baird & Warner were the brokers.

Transfer Figures for May Show Increase

The transfer figures for May are of an encouraging character, the number showing a marked increase over the three preceding months and on the whole making a favorable comparison with May, 1917. Thus, there were 4,441 filed for record with total consideration of $6,031,032, as against 4,873 with total consideration of $17,439,890 for May a year ago. The unusually large total consideration was due to a conveyance to the Pere Marquette Railroad company of $10,130,000. There were 3,330 trust deeds and mortgages, as against 4,424 a year ago, and 442 transfers under the Torrens system, with total consideration of $436,090, as against 500 and $462,190 for a year ago. Applications for initial registration were 45, as against 85 a year ago, a decrease of 40.

FEAR OF WAR TAX IS DEPRESSING TO REALTY LOANS

Investors Hesitate to Tie Up Money at Any Low Rate.

An interesting, not to say unpleasantly suggestive, situation has developed with reference to real estate loans as the result of the announced purpose of the government to secure additional revenue by a sharp increase in the income and excess profits tax. While Secretary McAdoo has not definitely stated what this proposed increase will be, it is intimated that it probably will aim to double the revenue now accruing from the sources named, amounting to about $4,000,000,000, making a total of about $8,000,000,000.

In the belief that if the war is protracted for one or two years more the government is likely to raise this huge sum to something like $12,000,000,000, many experienced mortgage loan brokers are of the opinion that the probable effect will be to greatly reduce the amount of money available for real estate loans or sharply advance interest rates, maybe both. This is so for the reason that large holders of either individual or corporate funds will not be willing to put their money into real estate loans drawing present interest rates for the reason their tax penalties will be so large as to reduce their net returns far below what they would receive by investing in government bonds, particularly the 3½ per cent nontaxable issue.

To Aid U. S. Bonds.

It undoubtedly is the policy of the government to make its bond issues so attractive that investors will prefer them to other securities, but it clearly is evident that the result will be a serious shortage of mortgage funds unless the interest rate is made so high as to make them attractive to investors.

As a matter of fact, some large lenders have already raised their interest charges, and within a few days the borrower in a choice 5½ per cent maturing loan was informed he would have to pay 6 per cent in case of its renewal. It looks as though it was fortunate for borrowers that owing to the big falling off in building operations, as well as the generally inactive condition of the real estate market, the demand for funds is on an exceedingly limited scale, as it is hard to escape the conclusion that borrowers in all probability will have to pay higher interest rates for such loans as they may secure.

Few Leases Reported.

There was nothing of any importance reported in the way of leases of business space, either downtown or outside, while nothing of any magnitude or special interest was reported in loans.

In a downtown loan Kate S. Carruthers gave a trust deed to the Chicago Title and Trust company to secure a loan of $48,000, five years, at 5½ per cent on the property at 212-16 South Clark street.

The same trust company is trustee in two loans of $50,000 and $30,000, respectively, each five years at 6 per cent, to John P. Sheehan, on the 273x125 feet, south front, in Sixty-third street, being the block between Western and Claremont avenues, with store and flat improvements.

The company also is trustee in a loan of $50,000, seven years, at 6 per cent, to Frank Schoenfeldt secured by the property at the northeast corner of West Madison street and Karlov avenue, lot 50x175 feet, with store, office, and flat improvements.

$37,500 Trust Deed.

In connection with the purchase by the Universal Draft Gear Attachment company from the Whiting Foundry Equipment company of the latter's plant in Harvey the Universal company has given a trust deed to the Chicago Title and Trust company to secure a loan of $37,500, four years, at 6 per cent.

The Merchants Loan and Trust company is trustee in a loan of $25,000, five years, at 6 per cent, to Charles W. Butterfield on the property at the southeast corner of Twenty-second street and Wabash avenue, lot 202x100 feet, with old improvements. B. W. Eisendrath negotiated the loan.

Chief Orders Police to Stop All Vice and Gambling

Acting Chief of Police Alcock yesterday called all the police captains into his office and issued positive instructions that vice and gambling had to be cleaned up at once.

BUILDING OWNERS AND MANAGERS MEET IN CHICAGO

Elaborate Program for Convention June 20, 21, and 22.

Building owners and managers, as well as real estate men in general, are much interested in the approaching convention of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, to be held at the Hotel La Salle June 20, 21, and 22. William M. Ellis, of Hall & Ellis is president, and an invitation has been extended to the members of the Chicago and Cook county boards, as well as all who may be interested in the proceedings of the convention.

In view of the problems now involved in connection with building operations, as well as management, born of the abnormal conditions resulting from the war, unusual interest will attach to the various papers which will be read touching upon some of the more vital questions with which building owners and managers have to deal.

78 Cities Represented.

The association is composed of more than 400 members from seventy-eight of the large cities throughout the United States and Canada and the valuation of the properties represented by the membership of this organization is second only to that represented by the American Bankers' association. The following program has been outlined:

"Business Maxims and Suggestions Worth While," Edward H. Doyle, owner of the Majestic building, Detroit.

"Readjustment in Building Operations to Meet Wartime Conditions," Earle Shultz, manager Commonwealth Edison building, Chicago.

"The Greatest Building Problem of Today—Building Confidence Between Capital and Labor," E. H. Davidson, manager properties of W. P. Davidson and L. W. Hill, St. Paul.

"The Investment Problem in Office Buildings," Edward A. Renwick of the firm of Holabird & Roche, Chicago.

"Your Relations to the Coal Problem as Buyers, Users, and Citizens," Osborn Monnett, United States fuel conservation committee for Illinois, Chicago.

"Operating Experience in 1917," Edwin S. Jewell, manager City National Bank building, Omaha.

"High Grade Apartment Buildings as Investments," Benjamin H. Marshall of the firm of Marshall & Fox, Chicago.

"The Wiring and Lighting of the Modern Office Building," F. X. Monville, manager Philadelphia Electric building, Philadelphia.

"The Relation Between Earning Power and Land Values in Taxation Matters," Hazen J. Burton, Minneapolis, Minn.

"Local and National Associations from an Owner's Standpoint," F. L. Swetland, owner of the Swetland Building and other properties, Cleveland.

"Live Problem Conference."

Another important feature of the convention will be a live problem conference at breakfast each morning. The topics outlined for the Friday morning conference, which will be led by Claude A. Campbell, manager of the Ohio building of Toledo, are as follows: "Female Labor vs. Male Labor in Office Buildings," "Parking Automobiles in the Congested Districts," "Revising Lease Contracts to Meet Wartime Conditions," "Practical Substitutes for Costly Building Supplies," and discussion of any problem that may be suggested by members.

Secretarial and apartment house conferences will be held during luncheon each day.

50 Realty Board Men Leave for St. Louis Session

About fifty members of the Chicago real estate board will leave for St. Louis over the Chicago and Eastern Illinois road at the Dearborn street station at 10 a. m. today to attend the annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards in that city June 17 to 20.

GRAIN MARKETS NERVOUS WITH WIDE CHANGES

Close at Intermediate Prices with Gains of 3 Cents on Corn.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Grain markets were nervous, with a sharp advance and numerous reactions. The close was at intermediate prices, with gains of 3c on corn and 1¼@1⅜c on oats at Chicago. Pit conditions dominated trading. Corn in the southwestern markets closed 3¼@4½c higher, the latter on August in Kansas City. Oats were up 1⅝@1⅞c. The Minneapolis market closed ⅞c and Winnipeg 1⅛c higher.

Provisions advanced with light offerings, and closed at about the highest of the day, with pork up 50c, lard 40c, and short ribs 37½@50c.

Closing prices, compared with a week ago, showed good gains on grains and provisions. Corn is up 8¼@9c, oats 3⅛@3⅞c, pork 65@70c, lard 35@40c, and short ribs 47½c.

Corn in Rapid Advance.

Commission houses absorbed the surplus in the corn pit on resting orders under $1.42 for July on Friday's break, and the sellers of that day were the best buyers Saturday. At no time were prices as low as the previous day's finish, and, while the close was not at the top, there were substantial gains. July finished at $1.45¼@1.44⅞ and August at $1.47.

Offerings were very light early, and at the top July was within ⅛c of the best figures of the week and 4c above Friday's close. There was nothing in the news to influence any great buying, but shorts have been run in so many times of late that they are afraid to make a decided stand on the bear side. Wagner was a free buyer at times, and stop loss orders were caught on the way up. Profit taking toward the last and selling against offers was responsible for the closing break.

Crop reports were decidedly favorable, and the weekly forecast was for generally fair weather, with normal temperatures, although a few showers are expected in the region of the great lakes. Hot weather talk from the southwest was ignored, as that was just what the crop needed in order to make proper growth.

Cash demand was fair, with receipts of 146 cars. For the week arrivals were 1,699,000 bu and shipments 567,000 bu. Last year receipts were 1,869,000 bu and shipments 807,000 bu. Primary receipts and shipments were smaller than last year.

Fear Crop Scare in Oats.

Fears that a crop scare might develop in oats over Sunday, due to high temperatures in the southwest and dry weather talk from parts of Montana and Canada, combined with free buying by Wagner, led to general short covering and a sharp advance. Stop loss orders were caught from 71c up for July. Selling against offers, both daily and weekly, and by Logan & Bryan and local bulls made a reaction toward the last. July finished at 70⅞c, June at 76c, and August at 65⅝c.

Export demand showed improvement, with sales of 110,000 bu at 12½@13c over July, track Newport News. Country offerings to arrive were liberal and hard to place. Receipts were 157 cars, with premiums in the sample market ½c lower, No. 3 whites selling at 6½c over July. Primary receipts and shipments for the week were smaller than last year

Rye Market Dull.

Offerings of rye were small and demand slow, with no sales reported. Milwaukee was firm and Minneapolis 1c lower. Local receipts, 1 car, and in the northwest 2 cars.

Barley sold fairly at unchanged prices, malting and mixing bringing $1.10@1.35. Milwaukee was unchanged and Minneapolis firm. Receipts here 8 cars, and in the northwest 47 cars.

Flaxseed at Duluth closed 5½@7c higher; July, $3.97; October, $3.59½. Winnipeg 2½@6½c higher, July, October, $3.46. The three leading markets had 15 cars.

Timothy seed firm. September, $9.00 bid. Country lots, $5.00@7.50 per 100 lbs. Toledo unchanged to 5c higher; September, $4.27½; October and December, $4.00; March, $4.20 per bu of 45 lbs. Cloverseed, no market. Toledo 15c lower; cash, $18.00; October, $13.50 per bu of 60 lbs.

Provisions Close at Top.

Light offerings and higher prices for hogs and corn scared shorts into covering product and made an advance to the highest of the day and week with the close at good net gains. There was also evening up for the provision stock statement due after the close, which showed a decrease in lard and a small gain in short ribs. Hog supplies this week have been heavier, but prices held well.

Shipments of lard and meats for the week were larger than the previous week and of meats exceeded last year's, but of lard were the reverse. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Activity and wide fluctuations in the corn and oats market of late has created a great deal of comment in various quarters, particularly among those who have been bearish during the recent advance of 16c in July corn and over 6c in oats. The reports have reached the food administration and cause uneasiness there. John J. Stream, chairman of the coarse grain division of the food administration, in a message to John R. Mauff, secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade, yesterday said: "Eastern papers speak of Wall street being in the grain markets on a large scale. We have telegrams from Chicago Public Service league calling attention to action in the corn and oats market, also telegrams from C. B. Loase, speaking of corn market being manipulated and calling attention to press comments. Please wire at once if there is any basis for the complaint and cause of recent activity in the market."

John R. Mauff's statement issued to members of the board of trade said: "The executive officers of this association will not permit Wall street or any other interests to be in the market on a scale larger than the permissible amount nor contrary to the regulations. Executive officers also request that private reports regarding crop conditions and isolated cases relative to certain small localites be discontinued. For this information we will depend upon the official crop reports and the regularly compiled reports of accredited crop experts."

Sentiment of the trade last night was badly mixed on coarse grains. The shorts have had a hard time, owing to the erratic action of the market. There has been liberal unloading on all the bulges. It was noticeable yesterday that those who had daily and weekly offers in oats were the heaviest sellers in the last half hour, and they were responsible for the break of over 1c. The drop of over 1c in corn was also on profit taking, and the trade was said to be fairly evened up at the last.

The tentative arrangement with the food administration provides for the handling of cash wheat by the elevator people and grain receivers on practically the old basis. Wheat can be shipped wherever desired and all markets can be used. The basis will be on the new rates of freight. The basis for handling low grades will be determined at a meeting between the grain corporation and the grain men in New York on June 24. The tariff representatives of all interested markets are to meet June 20 to discuss the relation between the different points. The basis for handling flour will be the New York minimum. All is subject to confirmation by President Wilson. The grain corporation's agreement with the mills expires June 29.

There have been several instances in the last few days in which commission houses have placed information before their customers which would lead to an impression that corn would be damaged by hot weather. One of the best known members of the board declared yesterday that if it came to his attention that information of this kind was again disseminated he would file formal complaint against the people responsible for conduct unbecoming a member. Corn needs hot weather now in order to make proper growth. Board officials are not inclined to temporize over matters of this kind. None of the private reports of late have indicated the slightest damage to corn in any section of the country, although in past years there has been a decided tendency in this direction.

Primary receipts of wheat for the season to date aggregate 173,063,000 bu, corn 202,979,000 bu, and oats 304,458,000 bu. Last year wheat receipts were 372,196,000 bu, corn 169,154,000 bu, and oats 277,921,000 bu.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

A fair export demand was in evidence for cash oats and 60,000 bu were sold to the seaboard early on the basis of 13c over Chicago July, track Newport News. After the close, however, 50,000 bu sold at 12½c over. Domestic sales were 25,000 bu oats.

Cash corn prices here and at Milwaukee were practically unchanged, while at St. Louis there was an advance of 1@7c, the outside on choice white. Kansas City was 3c higher and Peoria 2c higher to 5c lower.

Premiums on cash oats were lowered, with sales of No. 3 white at 6½c over July. As compared with Friday's level there was an advance of ½@1c shown in prices paid for track lots. St. Louis was ½@2½c higher, Kansas City and Milwaukee 1c higher, and Peoria ¼c higher. Cash grain prices in leading markets follow:

COTTON TRADE NEWS

NEW YORK, June 15.—There was a sharp advance in the cotton market today on trade buying and covering for over the week-end. Weather and crop advices were generally favorable, and caused some irregularity, but light offerings were readily absorbed, and the highest prices of the day were reached in the last few minutes.

The market opened steady at a decline of 2 points to an advance of 12 points. Liverpool was a good buyer of July, while reports of a more confident tone in the goods market were accompanied by further trade buying of early new crop deliveries. This inspired scattered covering, particularly in the near month, which increased its premium over October during the early trading. Later the advance was checked, but the market firmed up again in th late trading on the continued strength of New Orleans, further covering and trade buying.

Week-end statistics were considered bearish, except for a slight increase reported in the amount of cotton on shipboard, and weekly crop reviews indicated continued favorable progress. The forecasts also pointed to good weather for over the week-end. Futures:

AVERAGE PRICE OF BEEF CATTLE AT RECORD HIGH

Average Price of Hogs for the Week Lowest in Months.

Hog receipts were so light that some of the packers, including Armour, were out of the market. Those who had orders to fill operated freely from the start and sellers found an outlet for all good offerings. Top at $16.80 was the highest since Tuesday, while the average was highest since Monday.

Average price of beef cattle for the week at $16.25 stood 60c higher than the previous week and the highest on record, figuring $4.10 higher than same week last year. On the other hand, the week's hog average price of $16.50 was the lowest since the middle of February.

Spread between sheep and lambs is widest of the season, with buyers urgent competitors for the best lambs and indifferent bidders for the heavy sheep. This condition will prevail the balance of the immediate season if the performance of the market in past years counts for anything.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 16,000 cattle, 35,000 hogs, and 14,000 sheep, against 22,638 cattle, 36,677 hogs, and 12,584 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts, 62,000 cattle, 135,000 hogs, and 60,000 sheep.

Average price of hogs at Chicago was $16.60, against $16.46 Friday, $16.80 a week ago, $15.55 a year ago, and $9.80 two years ago. Estimated average weight of hogs last week, 236 lbs, against 232 lbs previous week and 223 lbs a year ago.

Latter lots declined 25@50c from a week ago. Eleven markets had 34,000, or 18,000 less than a week ago and 9,000 less than a year ago.

Kellogg Switchboard and Supply was neglected, with no change in quotations.

After the recent rapid advance in Inland Steel to around 230 a reaction took place, with quotations as low as 200 to 205, but closed at 215 bid, 220 asked. Cities Service common changed hands at 212; preferred, 75; Standard Gas and Electric common, 4¾; preferred, 24¼; Northern States Power preferred, 84½; common, 45; United Light and Railways common, 30; preferred, 64½; American Light and Traction common, 185; preferred, 95; Pacific Gas and Electric common, 33; preferred, 79¾.

GRAIN EXCHANGE COUNCIL TO TAKE UP WAR PROBLEMS

A meeting of the council of grain exchanges will be held at the Hotel La Salle tomorrow. It is of great importance to the grain trade generally, and sixteen of the leading exchanges throughout the country are to be represented. Members are to be entertained in the east room at luncheon at 1:30 by the Chicago board of trade. The most important question before the grain trade at present is the handling of the new wheat crop. The advisory committee of the grain exchanges spent two days last week with the officers of the Food Administration Grain corporation and the food administration in an effort to reach an understanding as to how the big wheat crop is to be handled this year. The crop is so large that the food administration desires to modify its operations and restrictions.

The leading subject for discussion aside from the routine business of hearing the reports from various committees, is the futures markets. The question is, Are existing futures markets broad enough to provide for operations during a free crop movement? Will it be possible to hedge grain safely should we again have a car shortage? Would it not produce a cornered market? What remedy can be provided in this event? Should government or wheat export company purchase futures?

The present sixty days' supply restriction is another important subject that is causing a great deal of thought and trouble to the grain trade. It is to be brought up in a systematic way and discussed as follows: What has been its effect? Is it desirable to continue it? Will it be possible to accumulate reserve stocks with this restriction? Should terminal elevator stocks be included in such restrictions as from their position they are always immediately available for use? Effect of depleted reserves. How can they be maintained? Where should they be maintained? What can the grain trade do to assist the railroads in the movement of grain? Shall preference be given to shipments of any particular kind of grain? What will be the effect this season of an acute car shortage?

Coöperation with the food administration and the question of whether the trade can accomplish the necessities of the food administration by coöperation instead of regulation is slated for general discussion, as is also the federal supervision of grain inspection and the constitution and organization of the Council of Grain Exchanges.

American Trade Council to Open Session Tomorrow

Bankers and financial men from throughout the country will be in Chicago tomorrow to attend the meeting of the American trade acceptance council, which will be held in connection with the annual convention of the National Association of Credit Men, which opens on the following day and continues until Thursday. Both sessions will be held at the Hotel La Salle.

At tomorrow's meeting the subject of trade acceptances will be discussed from every angle. There will be three sessions—morning, afternoon, and evening. Paul M. Warburg, vice governor of the federal reserve board, will speak on "The Federal Reserve System and the Trade Acceptance." J. M. Tregoe, secretary National Association of Credit Men, will talk on "Development of Trade Acceptance Since the Creation of the Federal Reserve System"; J. T. Holdsworth, dean school of economics, University of Pittsburgh, will talk on "Economical Phases of the Trade Acceptance"; Morton H. Fry of Bernard, Scholle & Co., on "A Discount Market for Trade Acceptances," and Charles A. Hinsch, president American Bankers' association, on "Utilizing Our Credit Facilities in War Times."

Among other speakers will be Waddill Catchings, Sylvan L. Stix, D. C. Wills, Forrest Ferguson, C. C. Dula, Wallace D. Simmons, George W. Woodruff, and Charles W. Du Puis.

Lucius Teter, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, will deliver the address of welcome, and Lewis E. Pierson, chairman American Trade Acceptance council, will state the purposes of the convention. The greater number of those attending the council will remain over for the credit men's convention.

INSURANCE NEWS IN ALL BRANCHES EAST AND WEST

Annual Meetings of Field Men and Agents This Month.

BY THOMAS R. WEDDELL.

Many of the state associations of field men and local agents are holding their annual meetings this month.

The Michigan Association of Insurance Agents will meet on Tuesday and Wednesday at Lansing, and the Minnesota association Thursday at St. Paul. The annual meeting of the Iowa Association of Insurance Agents will be held at Keokuk June 27. The Wisconsin field men will hold their annual meeting at Lake Delavan, Wis., June 27-28. The Texas Association of Insurance Agents will meet at Houston June 28-29. The Michigan field men will hold their annual summer meeting at Port Huron June 26-27. The Tennessee field men will hold their summer meeting at Chattanooga June 27-28. The West Virginia Association of Insurance Agents meets at Charleston June 25-26. The annual convention of the Arkansas Association of Insurance Agents will be held at Little Rock June 19-20. The Missouri local agents will meet at Jefferson City June 24.

MINNESOTA DWELLING RATES.

A revised schedule of dwelling rates has been agreed upon in Minnesota, reducing rates in the large cities and increasing them in those without protection. In Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Duluth rates on frame dwellings are reduced 7 per cent and on contents are advanced 11 per cent. Brick dwellings and flats are reduced 20 per cent in the large cities and contents about 5 per cent. Rates on frame dwellings in towns with volunteer fire departments are unchanged, but the contents are increased about 20 per cent. In unprotected towns the increase on dwellings and contents is about 15 per cent. The new schedule provides a differential for shingle roofs and charges for defective flues, automobile storage, and other hazards.

INDIANA LITIGATION FEE.

The suits begun last year by the attorney general of Indiana, charging the fire insurance companies with contempt of court for alleged violation of the Wier injunction, issued some years ago, will be on trial this week at Indianapolis. The original bill was dismissed on the ground of insufficiency and new suits were begun. The court struck out a number of the charges and the companies will now stand trial on those which are left.

PRESIDENT PRIDDY HERE.

Lawrence Priddy of New York, president of the National Association of Life Underwriters, will be in Chicago tomorrow on his way west for a visit to a number of the associations in that section. His tour will end at Fargo June 28, where he will attend the annual meeting of the Northwest Life Insurance congress. Edgar C. Fowler, as president of the Chicago association, will give Mr. Priddy a luncheon tomorrow at the Midday club, to meet the members of the executive committee of the Chicago association.

INSURANCE NOTES.

Liability companies are now furnishing their agents with new rate sheets on the compensation insurance on government work, such as the erection of cantonments, building of lighters, etc. Certain of these rates make no provision for acquisition cost, but do permit a general agent to take a commission of 7½ per cent for field service.

The quota for the Chicago agency of the Mutual Life of New York for 1918 is $7,673,054. Up to June 1 it had paid for $6,078,886, leaving $1,593,164. Last year it completed its quota during May.

The thirty-fifth annual meeting of the Penn Mutual Agency association will be held at Atlantic City, June 18 to 20.

To the Stockholders of the MOTHER LODE COPPER MINES COMPANY OF ALASKA

Your Company has been seriously handicapped in its mining operations, due to the lack of a concentrating mill for treating its developed tonnage of milling grade ore, which is not commercial without such a plant, and also to the lack of proper shipping facilities in the way of a railroad connection from Shushanna Junction, on the line of the Copper River and Northwestern Railway, up McCarthy Creek to the mine, a distance of 14 miles.

The cost of a concentrator of suitable capacity and a railroad connection would be at least One Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($1,500,000). The war needs of the United States Government for both money and material, make the financing of our property a very difficult and uncertain matter, particularly as the Federal Government, compelled by the existing abnormal conditions, now properly exercises a most rigid supervision over the money market. And furthermore, even though your Company should succeed in raising the above named sum of money, it is not probable that it could get deliveries on the necessary machinery and equipment within reasonable limits.

In full appreciation of all the above conditions, your Trustees believe that the only feasible solution is to interest a strong financial concern in your property. With this end in view, your Trustees after long and careful consideration and negotiation, have arrived at an arrangement with Mr. Stephen Birch, who is President of the Kennecott Copper Corporation. This arrangement, already ratified by your Trustees, and which is subject to ratification by the stockholders of your Company, is given in full in my letter to Stephen Birch, dated May 7, 1918, as follows:

"A" A New Company to be called "Mother Lode Coalition Mines Company," is to be formed under the laws of the State of Delaware, with an authorized Issue of Two Million Five Hundred Thousand (2,500,000) shares of stock, having no nominal or par value.

The certificate of Incorporation of the said Company will provide for cumulative voting.

"B" Your Company will convey to the New Company all its property, equipments and improvements thereon, located in the Territory of Alaska, subject to the existing bonded indebtedness of Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($500,000), in consideration of the issue by the New Company of Two Million Five Hundred Thousand (2,500,000) of its shares, being the entire number of shares of stock, which it will be originally authorized to issue.

"C" One Million Two Hundred and Twenty Five Thousand (1,225,000) of said shares to be issued and delivered to your Company, which will then distribute the same among its stockholders in proportion to their respective interests, and One Million Two Hundred and Seventy Five Thousand (1,275,000) of said shares to be issued to Mr. Stephen Birch or to his Nominees.

"D" Contemporaneously with the execution and delivery of the deed by your Company of all its property and assets located in the Territory of Alaska, Mr. Stephen Birch is to furnish, or cause to be furnished:—

"E" The sum of Five Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars ($550,000) in cash, to be forthwith applied by the New Company to the redemption or payment of the existing bonded indebtedness of your Company; the said bonds to be redeemed or paid for at One Hundred and Ten Percent (110%). After such payment, the mortgage securing the said bonds is to be released and discharged.

Such amount of money as may be necessary to pay all expenses of organization of the New Company, including the Federal taxes on the issuance of its stock, and on the said conveyance from your Company to the New Company.

Such further sum as shall, in the judgment of Mr. Stephen Birch, or his Nominees, be necessary to provide the New Company with sufficient working capital.

It is understood that under this clause, Mr. Stephen Birch is not required to advance sums exceeding in the aggregate One Million Dollars ($1,000,000).

"F" All such advances are to be secured either by bonds of the New Company, secured by a Mortgage, its promissory notes or such other obligations, as may be agreed upon, all of which are to be paid off or redeemed before any dividends shall be paid upon the stock of the Company.

"G" The New Company is to have the benefit of the same smelting, refining, freight and selling charges, as from time to time may be enjoyed by the Kennecott Copper Corporation.

"H" A separate set of books is to be kept by the New Company, which shall be open for inspection during business hours of any business day, by an auditor appointed by the President of your Company.

"I" The New Company shall have seven (7) Directors and upon the organization of the Board, your Company is to have three (3) Directors and Mr. Stephen Birch, or his Nominees, four (4) Directors.

"J" The New Company shall reimburse your Company for all moneys expended on its properties from May 1, 1918, until the conveyance and transfer of its property to the New Company; said money so expended, however, not to exceed the sum of Fifteen Thousand Dollars ($15,000) per month.

This proposal was accepted by Mr. Stephen Birch, under date of May 7th, 1918.

"Mother Lode Copper Mines Company,
29 Broadway, New York City,

Gentlemen:—

Your letter of this date received.

It correctly states our understanding and I accept the proposition therein made.

I shall be glad to do all in my power looking to the speedy consummation of the transaction.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) STEPHEN BIRCH."

Your Trustees on May 10th, 1918, at a Special Meeting called for the purpose, held at its Branch Office, 29 Broadway, New York City, ratified this proposal.

Among the reasons why such an arrangement would be beneficial are the following:

(1) By driving a tunnel 1,400 feet long through the mountain to connect your workings with those of the Bonanza Mine of the Kennecott Copper Corporation, it will be possible to start producing copper from milling grade ores within six months from the time an arrangement, such as now proposed, is ratified.

(2) By driving the 1,400-foot tunnel mentioned above, it will not be necessary to spend any money on railroad construction.

(3) The milling facilities of the Kennecott Copper Corporation can be made available immediately upon completion of the connecting tunnel. This milling capacity will be increased from time to time by the Kennecott Copper Corporation, as the development of your mine warrants.

(4) Through your connection with the Kennecott Copper Corporation, you are assured of smelting, treatment and selling charges, which would be considerably better than you could obtain if continued as an independent corporation.

(5) Mr. Stephen Birch has agreed to furnish One Million Dollars ($1,000,000) in cash to pay off your bonded indebtedness and to provide for necessary improvements and to furnish adequate working capital.

Fully alive to the present opportunity, which provides for adequate milling facilities and working capital, both present and future, and believing that the "Mother Lode" can be placed amongst the dividend payers in about one-third the time it would take if maintained as an independent corporation, your Trustees have already approved of the arrangement here presented for your consideration, and their urgent advice is that you vote for its ratification.

Your Trustees at a Special Meeting held in the City of New York, on the 28th day of May, 1918, called a Special Meeting of the stockholders, to be held at the office of the Company, 1317 Alaska Bldg., Seattle, King County, Washington, on the first day of July, 1918, at the hour of 2 o'clock P. M.

You are urgently requested to attend the meeting of the stockholders, so that there may be a full representation and a full discussion of the matters to be submitted.

If you cannot attend, please execute your proxy and send it at once to Mr. Clarence L. Warner, Secretary, Suite 300, 29 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

If, after you have executed and sent the proxy, you find that you are able to attend the meeting, it is hoped that you will do so and vote your stock in person. Eighty Per Cent (80%) of the stock has already approved of the proposal.

Respectfully submitted,

MOTHER LODE COPPER MINES COMPANY.

TAX EMERGENCY HANDLED WITH EASE BY BANKS

Huge Payments Cause No Disturbance in Money Market.

Payments to the government of income and excess profits taxes by individuals and corporations, which culminated yesterday, were in the aggregate by far the largest in the history of this or any other country. The country's tax receipts, estimated at $3,000,000,000, involved a financial transaction of a higher magnitude than any of the previous huge Liberty loan payments, and the remarkable thing about the prompt flow of money into the federal treasury was that the payments caused no disturbance in the money market and were effected with incredible ease as far as the banks were concerned.

Inquiries among corporations indicated that in the majority of cases where large income and excess profits tax payments had to be made the funds were turned over to the government within a few weeks after the returns were made.

Local Situation Well Handled.

Figures of the federal reserve bank of Chicago for the week ended last Friday show that to the date mentioned the Chicago banks were able to finance their part of $2,500,000,000 income and excess profits taxes without any material increase in their loans at the reserve bank. Up to Friday night there had been an expansion of only $791,096 in bills discounted, and the reserve bank had issued an additional $311,250 of its notes. The volume of bills bought in the open market decreased $1,393,569. The statement showed a small gain in government deposits.

Unless the statement of the coming week should reveal an expansion in the credit, it will appear that the banks have easily taken care of the tax emergency.

TALK OF THE STREET

With rising prices in the stock market there should be credited the reassuring effect of increased government orders for steel. Gradually the street is coming to believe that the capacity of the steel concerns cannot be fully employed without profitable returns and this is set off against the apprehension occasioned by the knowledge that the volume of income and excess profits taxes will be found double when payments are made next June. The country has a year in which to contemplate the changed situation and the ease with which all requirements to date have been met suggests that the new taxes may be easily covered.

Accompanying this belief is the basic thought that the rewards of business will be sufficient to encourage production. Without further reduction in prices of primary commodities, producers will know what they can earn. Knowing also what they will have to pay, there will be a normal condition in the business mind and room for the element of hopefulness at the bottom of all progress.

U. S. Steel common easily led the market with a rise of 2 points. If any large industrials will have to reduce their dividend rate it may be expected that Steel will be one. It is paying 7 per cent, and a reduction is discounted in the price at which the shares are selling.

A story which received credence in some quarters in Wall street was to the effect that at least one British syndicate is buying stocks in the New York market, particularly railroad issues. It was asserted that this syndicate, foreseeing the end of the war with victory for the allies, is buying back stocks sold at higher prices in the liquidating movement following the beginning of the war. There was no confirmation in banking circles for the story.

Strength in Butte and Superior is credited to the belief that under the modified decision of the United States Court of Appeals at San Francisco, if affirmed by the United States Supreme court, the mining company will have to pay the Minerals Separation company less than $300,000 instead of the millions it would be called upon to pay if the decision had been against the Butte and Superior, or if the decision of the United States District court at Butte, Mont., had been affirmed.

The motor group had a good day, with prices generally advancing. General Motors led, rising to 136, a gain of 4 points. Studebaker was fractionally higher. Maxwell first preferred sold ex-dividend at 54, equivalent to 55¾, or 1½ points over the last previous sale. Willys-Overland was about steady. The oil group was firm and moderately active. Coppers were dull and higher.

There was active and what looked to be anxious bidding for Royal Dutch certificates yesterday, bringing about a gain of 6¾ points and a new high record. This stock, as far as market action is concerned, is beginning to look as though influences similar to those affecting the market for American Sumatra tobacco and General Motors are a factor. That is, the quick advances indicate a small floating supply, as the result of which short sellers are put to it to cover when they decide to close their contracts. The total issue of Royal Dutch American shares is only 222,000, of which a large part is reported to have been bought for foreign account in recent months, while other large blocks were securely placed by the original syndicate among investors in this country.

That the federal reserve bank of New York had acquired a new depositor—a corporate account—was disclosed in its statement yesterday. The new depositor is none other than the great war finance corporation, capitalized at $500,000,000, and the stock of which is owned by the United States government. According to the reserve bank's statement, the corporation had a balance of $12,009,008 with the bank at the close of business on Friday.

Predicts Heavy War Taxation on Luxuries

John V. Farwell, who returned yesterday from Washington, where he went as chairman of the war finance committee of the chamber of commerce, said:

"We will have to raise through taxation for the coming year's war needs a large sum of money, probably $8,000,000,000, and I believe the business interests are willing to pay their share. The government must raise all it can from taxation, but still must leave enough reserve for business and industry to keep them in a safe and sound condition.

"There is a growing disposition to tax luxuries and extravagances hard."

Mr. Farwell said that he found sentiment in Washington confident as to the outcome of the war and that things have been speeded up in all lines until now the government and the industries are making great strides in their war work.

STEELS AGAIN TAKE LEAD IN STIFF UPSWING

Industrials Continue to Show Strength; Rails Are Firm.

[New York Times Financial Review.]

New York, June 15.—The absence of a large number of traders from the financial district and the desires of others to get away as early as possible, to take advantage of the week end, had no appreciable influence today in narrowing stock transactions, which were much more important than usual for a two hour session. Strength continued to be emphasized in the industrials, with the rails firm, and, in a few cases, making some advances.

The tone of the news continued pretty much the same, but sentiment as to the future course of prices was much improved, obviously on a new estimate of the probable course of the next few months of the war The announcement by Gen. March that there are already 800,000 American soldiers in France showed how rapidly the United States is assuming a position in the allied defense in keeping with its strength

Critical Stage Not Passed.

The critical stage of the war has not been passed, but all of the gains which the enemy has made since the latter part of March have not served to offset the advantages which have come to the allies in the shape of American support. There is every reason to be cheerful about the present course of the campaign, which Germany cannot abandon without confessing defeat.

As on other recent sessions the steel issues were outstanding features of strength in the readjustment of prices this morning. With nearly one-third total of the dealings confined to that issue, United States Steel moved up a full 2 points and closed at the top price for the day. Republic at one time had a gain of more than 3 points, while Bethlehem B shares made a fractional advance, and the 8 per cent preferred a net gain of almost 3.

Industrials Outstrip Leaders.

Some of the inactive industrials outstripped the leaders in strength, though on a volume of business so small as to minimize the significance of net changes running to five and six points on several issues. The upward movement in General Motors, which refuses to be interfered with by talk of fuel rationing, which may force sharp curtailment, scored a further advance of 3 points, other motor issues trailing along with smaller advances.

In the bond department the Anglo French 5s and municipal 6s continued to display by their firmness growing confidence in the belief that the Austro-German lines have been advanced about as far as they can be moved.

Keystone Tire and Rubber Cuts 33 3-1 Stock Melon

The Keystone Tire and Rubber company yesterday declared a stock dividend of 33 1-3 per cent, payable Nov. 1 to stockholders of record Oct. 11, subject to the approval of the stockholders at a special meeting to be called for that purpose. The company also declared a quarterly dividend of 2 per cent with an addition of one-third of 1 per cent on the preferred and a regular quarterly dividend of 3 per cent on the common stock. Both dividends are payable July 1 to stockholders of record June 21.

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

Swift & Co. shares showed a further advance with a rise of 1½ points. The selling pressure has now been removed. Stewart-Warner was up ½ on one transaction. Peoples Gas dropped ⅞, while Commonwealth Edison again sold at par. Union Carbide was steady. There was some buying in Pneumatic Tool, which carried the price up 1¼ points.

In the bond department Swift & Co. 5s were steady at 94½. Commonwealth Edison 5s were weak, declining to 91½.

ABOLISH CHARGE FOR COLLECTION OF BANK CHECKS

Reserve Bank Announces Suspension of One Cent Item.

Announcement was made by the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago of the suspension, effective yesterday, of the service charge of 1 cent per item for collection of checks. Hereafter checks will be received for collection without charge drawn on any banking institution in the United States shown on the Federal Reserve par list.

"Through the medium of the par facilities now available," said Governor James B. McDougal, "checks on about 15,000 banks can be collected without cost and with the service charge removed we trust that member banks will avail themselves of the advantages offered and send us as large a volume of items as possible."

The transit department of the reserve bank has been largely increased to meet the expected augmented volume of business, the entire fourth floor of the Rector building being taken and given over to this alone. The bank has also expanded its quarters to include the fifth floor of the same building.

Banks Notified.

Coincident with the placing of orders for printing of $200,000,000 federal reserve bank notes in the $1 denomination and $50,000,000 of the $2 denomination to make good deficiencies resulting from the retirement of the old silver certificates, notification has been sent to the various reserve banks as to allotments which will be made upon a pro rata basis with respect to the printing of the $5 notes.

Gov. Harding of the reserve board has issued a statement to the effect that it has been deemed advisable that reserve banks should first deposit their one year 2 per cent notes as security for their reserve bank notes and that they give power of attorney to the reserve board to request the secretary of the treasury to deposit with the United States treasurer through the controller of currency for account of the respective banks such amounts of certificates of indebtedness as may be necessary to secure, after all the one year 3 per cent notes have been deposited, the federal reserve bank notes which will be issued in substitution for the silver certificates. The treasurer can thereupon charge the account of each federal reserve bank, as a deposit in his general account, with the amount of the purchase price of the certificates.

Call for Bank Notes.

In order to carry out the plan the board has requested the federal reserve banks to call for federal reserve bank notes in the following amounts and to deposit as security an equivalent amount in one year 3 per cent treasury notes: Chicago, $2,962,000; Philadelphia, $1,000,000; Cleveland, $2,660,000; Richmond, $1,000,000; Atlanta, $1,141,000; Minneapolis, $880,000; Kansas City, $1,274,000; Dallas, $1,307,000, and San Francisco, $1,500,000. As soon as the notes for all banks are available the board will make the proper adjustment between the banks.

Acme Tea Company Sales Largest in Its History

Sales of the Acme Tea company for the fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1917, were the largest in the history of the company which has been doing business as a grocery chain organization since 1885. Gross business was $24,540,855, a gain of 34 per cent, the largest increase reported for any year. While increase in sales, to a large extent, was due to high prices on food stuffs, the net return on each dollar of sales was 4.48 cents, aganst 3.40 cents in 1916 and 3.55 cents in 1915. Net profits in 1917, before deduction of federal and state taxes, was $1,100,925, compared with $719,130 in 1916 and $526,734 in 1915.

After taxes deductions there remained $816,736, or the equivalent of $35,51 a share on the $2,300,000 first preferred, compared with $31.27 in 1916. After preferred dividends and deductions of sinking fund, the amount remaining for common stock dividends was equal to $15.38 a share on the $3,500,000 stock. The Acme Tea company is now part of the American Stores company.

NATIONAL TRANSIT CO. EXTRA.

The National Transit company has declared the usual semi-annual dividend of 50 cents per share and an extra dividend of 50 cents per share, or the equivalent of 4 per cent, both payable to stockholders of record May 31. This is the first extra disbursement of the company in a considerable time. In 1916 the capital stock was cut in two, the stockholders being settled with in cash.

Electric Roads Need More Income.

Now that railway securities are in a fair way of being put on a sound basis, attention ought to be given to the needs of the electric lines. They are suffering from the same troubles that undermined the financial standing of the railways, viz., increasing costs and fixed revenues. Attention is called forcibly to this subject by the decision of the Twin City Rapid Transit company to pay no dividend on common stock July 1 next. That stock formerly was considered "gilt edged," and many people invested savings in it. Six per cent was paid for years, and the shares sold steadily a little above par. In 1917 increasing costs and a big jump in taxes reduced profits, so the dividend was barely earned, and a continuation of the process this year has wiped it out.

Three years ago, when the company needed some new money, it issued stock at par. If extensions are needed now they must wait. The situation is further complicated by the approaching expiration of one of the franchises making a condition thoroughly typical of the traction troubles of American cities.

Nothing so hampers the progress of a growing city as a poor traction system, and nothing so promotes its growth as a good one. If a city drives too hard a bargain its traction system necessarily must become run down and inefficient. If it refuses to make any terms that can be accepted the result is still worse. Investors ought to take this matter up and try to educate public opinion to the fact that the interests of a community and those of its traction company are to an extent identical.

Wisconsin Gas and Electric.

J. D. S., Appleton, Wis.—The Wisconsin Gas and Electric company is owned by the Wisconsin Edison, which in turn is controlled by the North American. It has outstanding $3,027,000 of bonds, secured by first mortgage on all the properties except the Watertown gas and electric plant, on which there is a prior lien of $110,000. The company owns the gas service in Kenosha, Racine, and several other towns, the local railway service in Kenosha, and electric light and power plants in Kenosha and a dozen smaller towns. Its gross earnings in 1917 were about one-third larger than in 1916, and net increased $17,000 to $310,242. Interest increased $42,000 to $181,695. The margin of safety for the bonds was $8 per cent. The bonds are well secured.

Wright-Martin Aircraft.

E. B. Manitowoc, Wis.—The Wright-Martin Aircraft corporation operated at a loss from the time of its formation in September, 1916, till early this year. It is said unofficially that beginning last February it began to show a profit, but no definite figures have been shown. The latest available balance sheet is that of May 31, 1917. It shows a deficit of $1,930,337. The company has outstanding $5,000,000 of preferred stock, on which 10½ per cent of unpaid dividends have accumulated. A considerable part of its plants may not be needed after the war, and if so probably will have to be sold at a loss. In view of these facts the common stock is a mere speculation at present.

New York Shipbuilding.

F. P.—The New York Shipbuilding corporation was formed in December, 1916, to take over the plant and business of the New York Shipbuilding company. The latter had outstanding $5,000,000 of stock and $2,300,000 of bonds. The new company issued $7,500,000 of bonds and 200,000 shares of stock of no par value. The balance sheet of Dec. 31 last gives this stock an asset value of almost $9,000,000. The company reported an operating profit of $963,915 in 1917. Evidently the stock is highly speculative, because the present boom in shipbuilding can last only a few years. The stock is quoted nominally at 38 bid, 42 asked, and the bonds at 72 bid and 79 asked.

Brief Answers.

H. J.—The refunding bonds of the North Shore Electric company are a conservative investment. Most of the first mortgage bonds have been retired, and the balance mature in 1922. Then the refunding mortgage will have first lien. These bonds underlie the first and refunding bonds of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois and have been assumed by that company.

F. B., Antigo, Wis.—The directors of the St. Paul railway have been postponing action on dividends pending the signing of the contract with the government which will fix the rental to be paid the company.

C. T. S.—The reason that Kenova Oil is not quoted among curb stocks is that there have been few sales recently. If it should become "active" probably it would be quoted daily.

A. P.—The Texas City Transportation company furnishes no information about its earnings or conditions.

Give Him A Fair Start

(Mrs. Wilson is assisting at the daily rites performed before the altar of her grand-son, Master John Edward Phillips, Jr.)

MRS. WILSON: Why, Molly, you don't give that poor little tyke a cathartic every day, do you?

MOLLY PHILLIPS: This isn't a cathartic, mother. It's Nujol. It was the only thing I could use while the baby was nursing. I was terribly constipated, you know, just after he was born.

MRS. WILSON: Well, that's to be expected, I guess. I remember the trouble I had when you were born, dear.

MOLLY: Oh, mother, I was in awful shape. I tried everything. And everything failed. All the laxatives and cathartics I was taking began to affect the baby. He had colic and lost weight. My milk really seemed to poison him. Then the doctor ordered the Nujol treatment. You know the body doesn't absorb Nujol at all and consequently Nujol doesn't affect the milk,—it passes smoothly along the intestines, softening and clearing out the food waste as it goes. It was an ideal treatment for my condition.

MRS. WILSON: Does it work quickly?

MOLLY: No—it depends on the individual. It took me several days, but since then I've been regular as clockwork. That's one of the best things about it. There's no griping, no violent action—isn't it funny, mother, that some people don't feel they are getting results unless they get disturbance and rough treatment in the process! You would never know you had taken Nujol—it's so gentle. It simply softens the contents of the bowels and prevents the drying out and collecting of poison matter in the 'colon'—the large intestine. That's where almost all disease breeds you know.

MRS. WILSON: How do you feel after taking it?

MOLLY: Oh, nothing but good effects—because there are no drugs in Nujol. That's why it can be taken regularly. You don't have to set aside a day to recover from it every time.

MRS. WILSON: Do you give it to the baby regularly now?

MOLLY: Yes, indeed, he's already started. Every baby is born with a natural kink in his bowels—it has to straighten out naturally, and Nujol prevents any obstruction there. It rather helps Nature to help herself. The doctor approves, and this sample of the youngest generation is going to grow up thinking Nujol inside is just as important as his morning bath outside—which it is. And mother, look here!

MRS. WILSON: Yes, Molly?

MOLLY: See how well he takes it!

For your own protection insist that the druggist give you the genuine Nujol, in a sealed and capped bottle, bearing the Nujol trademark in red—never otherwise. Nujol is absolutely pure and harmless. Inferior substitutes may give unpleasant results. Genuine Nujol sold by all druggists in the U. S. and Canada.

Send 50 cents and we will ship new kit size bottle to U. S. soldiers and sailors anywhere. Write for attractive free booklet on the Nujol treatment: Section 5, Nujol Dept., Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), Bayonne, N. J.

With Tintex, there is none of the old-fashioned boiling or bother—nothing to streak the garment or stain the hands

In five minutes, your mussy faded blouse is fresh, smart and as delicately colored as the day you bought it!

Faded and Discolored?

Make them new again.

DON'T go on wearing a yellowed blouse, or scorn it because it looks so shabby! Wake up to its possibilities! Tint it a soft flesh color or a delicate lavender or a cool blue. Look fresh, crisp, smart. Feel as if you had just stepped out of a Paris bandbox!

Don't undo the effect of your entire costume by wearing a once-upon-a-time white blouse, now turned a muddy yellow. Make it new again!

Your georgette blouse that has faded so abominably; that crepe de chine which has turned so yellow; that rose colored sweater which the sun has made a dingy pink—you can really transform them!

Or when your silk underwear so inconsiderately fades into a horrid, shadowy white—don't keep it so. In five minutes you can bring back all its original freshness and its delicate color.

For years women have resorted to various methods of coloring their faded blouses and underwear—red ink, crepe paper, ribbon—these and other equally unsuccessful methods. Heretofore it has been impossible to obtain a simple, easy-to-use and really satisfactory preparation. But now these nuisances are banished forever!

With Tintex you can keep all your loveliest things looking fresh, dainty, new, and without injuring or streaking the most delicate fabric.

Tintex is not a dye. It is a delightful tint which comes in all the fashionable colors. It was especially prepared for tinting sheer silks, fragile georgette, crepe de chine, wash satin, batiste—wool, even! Use it just like bluing in cold or warm water. It will not stain your hands, and cannot injure the fabric.

Nothing could be easier—quicker to use

Just sift about a teaspoonful into a basin containing about a gallon of warm water. It dissolves immediately. Have your garment to be tinted wet before dipping it into the solution. Then put it in, working the garment between the hands and dipping it up and down to get every part of it tinted. Wring as dry as possible; roll in a towel and iron while damp. Even if your blouse is of the most perishable material, with Tintex it will come out evenly tinted, beautiful, entirely new! The color will last for at least two washings.

You can secure Tintex in drug and department stores throughout your city—25c a box, 30c in Canada. If your store hasn't the color you want, we shall be glad to send it direct.

Let us send you enough to tint a blouse or a camisole

Send us 6c for a petite package of Tintex (flesh-pink) to try. Then get out that georgette blouse which you haven't liked to wear since it became so yellow; or the camisole which hasn't been pink since it was laundered the first time. Tintex it! In fifteen minutes it is tinted—ironed. You will scarcely believe it is really the same garment! Mail the coupon now while you think of it. Address Tintex Company, Inc., Dept. 32, 299 Madison Ave., New York.

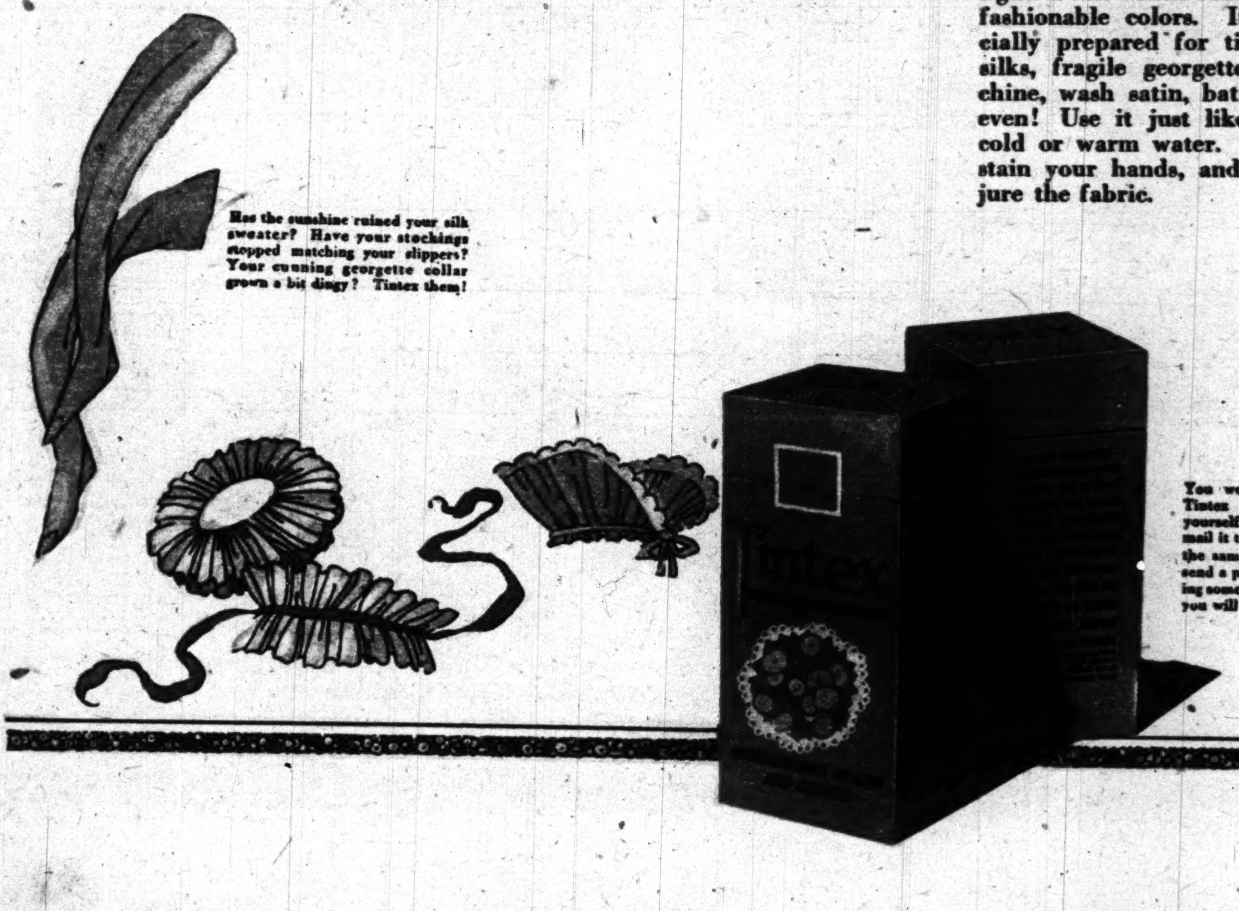
If you live in Canada, send for your sample package to MacLean, Benn & Nelson, Limited, Dept. 32, 489 St. Paul St. West, Montreal.

Tintex gives you such exquisite shades—wonderful for heavy silk or fragile georgette

Women find Tintex wonderful for—

Blouses and negligees of georgette, crepe, silk, washable satin; underwear of Italian silk and batiste; sweaters—wool, cotton and silk; laces; silk stockings and gloves; ribbons! It comes in all the fashionable shades and colors—flesh, pink, lavender, blue, écru, yellow, green, tan and others

Soap and water soon rob the most expensive silk underwear of its charm. But with a package of Tintex nearby, you can make it retain its delicate color until worn out



Has the sunshine ruined your silk sweater? Have your stockings stopped matching your slippers? Your cunning georgette collar grown a bit dingy? Tintex them!

You won't know how wonderful Tintex is until you have tried it yourself. Fill out the coupon and mail it to us with 6c today and get the sample now. With it, we will send a piquant little book containing some clothes conservation hints you will like to know

CRÊME ELCAYA

CREME ELCAYA was first made because we thought women would welcome a toilet cream that was not greasy, that could be used under face powder, that would be both protective and beautifying.

Letters from all over the world tell us that it has done just what we hoped it would do. It has been a source of pleasure, of comfort, of satisfaction to women living in every country of the world—under tropic suns or among arctic snows.

It has helped them all to be more beautiful to look at, with a youthful charm that defies the years.

These women who see reflected in their mirrors such satisfying results are not occasional users of CREME ELCAYA, it is their daily habit. They use it every time they use their face powder and they go to no end of trouble to get CREME ELCAYA wherever they happen to be.

Here is the simple formula, which, if carefully followed, gives to your skin the look you have always wanted it to have:

A little CREME ELCAYA rubbed gently into the skin; then if you need color, a very little good Rouge spread carefully over the cheeks before the Cream is quite dry; and, after that, the Face Powder over all.

A trial package containing CREME ELCAYA and ELCAYA FACE POWDER may be had for ten cents sent to the address below and marked Department "K." Use ELCAYA ROUGE or your own, as you prefer.

DO you remember when Tom Sawyer went swimming and had everything hidden so carefully so that Aunt Polly couldn't find out?

Aunt Polly had sewed up his shirt that morning.

But Tom had carefully resewed it, so he thought he was safe. But alack and alas, he used black thread instead of white.

Once more you will laugh with Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn—but you will want to cry as you laugh. For behind the joy of youth is the reality of life—the philosophy you did not see when you were a boy.

MARK TWAIN

25 VOLUMES

Novels—Boys' Stories—Humor—Essays—Travels—History

While he lived, we loved him. He made us laugh, so that we had not time to see that his style was sublime, that he was biblical in simplicity, that he was to America another Lincoln in spirit.

We watched for his great white head in the crowds—we hung on his every word—we smiled, ready to laugh at his every word. But now he is gone—we love him—yes—he's still the familiar friend—but he has joined the immortals. More than Whitman—than Longfellow, than Poe or Hawthorne or Irving—he stands for America—with the great of the earth—the Homer of this new land—a prince of men—a king among dreamers—a child among children—

Low Price Sale Must Stop

Mark Twain wanted every one in America to own a set of his books. So one of the last things he asked was that we make a set at so low a price that every one might own one. He said: "Don't make fine editions. Don't make editions to sell for $200 and $300 and $1,000. Make good books, books good to look at and easy to read, and make their price low." So we have made this set. And up to now we have been able to sell it at this low price.

Rising costs make it impossible to continue this sale of Mark Twain at a low price. New editions will cost very much more than this Author's National Edition. You must act at once. You must sign and mail the coupon now. If you want a set at a popular price, do not delay. This edition will soon be withdrawn and then you will pay considerably more for your Mark Twain.

The last of the edition is in sight. There will never again be a set of Mark Twain at present low price. Now is your opportunity to save money. Now—not tomorrow—is the time to send the coupon to get Mark Twain.

Take advantage of this offer while you can. Remember, that it is because Mark Twain sacrificed some of his royalties that you can have a set at this price at all. Take advantage of that kindness that was so characteristic of him.

THE GREAT AMERICAN

He was American. He had the idealism of America—the humor, the kindliness, the reaching toward a bigger thing, the simplicity. In his work we find all things, from the ridiculous of "Huckleberry Finn" to the sublime of "Joan of Arc"—the most spiritual book that was ever written in the English language, of serene and lovely beauty, as lofty as Joan herself. A man who could write two such books as "Huckleberry Finn" and "Joan of Arc" was sublime in power. His youth and his laughter are eternal; his genius will never die.

Send Coupon—No Money—Today—Get your set before these go. Remember, never again will a set of Mark Twain be offered at such a price as this. When this edition is gone there will be no more. Send the coupon herewith at once.

An Utterly Unnecessary Corn

© B & B 1918

Why Will Dainty Women Keep Them?

Don't you find it hard to explain a corn, when millions never have them?

A corn means one of these things:

That you merely pare it or pad it, and never try to remove it. Or that you use some old-time treatment, harsh and inefficient.

Science has solved the corn problem by the method used in Blue-jay. Now every corn ache can be stopped in a jiffy. Any corn can be ended completely, and usually in 48 hours.

To do this, you simply apply a Blue-jay plaster. Then forget the corn. In 48 hours the average corn will go. And the toughest corn cannot resist a second application.

You can have no possible objection.

The application takes but a moment. The toe is then comfortable, the pain is entirely gone. There is no mussiness. Simply ignore the corn, go your way, and let the Blue-jay end it.

How Blue-jay Acts

A is a thin, soft pad which stops the pain by relieving the pressure.

B is the B & B wax, which gently undermines the corn. Usually it takes only 48 hours to end the corn completely.

C is rubber adhesive which sticks without wetting. It wraps around the toe and makes the plaster snug and comfortable.

Blue-jay is applied in a jiffy. After that, one doesn't feel the corn. The action is gentle, and applied to the corn alone. So the corn disappears without soreness.

Blue-jay is a famous chemist's invention. It is prepared by a surgical dressing house of world-wide reputation. Don't confuse it with the shams which people try and quit.

Blue-jay has millions of users. To them corns are but incidents, needing only a moment's care. Make one test, and you will join this army who never suffer corns.

Don't wait longer—make the test tonight.

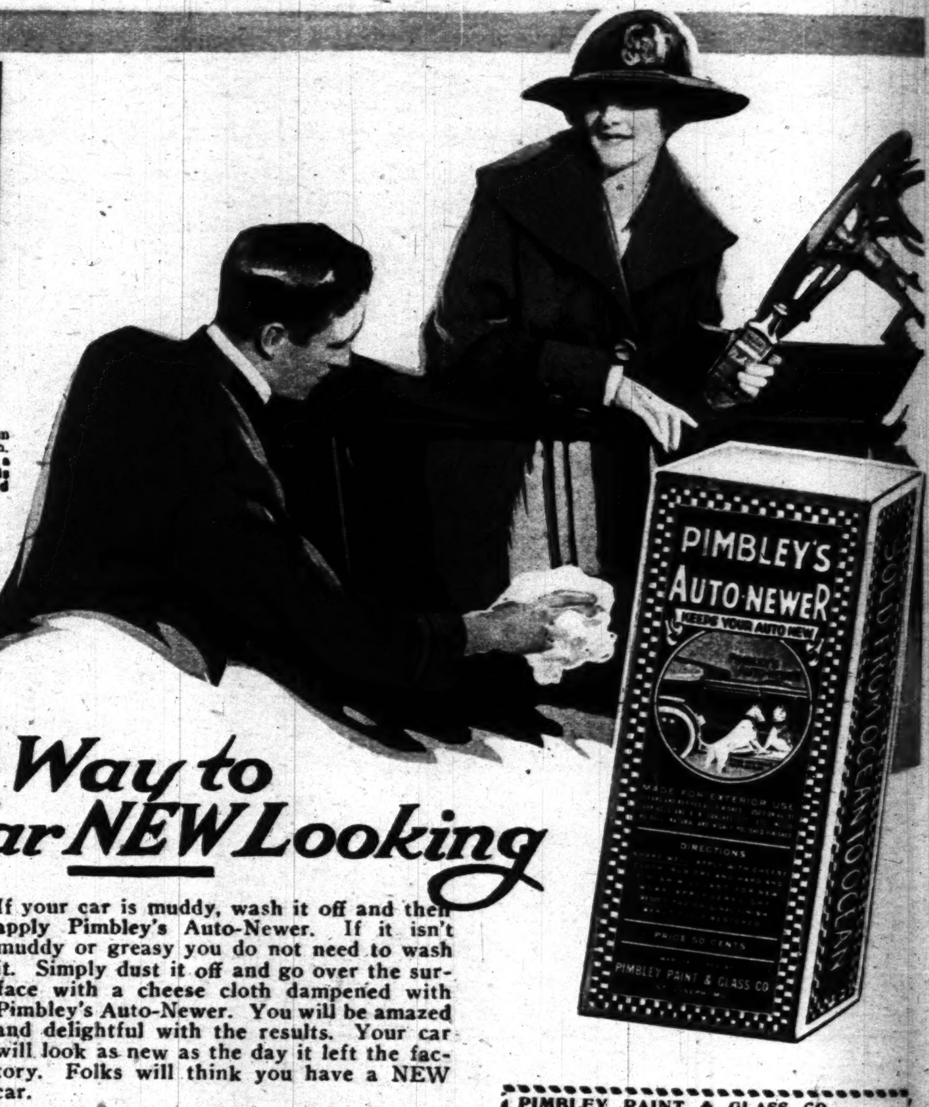
Do not rub or spray on a coating of heavy oil, wax or paste on the finish of your car, because they leave a filmy, greasy covering, affected by heat and cold, catching dirt and dust.

Soap and water alone is not sufficient to clean your car and bring back the beautiful finish. When you wipe the car dry after washing a cloudy, bluish cast is often noticeable. This overcast, or blur, disappears when the right kind of finish renewer is applied.



Yes
The Right Way to Keep Your Car NEW Looking

CLEAN, AND IMPROVE THE FINISH!

You never used a wax, paste or heavy oil polish on the finish of your car and got good results. If the manufacturer of your car thought it would have helped the finish, he would have put it on himself—but he doesn't even recommend it. It was never intended that the beautiful, original finish which the body makers of your car took such pains to give it should be "covered up" with a filmy, oily, greasy or waxy coating.

The best way to keep your car new looking is to give it an occasional rub-down with Pimbley's Auto-Newer. It cleans and renews and IMPROVES the finish. It dries dust-proof, heat-proof, weather-proof, and leaves no coating on the finish. Made for exterior use.

If your car is muddy, wash it off and then apply Pimbley's Auto-Newer. If it isn't muddy or greasy you do not need to wash it. Simply dust it off and go over the surface with a cheese cloth dampened with Pimbley's Auto-Newer. You will be amazed and delightful with the results. Your car will look as new as the day it left the factory. Folks will think you have a NEW car.

What Is Pimbley's Auto-Newer?

It is a light liquid compound made for exterior use so that the finish stays new looking in all kinds of weather. It cuts grease, removes water stains and tar spots. IT IS A FINISH RENEWER.

Pimbley's Auto-Newer is sold by nearly all first-class dealers. If not at yours, go where you can get it, or write us for a trial bottle, using coupon below. Price 50 Cents and One Dollar a bottle.

CHATTANOOGA STEW.

⅛ pound fresh tomatoes.
¼ pound turnips.
1¼ pounds potatoes.
¼ pound onions, small and whole preferred.
¼ pound carrots.

Cut the meat in one and one-half inch cubes, the carrots lengthwise, the turnips across the grain, and the cabbage in quarters or eighths with core. Place meat and vegetables in large pan with cold water to cover and bring slowly to boil. Let simmer until meat is tender and season. Chili colorado or comina or oregano as well as salt may be used. All ingredients should be thoroughly cooked but not broken into pieces in the cooking. The stew is improved by a bunch of parsley chopped fine and added just before serving. Any fresh meat and any vegetable may be used in this stew. (This is typically an army stew, no thickening of the liquid, but plenty of it for wetting bread, and reddish with tomato and perhaps the other seasonings.)

COOK JOHN CANDEA,
Fifty-second U. S. Infantry, Company G., Military Branch, Chattanooga, Tenn.

STEWED PINTO BEANS.

1 pint pinto beans.
¼ pound salt pork.
1 teaspoon salt.
1 teaspoon paprika.
1 medium sized onion.
2 tablespoons of molasses.
½ teaspoon mixed mustard.

Soak beans overnight in warm water. Cut pork and onion in small pieces, put in a kettle, add three pints of warm water, boil slowly two hours, then add the other ingredients and boil another hour. (These are wonderfully palatable.)

MRS. JOHN K. VANATTA,
532 East Bijou street, Colorado Springs, Colo.

OATMEAL CRACKERS.

2 pounds ground oatmeal.
1 teaspoon salt.
1 quart warm water.
Shortening size small egg.
1 teaspoon soda.

Rub shortening and salt into dry oatmeal. Dissolve the soda in the water and mix it with the oatmeal. Roll out as for pie crust, taking care to wet only enough for one cake at a time. Cut into quarters and bake on a baking sheet on the low shelf of the oven until the under side is brown, then remove and put under the broiler to brown on the upper side. These can be used instead of soda crackers and are preferred by all who have tasted them. (Cut in the shape of small crackers, when made with skill, these are truly palatable.)

VICTORY LETTUCE.

Lettuce, hard boiled egg, toasted bread.

Pick over the lettuce, rejecting all yellow or dried leaves; wash in three or four waters and cut in inch long pieces. Put on stove in double boiler, cover closely, cook twenty minutes with water boiling in outer kettle, or until it is as tender as you like it. Remove from kettle, drain, put back on stove in granite saucepan, season with butter, salt, and pepper; or it is nice with bacon fat. Mince hard boiled eggs and stir through lettuce. Toast and butter thin slices of oatmeal bread, place on hot platter, cover while hot with the lettuce, and garnish with slices of hard boiled eggs, and if you choose add a little pepper.

2 cups mashed potatoes.
2 yolks of eggs.
1 teaspoon salt.
¼ pound grated cheese.
Bit of butter.
Pinch pepper.

Make into a roll. Bake in oven and sprinkle with toasted bread crumbs while smoking hot. Serve with peas.

STEAMED FOWL WITH CELERY SAUCE.

One plump chicken.

Stuffing:
1 small head of celery.
1 tablespoon parsley.
1 large onion.
2 cups dry bread crumbs.
1 cup of johnnycake.
1 egg.
1 tablespoon vegetable fat and seasonings.

Celery sauce:
1 pint chopped and cooked celery.
2 tablespoons butter substitute.
2 tablespoons flour.
⅛ teaspoon salt.
1 saltspoon paprika.
1 pint chicken stock.

Prepare a plump fowl weighing three or four pounds. Stuffing: Chop together celery, onion, parsley, bread crumbs and cornmeal. Season with a teaspoon of salt, one-half teaspoon of white pepper, a dash of cayenne, one egg well beaten, and a heaping tablespoon of vegetable shortening. Have all fine and smooth and it will taste like forcemeat. Do not stuff the fowl too full, but allow for the expansion of stuffing in cooking. Steam two hours, or until tender. Have a quart of water in kettle when the chicken is done. Sauce: Cream together fat and flour and seasonings. Gradually add, while stirring, one pint of the liquid over which chicken was steamed. Cook the celery in a little water, add all to sauce, which may be poured over the fowl before sending it to the table, garnished with parsley and lemon.

INFANTRY BUILDER.

2 cups red beans.
2 cups boiled rice.
1 bay leaf.
½ teaspoon pepper.
3 tablespoons butter substitute.
2 onions chopped fine.
1 teaspoon salt.

Soak beans overnight and boil for two hours in slightly salted water. Melt butter, add onion and bay leaf, and cook slowly ten minutes. Add beans, cook for three minutes, and serve in a border of boiled rice. May use cup of brown sauce.

BIRNEY P. LYNCH, Royal Air Forces, Camp Beamsville, Ontario, Can.

CHEESE AND OATMEAL CRISPS.

1 cup rolled oats.
2 cups boiling water.
2 ounces rather dry American cheese.
1 large tablespoon butter.
2 teaspoons salt.

Grind oatmeal and put in saucepan with salt. Pour boiling water over it and stir until it is smooth. Add butter, put over fire, and when at boiling point cook one minute. Have ready a large buttered pan and spread mixture in an even thin layer on it. Bake in a cool oven until crisp. An hour is not too long. When it begins to harden take from oven and score in square or oblong shapes. Grate cheese on squares with a dash of paprika. Return to oven to melt cheese. These should be a delicate brown and crisp when done. (These are not any too easy to make, but highly palatable if cooked right, truly crisp and tender, not tough.)

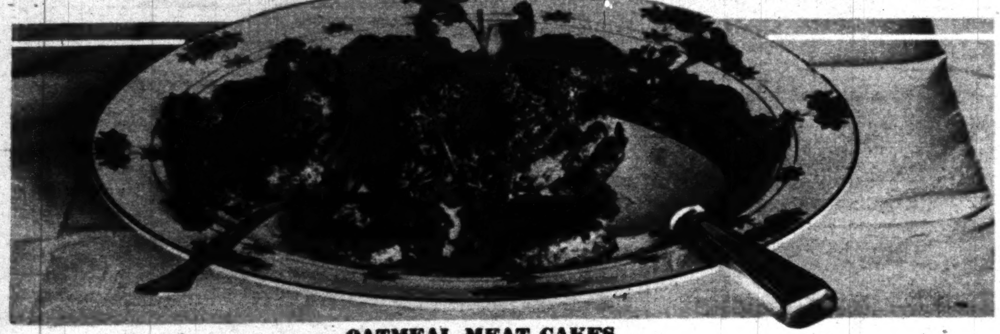
MISS AGNES M. McCOY, 5835 Prairie avenue, Chicago.

CARROT AND BEET JAM.

Carrots, beets, sugar, lemon.

Take equal weights of carrots and beet root, wash and boil separately until tender. Pass them through a coarse sieve and measure the purée. To each pint allow eight ounces of sugar and the juice of two lemons. Place all in a preserving pan and boil gently for thirty minutes and turn into pots. (This is pretty and tastes like fruit when fresh, without any taste of carrot.)

GARFORD MACKENZIE, 1539 East Sixty-third street, Chicago.



OATMEAL MEAT CAKES.

2 slices dry war bread.
1 tablespoon flour.
⅛ teaspoon pepper.
1⅓ cups cold cooked oatmeal.
1 finely chopped large onion.
½ teaspoon salt.
1 egg.

Put ground steak in a good sized earthen bowl and add cold cooked oatmeal. Mix thoroughly. Add the bread, which has been soaked in water and squeezed dry, also the onion, pepper, salt, and egg, and beat as one would a feather cake batter. Add a little water if necessary. Roll the meat into cakes or balls. Sauté in a greased hot frying pan until well browned on each side. Add a little water, cover the pan, and let the meat simmer over a low fire for ten or fifteen minutes. Serve hot, garnished with crisp watercress, parsley, or lettuce. (These are light and fluffy without the simmering, but that process may make a gravy.)

CUTEX
CUTEX

Bessie Love, one of the most delightful stars of motion pictures, says: "The Cutex way of manicuring is indeed pleasing, especially when your hands must always look freshly manicured"

Notice the improvement even one Cutex manicure makes; see how quickly you can give your nails the well-groomed shapeliness everyone admires

If you have been cutting your cuticle Read this

ARE your nails ugly with overgrown cuticle, rough, ragged edges and hangnails?

If your cuticle is inclined to push rapidly forward onto the nail surface; if it is difficult for you to keep it from breaking around the nails, from becoming sore and tender, don't cut it away—don't neglect it. When neglected the cuticle grows tougher, coarser and drier. It breaks and causes hangnails.

Dr. Murray, the famous specialist, says: "On no account trim the cuticle with scissors. This leaves a raw, bleeding edge which will give rise to hangnails, and often makes the rim of flesh about the nail become sore and swollen."

The whole modern theory of the care of the cuticle is emphatically against cutting. Begin today to manicure the scientific way.

Cutex is absolutely harmless. It removes surplus cuticle quickly and evenly and makes it possible for you to keep the base of your nails shapely and beautiful.

How to use it

Send today for the complete Cutex Midget Manicure Set offered below. In the package you will find an orange stick and absorbent cotton. Wrap some of the cotton around the end of the stick and dip it into the Cutex bottle. Then work the stick around the base of the nail, gently pushing back the cuticle. Almost at once you will find that you are able to wipe off the dead surplus cuticle. Rinse fingers in clear water.

After a few applications, no matter how mutilated and unattractive cuticle-cutting may have made your nails, Cutex will restore the firm, smooth outline at their base. Try it. See for yourself.

Cutex can be secured at drug and department stores everywhere. The cuticle remover comes in 30c, 60c and $1.25 bottles. Cutex Nail White and Cutex Nail Polish in cake, paste, powder, liquid or stick form are each 30c. If your favorite store has not yet secured its stock, order direct.

Remove discolorations from underneath the nails with Cutex Nail White.

Cutex Cake Polish gives you just the quick waterproof finish you want.

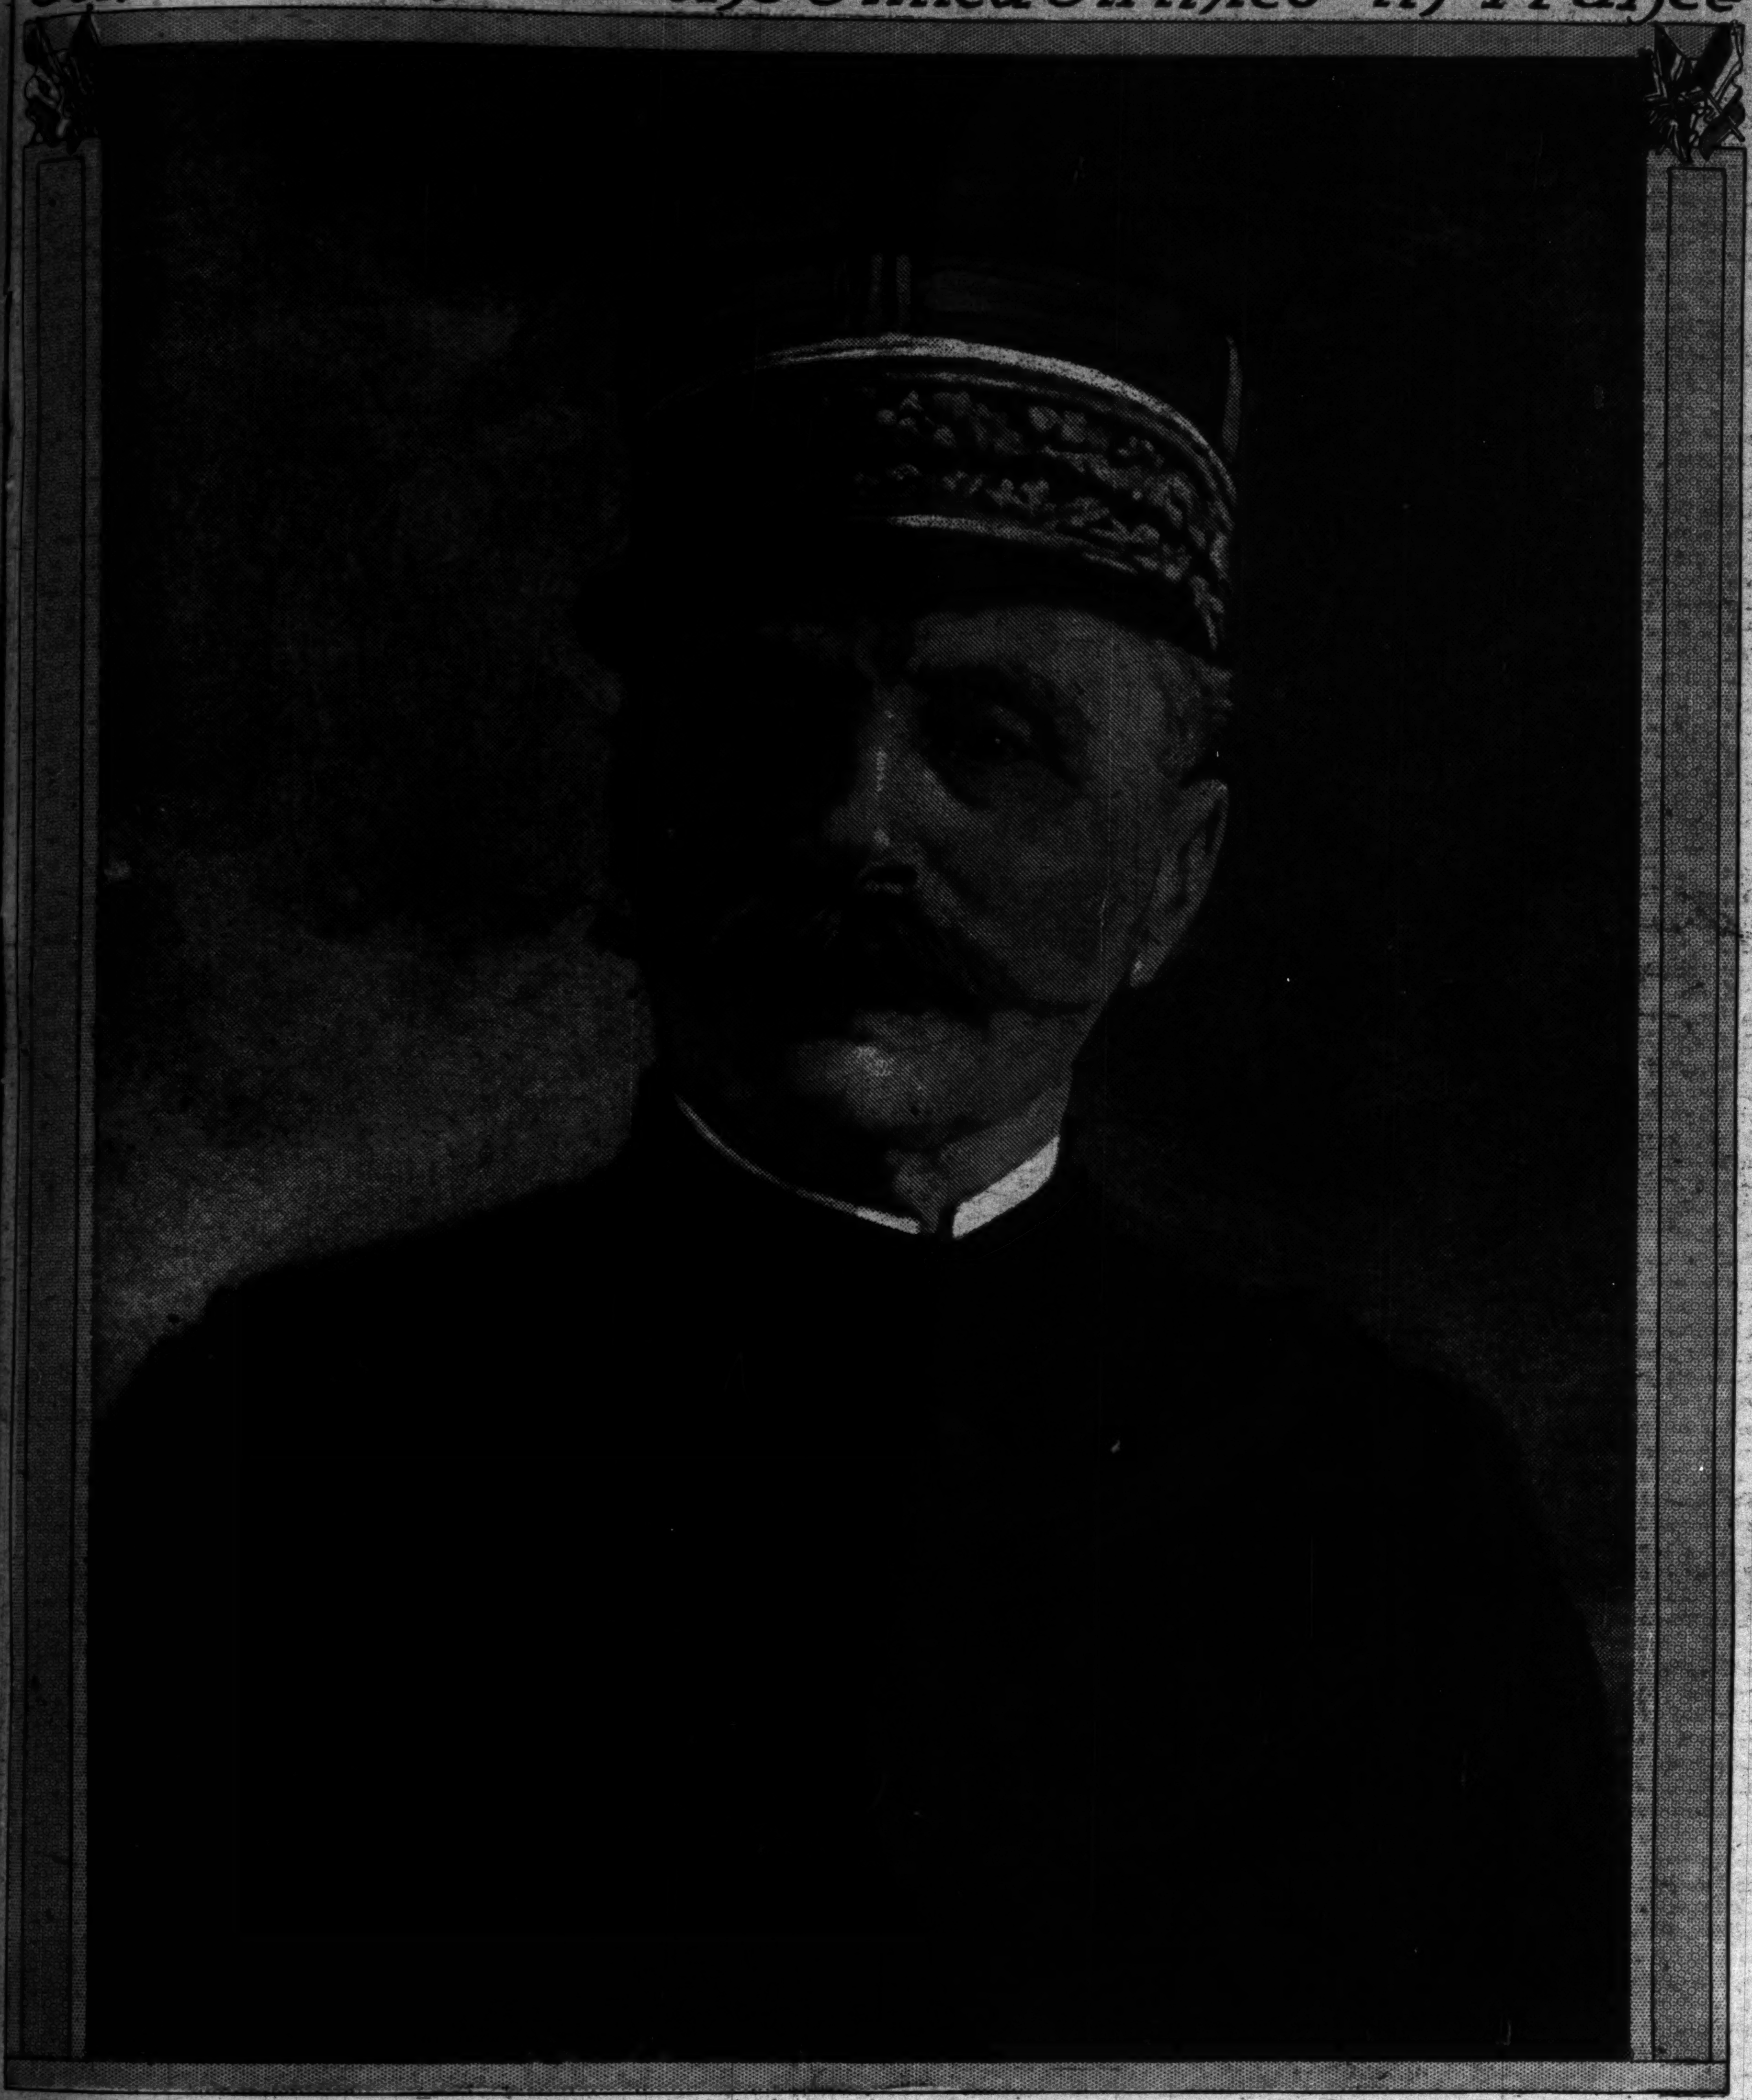
GEN. FERDINAND FOCH
Generalissimo of the Allied Armies in France



BY MAJ. L. C. ECKENFELDER.

(From L'Illustration, Paris.)

TWENTY-TWO years ago I was sub-instructor of equitation, or what they call "sous-maitre de manége," at the "Ecole de Guerre" in Paris. I was not thinking at that time that most of the men I was meeting every day had before them an historical future.

Among the professors of tactics and military science there were: Lieut.-Colonel Bonnal, Colonel de Langle de Cary, Major Dubois, assistant professor of tactics of cavalry, who during the war commanded an army; Major Lanrezac, who has been since in command of an army at the battle of Charleroi; Major Rousset, retired some years ago and now popular as a military critic on the Petit Parisien; Major Petain, who was generalissimo of the French army since; Capitaine Fayolle and Capitaine de Maudhuy, both army commanders today, and Major Foch, who was then assistant to the professor of tactics. He was a modest man, quiet and good natured.

This institution called "Ecole de Guerre" has really saved France during this war. It is thanks to the officers who were working there in the teaching and training of our staff that we found in our generals enough skill, knowledge and science to smash the hopes of domination developed for years in the boche hearts. For one thing it is due to the doctrines of the "Ecole de Guerre" that the victory of the Marne was gained.

Foch's hobby has always been what he calls "the economy of forces." All his life as a professor he repeated the importance of it as being the principle of Napoleon's military genius. It means first to study where is the vital point of a battle and concentrate in it the numerical superiority, and because of that we may be sure that at the present day Foch keeps some fresh reserves to be used when the time comes or he would be Foch no more.

This formula has been, too, employed by General Joffre at the battle of the Marne when General Maunoury was sent on the flank of Von Kluck instead of being employed in the center, where the efforts of the enemy were so considerable. But Joffre knew the value of the man who was in command in the center; that man was Foch.

Foch was occupying the critical part of the battlefield and his morale and maneuvering qualities were the main assets on our side at that point. He held his position with the most stubborn obstinacy and the wildest optimism, at St. Prix, at the chateau de Mondement, taken and retaken five times, at la Fere Champenoise. In a celebrated order of the day, addressed to the troops on the 9th of September, when he was surrounded by the boches, he said: "The situation is most excellent; I order you to go on the offensive again." And on the evening of the 10th General Foch, victorious at the same spot where his master Napoleon had fought a century before, slept at Fere Champenoise.

Since he has distinguished himself on the Yser beside the British, in Artoise in 1915, on the Somme in July, 1916—always with the British. And in Italy on the Piave, where he turned the tables against the boches.

THE UNIFORM

by JACK LAIT

The City Editor Goes On the Biggest Assignment.

THROUGHOUT the years 1913, 1914, and 1915 Charlie Stork, the lightning city editor, endured Gil Weyer; then he fired him.

Stork was one of those tabasco chaps, always half out of his chair when at the desk, a demon for results, a hard man to make excuses to, an impatient and petulant person to offer explanations to. He didn't have any respect for either of these. What he wanted was the goods. If a reporter was assigned to find a man and the man died meanwhile, that was none of Stork's concern—he wanted that man found and talked to. And if the man who had died had been a wicked man, Stork made no bones about telling the apologetic reporter where to go to find him, either.

Weyer, as has been noted, was fired. The assumption therefrom would be that he did not fit in with Stork's unlistening policy of delivering at all hazards, at all hours, and at all odds. But that's just the strange part of it—Weyer did fit in to all that, fitted in better than did any other man on the feverish staff of the Morning Gazette, which Stork, by elimination and accumulation, had assembled. Weyer was the best and surest "getter" in the city room contingent. If anybody could interview a dead man, Weyer could, and, when need was, did, for he was ready with his imagination as well as with his energy and talents.

But Weyer had one terrible drawback. He had to be "off" on Friday nights. Friday was Stork's short handed trick, for three of his men were drawn every Friday to write "bulldog" for the Sunday paper. "Bulldog" is filler of current but not immediate news, differing from "grapevine" in that it still breathes, and differing from news in that it has lost its first freshness after the catch. Because columns of "bulldog" had to be compiled from exchanges and other sources, to be set between Friday midnight and Saturday noon, Stork scratched Friday as the weekly seventh day of rest for his staff. But Weyer alone stood pat for his Fridays.

Stork knew why Weyer demanded Fridays. On Fridays the Dandy Eleventh drilled in the militia armory, and Weyer was a lieutenant in the Eleventh. And as often as Stork stormed and threatened hostile action, Weyer said he'd resign or be "canned" before he would give up his Friday pleasure—yea, his Friday duty.

Stork poohed at the "duty" part of it. If you will project your memory back to the days before the big war, you may recall with some pain and surprise the estimate which most folks held then of the state militia, and even the regular army. The "tin soldier" was an open jest. He evoked no thrill of patriotism. He wasn't regarded as the savior of his state or country, or as the protector of anything. Militia service was viewed by outsiders as a brand of affectation in grown-ups within whom survived the childish desire to play soldier.

Most of the men in the service didn't take it much more seriously than did the populace outside. They entered for numerous and various reasons, scarcely two in any company really being there because they sincerely wanted to help their state. Of course, they were good lads, who were willing enough to fight if there should be a fight, but the chances of a fight were so remote that this element was about the last to be considered. The advantages advertised were the right to wear a uniform, the possible acquisition of a military title, a two weeks' picnic in camp at the state grounds every summer, good fellowship in the armory, and some interesting exercise—about what most fraternal orders and lodges offered; the disadvantages against these attractions were the enforced weekly drills during ten months in each year, and the scant chance of messy strike or riot duty.

Almost any one could enlist, as physical examinations were lax, and it was not difficult to be honorably discharged—a postal card request was usually enough. Commissions were given out freely, usually to men elected from the ranks by vote of the companies. Almost any man who had patience enough to stay in a regiment two years could be a lieutenant.

For a man those days to speak with deep feeling about his duties to and in a guard regiment was regarded generally as bombastic and eccentric—a bit ridiculous, in fact.

Weyer went into the Eleventh for reasons which he never felt it needful to explain. There was no mystery about it, but he would have been bantered had he frankly made known that he had a passion for soldier stuff, that he yearned for the feel of arms, that he loved the bugle's voice, and that he felt thrilled when he put on his uniform.

Stork ranted at him and joshed him and "rode" him, but Weyer clung to his weakness—it used then to be called a weakness—and said he didn't care what folks said or thought, he'd remain in the militia and he'd drill every Friday.

Once, when Weyer was "hooked in" on a story of monumental importance, he did consent to play hookey from drill on a single Friday night, and gave Stork hope that he was coming to see the error of his preference to the piffling game of soldiering as against the stern and truly weighty work of getting copy into a newspaper. But Stork was too hopeful—Weyer, instead of realizing what a fool he had been all those other Fridays, gave himself a round scolding because he had been a fool on that one Friday—the one when he had yielded to Stork's raving pleas and had cut military regulations for journalistic orders. Weyer made it absolute and unequivocal—henceforth his Fridays were his own, or, rather, his state's.

On the very next Friday Stork hit his table with his fist and told Weyer that he must "cover" the developments in a mystery yarn that night. Weyer said there wasn't a chance. Stork asked him again—for the last time. Weyer repeated his no. Stork told him curtly that he was "through." Weyer turned and walked out. Stork regretted losing Weyer, and he told Harvey, the managing editor, so, emphasizing that it was a pity that a man otherwise so sane and balanced—and so capable—should be ruined by that one idiotic fad, that itch for military horseplay. What sense was there in a successful civilian monkeying with such drivel? That was for hobos who made a means of subsistence out of it, just as the navy was a refuge for incorrigible boys who were given the alternative of going into uniform or into the reformatory, but not for men who had some class and some ambition and some ginger, and who could and did earn decent livelihoods in respectable ways.

And the m. e. agreed with him—sounds strange now, but he agreed with him—then.

Weyer found another job, on an afternoon paper this time, and had no further set-tos about his precious Friday nights. And Stork got another man, not as good as Weyer was, but good enough, and that man was married and craved Sundays, when he could be home with his family, for his weekly respite; and Stork was satisfied.

But a year and some months wore on, and Villa, the Mexican mosquito with the deadly bite, buzzed over the deadline, and President Wilson called out the troops from every state—the first mobilization since the war with Spain. Patriotism grew warm, and it was suddenly discovered that the troopers were heroes. Still, what did it "get" them? They were photographed and lauded in verse, editorial, and cartoon, but they had a dreary siege of it down on our lower border, sizzling in the sun, doing the nation's dirty work and getting a dollar a day. So those who were in the milita felt like martyrs, and those who weren't congratulated themselves on their perspicacity and remained up north, where the wages were high and one could get butter.

The boys came straggling back. There was to-do when they returned, for a few days regimentals were popular on the walks, then the individuals who had made up the punitive forces refitted themselves into civil life, a little browner than before, and a whole lot poorer, and again the fountain pen was mightier than the sword—and much more "sensible."

But on one day, after the events which the world knows, the immortal pronunciamento came, proclaiming a state of war with Germany. The nation was called to arms. Too late the United States realized how pitifully unprepared it was, and what a Hercules job it had on hand, fitting totally untrained men to cope with the veteran Hun. In that hour a man who knew "Shoulder arms" from "Mark time" stood forth as a giant, a seasoned campaigner, a professional soldier, against the millions who for the first time felt the summons to the battle line, the millions who had never handled a weapon, who knew nothing of formations or regulations, marksmanship or marching.

The whole guard was adopted as a body into the national army, the officers retaining the ranks they had worn by virtue of the armory elections and state appointments.

Stork was a sound hearted American. Being of fighting age and in enviable health, unmarried and untrammeled, he handed in his resignation and enlisted. The staff gave him a banquet and predicted that he would bring back one of the kaiser's ears for a souvenir, which is about the same as was predicted for each of countless others who enlisted at that time and drew banquets. He was given a few days to arrange his affairs, and was then told off to an infantry battalion in a training camp. Private Stork reported as assigned, registered in the receiving office, and began his life in the great service.

Armies nowadays are composites of individual specialists, as far as possible. In military lands specialists are raised for the armies; here no one had been raised for the army, and when the army had to suddenly throw itself together it sought out specialists in men who had done work or revealed capabilities as approximate to the myriad lines of endeavor as could be found. Every new man was questioned to determine what line he was most likely to best fit by vocation, temperament, experience, bent, and talent. Stork was cross quizzed by the sergeant major.

"What was your business before you enlisted?" he asked.

"I was city editor of a great newspaper."

"Ah. Then you were a trained executive, used to handling men?"

"I was regarded, I believe, as possessing more than common executive abilities, and have, for several years, had many men under my charge."

"Fine," said the sergeant major. "You will look after the captain's horse. And see that you edit out any stickers you find in his skin, because this is none of your reserve captains—he's a martinet for efficiency, thoroughness—and deportment; don't forget your deportment."

Stork looked miffed.

"But I—I know nothing about horses," he ventured.

"You'll learn. You know nothing of rifles, trench tools, practice ranges, bugle calls, setting up exercises or bomb throwing, either—but you'll learn all about all those, too. There is nothing that calls for more executive capacity than chaperoning a captain's horse. You never had a reporter in your life who was any more temperamental, or who needed more the direct influence of a thoughtful, quick witted gentleman than does a captain's horse. I knew nothing about such things, either, when I joined the army—I was a diamond polisher; now I'm a sergeant major, and, if any one should confidentially inquire, a doggone good sergeant major. The corporal, here, will show you where to go and what to do. Beat it!"

"Another word and I'll order you under arrest."

The corporal trudged the shocked and slightly dizzy Stork to the stables and introduced him to the captain's horse, a tall bay with trusting eyes and untrustworthy teeth. He gave Stork his directions concretely and tersely, then left him.

The man who a day before had been an important editor, stood a moment and wondered whether he had been a jackass to enlist and whether he would be a sincere enough servant of his flag to make himself believe that he was helping to save humanity and dethrone tyranny 3,000 miles away by currying a horse; wouldn't he have been more useful to his country if he had remained at his desk and helped to keep his paper humming with inspiring news, stories that would induce young men to offer themselves, and older men to offer their money?

Well, it was too late now. Even if he could have gotten a discharge, and he had some strong political friends who might have put that over, he would be the joke of the press club and the editorial room. How could he preach and publish patriotic propaganda after he had reneged from the sacrifices and the services to which he would invite others? No—he must see this through; maybe cleaning a horse would really help whip the kaiser; at least, while he played nurse to the animal some other man would be fighting, some man who would have to be cleaning that horse if he didn't. So Stork started. The horse, though he knew nothing of patriotic psychology or noble promptings, was not, however, entirely devoid of instinct; he recognized at once that Stork was a rummy at cleaning and feeding an equine, and he made protest with hoof and mouth.

Stork had no one to help him. He knew that he had to finish that job—and finish it right. So, taking on fresh bruises as he went, he contrived to feed the beast and get its coat reasonably napped by the time when his gold wrist watch (all privates who get banquets get gold wrist watches; the two are concurrent in their manifestation) told him that it was time, according to the corporal's itemized routine of instructions, to bring the horse around to the captain's quarters. He untied his charge and, willy nilly, led it to the appointed place.

The officer was waiting. Stork dragged the steed as near to the spot where it belonged as he could induce it, with his unpracticed hand, to come, parked it there, prancing and uneasy, and, hanging onto the bridle with his left hand, saluted with his right—saluted clumsily and amateurishly, as all new recruits do. The captain swung his right hand smartly to over his right eye, then cut it sharply downward and outward, in acknowledgment. Then Stork looked up.

The captain was Weyer.

"Well, of all men—Gil Weyer!" exclaimed Private Stork.

"Silence!" roared Capt. Weyer. "Speak when you are asked to, and be respectful in the presence of your superior officers. You may go, orderly."

"But—aw, say—you're not going to rub it in on an old side kick. I know all about that military discipline stuff—but not between me and you. Why, say——"

"Another word and I'll order you under arrest."

Stork flushed. He almost wept; the humiliation was intense. He realized that he was a soldier, a soldier of the ranks, and that Weyer was an officer, and that what Weyer said was according to the code—yes, that it was necessarily right, too. But it was hard to swallow—Weyer might have been less blatant, at least.

He saluted and turned to go.

"Orderly," called the captain.

Stork turned and stood at attention.

His captain walked over to him.

"Now, listen, Stork," he said. "I have no desire to make you feel small, and I don't want you to think me imperious. But in the army there can be no 'used to be.' It isn't me you're saluting; it isn't I who talks gruffly to you. There is no I and there is no you. We are uniforms. You salute my uniform; I return the salute to yours. If another man is wearing the khakis that you wear, I regard him just as I regard you; when you meet another man who wears the uniform I wear he is and must be to you what I am.

"That must be your method of thought henceforth. It is the essential one in army existence. Without that Germany couldn't fight another day—could never have fought one day; and, in order to conquer her, we must observe it at least as firmly as the enemy does.

"The biggest thing about making a soldier—the biggest thing about making a fighting army, which is a crystalization of many soldiers into one body—is the military frame of mind. That is the one thing of value that this country had in its militia. Our experience amounted to almost nothing; what we learned in the annual camping junkets and the Friday night maneuvers on a dance floor will do very little toward downing the Hun. But the spirit which we imbibed and the discipline which we absorbed even in those crude assemblies will prove invaluable and make the ex-militiamen the nub and nucleus of the new army.

"It will take you a few days to digest—to feel—just what I am seeking to impress on you. Then you will understand. Thereafter, when you take an order from an officer—be it an order to clean a muck heap or to charge through a first line trench—you will take the order proudly, not either dumbly or humbly. You will have brought yourself to the frame of mind where you ask no questions—entertain no questions—when an officer gives you a command.

"That will grow on you. And then, some day, when an officer orders you to go through slaughter to victory, or to a game man's finish, you'll go—you'll go and never realize until it's all over just why you went; you will then remember that you went because your officer told you to go—and there can be no better reason, no higher purpose. If your officer is an ass, suffer. That is, the remaining ego of the ex-civilian suffers. A true-in-his-heart soldier cannot suffer. He can only obey.

"Orderly, you may go."

Stork stiffened, looked squarely into his captain's eyes, and saluted. Weyer saluted back, and there was an approving smile on his face, for in his orderly's salute this time he saw a significance, not a formality; a pledge, not a gesture.

Somewhere in France,
April 20, 1918.

My Dear Mr. Harvey:

It is with a choke in my throat and tears in my eyes that I write you to amplify my cablegram of yesterday, regarding the glorious end of Sergt. Charlie Stork, as true a soldier as ever shed his blood for liberty. Through the many months in camp I had learned to love him—he was, for a time, my orderly, and he was a model of precision, accuracy, and respectful obedience. It was my pleasure to recommend him twice for promotion after I had transferred him into active work, where he proved as thorough and capable as he did in the less direct branches of defending and carrying on the Stars and Stripes. He was an inspiration in soldierly deportment, activities, and—what was far more important—soldierly frame of mind, to the less sincere and capable men about him.

I shall not describe, at length, to you how he died; I need not emphasize to you, who knew him, that he went down game and gory, fighting like a lion, and that his last mortal motion drove his bayonet through the heart of a Hun. It was a closeup engagement.

It was my duty to send him and his squadron into a gap torn through by machine gun fire. As he reached the breach in the entanglements the charge reached him. I never saw men more brave or more resolute than Sergt. Stork and his little contingent as they stood ground, battled and died without once turning an eye to the rear—or, I feel sure, a thought to the rear. I sent him to hold that spot. He held it while he lived.

Put a gold star in the service flag of the Morning Gazette, and tell the boys in the editorial room that their one time chief was a man, a gentleman, and a hero. And if ever I get back to God's land, you and the boys and I will put up a little shaft somewhere to Charlie Stork, the best the old staff ever gave to Old Glory.

Faithfully yours,
(MAJ.) GILBERT WEYER, A. E. F.

THEIR BOYS

by ONEY FRED SWEET

They Sat Glaring at Each Other—Rivals in the Battle for Business. And Each Face Had Its Scars from Years of Such Battle.

THE train was crossing the Ohio river after pulling out of Cincinnati. It was the river on which Eliza had crossed the ice, but Ben Parks did not connect the rather yellow flow of water with the bygone dramatic incident. He hardly noticed the river at all. There was a Detroit automobile man in one of the cars ahead, bound for Florida to buy a tract of land for a winter home, and Ben, being in the real estate game, had been shrewd, he felt, in contriving to travel on the same train.

Ben sank in the upholstery of the smoker and bit the end off his cigar. He was a heavy man and it was getting warm south of the Mason and Dixon line. Ben unbuttoned his vest. He had just sent a wreath of smoke contentedly toward the ceiling of the car, when a tall, thin gentleman in a checked suit entered. The stranger took a seat at right angles, crossing one leg over a knee.

"I beg your pardon," he ventured, "but you don't happen to be Mr. Farnham from Detroit?"

Ben gasped inwardly, but to all outwardly appearances he merely took an extra long puff on his cigar.

"Looking for Farnham?" he answered with a question of his own, his eyes narrowing.

"I understood he was on the train," went on the tall man, evenly. "Cross is my name. I am a real estate man myself." He removed his hat, revealing a bald head, the hairs that had not vanished altogether being iron gray.

"I see," grunted Ben, clearing his throat.

Outside the car window rolled the blue grass country of Kentucky, the big brick homes with their white columned fronts breathing to one in the mood of the traditions of half a century before. But this was another age.

"And I suppose it's up to me to introduce myself in return," continued Ben. "Well, I'm Parks, the man you beat to it on a land deal just a month ago. I expected to run on to you one of these days and get a chance to tell you what I thought of your methods." Ben's eyes were big and round behind his spectacles, his double chin resting against his wilting collar.

"I can't recall anything in that deal that wasn't strictly business-like," Cross flared back. "I may have moved a little faster, talked a little harder. You know, these days——"

"You butt in on this Farnham transaction and I'll bust your head," interrupted Ben. "Run down my proposition with just one word this time and I'll fix you so you'll leave my field alone in the future."

"Your field?" questioned Cross, sarcastically. The expression on his face had not become beautiful to look at. In spite of his recent careful grooming, new stains of travel were creeping on, and the lines of his face seemed to deepen.

There they sat glaring at each other—rivals in the battle for business. And each face had its scars from years of such battle.

They wore no flashing armor, no plumes. The spears with which they lunged and parried were invisible, but they were not without power to wound.

There they sat—anger meeting anger in their fight for their homes and the ones they loved. Victory? It paid for rent and bought the groceries, and enabled the wife to dress as well as the woman in the next block. Defeat? Defeat in the economic struggle—it didn't leave very pleasant things in its wake.

The train continued to "click, click," a bridge was crossed with a hollow sound.

Cross made a move as if to rise and Parks half closed his eyes and watched out of their corners, the cigar nervously twisting about in his tightly pressed lips. Strategy was being brought into play on both sides. Cross sat down.

Cross arose, left the smoker, and started on a hunt through the train, Parks at his heels. Together they bounded down the car aisles trying to keep their equilibrium against the constant lurch. Cross had fire in his eye; Parks was breathing battle. They returned to face each other in the smoker again. Farnham could not be located. There was no one aboard who had at all the appearance of the Detroit automobile magnate.

Parks longed for cave man conventionality and cave man strength that he might reach over and choke the tall man. Cross struggled against a desire to rush the heavy set Parks to the car platform and hurl him down an embankment.

When noon came they dined—watching each other like hawks. No words passed between them. They returned to the smoker.

The train crossed into Tennessee. The big hills were fresh green. Ferns and honeysuckles gave their dew to the sunshine. Streams rambled down the ravines. Barefoot boys with fishing poles peered at the passing train from the plank platforms of mountain town depots. Nature purred and sang, but on the train, whose road bed had been forged at nature's reluctant acquiescence, two men sat and faced each other with hate in their hearts.

And then there came another yellow river, and rising majestically blue far down the banks could be seen old Lookout mountain. Looming there in the middle of Dixie, it was like a huge monument to tell oncoming generations that never again would there be any sectional differences in the land of the Stars and Stripes. The question had been fought out years back, the brave of both sides were sleeping on the mountain crest where they had fallen, the scars were healed, and decision had been made for all time.

But neither Parks nor Cross were in reminiscent mood. They were out to put over a 1918 deal.

The train drew into the station at Chattanooga. Parks and Cross, travel stained, weary of body, and nerve weary of each other, alighted for the ten minutes' stop. Both studied the fellow passengers who got off the train with them. A newsboy shouted. Parks grabbed a paper. Cross grabbed a paper. Parks scanned the front page, turned to the inside, searching. Cross scanned the front page, turned to the inside, searching. For a moment or two neither had paid any attention to the other.

"I guess the boy's all right," spoke Cross, oblivious to his surroundings and unconscious of his hearer. "Not much of a casualty list today."

Parks glanced up. Cross tightened his lips, started to fold his paper.

"He's all right so far," said Parks.

"Who?" asked Cross.

"My boy over there."

"Yes."

"Not much more time here, boss," interrupted the train porter.

They climbed aboard the train again.

"Yes," sighed Parks, as he reached his seat in the smoker, "my boy went over with the Rainbow bunch—great boy! Got a picture from him last week, and you'd hardly know him, must have gained twenty pounds—great, big, strapping fellow!"

"My boy's with the engineers," said Cross. "Haven't been able to hear from him for a long time, but I think he was in that drive business. That's what he wanted—action. I guess he is getting it."

Parks drew a pack of letters from his coat pocket and from among them he fingered forth a snapshot. He handed it over to Cross. "Taken just a few days before he sailed," the father explained. "He was expecting his sergeant stripes. Guess he's got 'em by this time."

Cross produced his snapshot from within a flap of his pocketbook. It was a group picture. "Ted's second from the right end, lower row. He wrote that they ran into only one submarine going over, and he thinks their gunners put it out of commission. He hasn't complained any about the food, but he spoke about the mud and rain there in France. Of course they can't write much."

"Tom had quite a bit of trouble with his arm when he was vaccinated," mused Parks, "but he's mighty fit now. He wanted to go into aviation at first. He was always a great boy to be tinkering at something mechanical."

The snapshots were returned to their places of keeping. Neither man spoke for a time. Their eyes were turned toward the window but both saw what was in another land.

The porter entered.

"Folks suah is funny," grinned the Negro, as he stood shaking his head and looking out the window, too. "Heah I'se had that big automobile man Fahnam on de train since mo'nin' and never knowed it. Done tell me he's on de way to Jacksonville to buy a fa'm. You gemman both seed him—dat little man in de brown suit wid his shouldahs humped ovah in de middle ob de next cah."

"Hmmm."

"And that fellow is Farnham?"

"Parks," said Cross, leaning forward and patting the other on the back. "You go in and see him."

"You go in first, Cross," insisted Parks. "Go on. I want you to."

"Well," compromised Cross, rising, his eyes twinkling with comradeship, "I'll tell you what we'll do—we'll both go in and see him together."

GUINEA GOLD

SYNOPSIS.

George Scott, a young Irishman, finds a map in a South Sea curio shop, and has such reason to believe in the truth of it that he leaves at once for New Guinea. He reaches the islands and falls in with a group of gold miners. One of them, Dence, promises to help him find the mine located by the accidentally discovered map. Another of the miners, Clay, is hostile because he has been left out of the plans. At the hotel Scott meets a girl. She is acting as a barmaid, having been forced to flee from all who knew her through the scandal aroused by the divorce forced on her by her husband on the ground of her having attempted to poison him. Scott believes her innocent and falls in love with her. After suitable preparation, Scott, Dence, and a miner by the name of Anderson go up to the gold fields. After a perilous journey they arrive at the scene of Cripp's prospecting, and there on a quartz reef they find it—lumpy, yellow gold! Dence, fearing his party is followed, takes the precaution of going out and staking the gold claim at midnight. At daybreak Scott and Anderson, unaware of this, go to the claim and find that Clay has jumped it and staked it also. Broken hearted they return to camp to learn that because of Dence's precaution their fears are groundless. Thereupon they take Clay prisoner. Through a transient dropped off the steamer Charmian learns that one of the witnesses in her divorce has confessed that his evidence against her was faked and that Ducane is on the way to Samarai to claim her again. She contemplates suicide but is dissuaded by Mrs. Carter who takes her to the Carter home on the Kikaramu fields hoping Ducane won't find her.

TENTH INSTALLMENT.

GOOD-BYE.

SHE had gone up to the top of the ridge one afternoon—a still, scented day, with a purple-gray sky of brooding heat. She had spent half an hour at her looking glass before leaving the house, as she always did "just in case . . ."

She was sure, somehow or other, that he would come that day, and she waited long, bitterly disappointed, till it was almost too dark to get down the great log staircase.

And, after all, he came that night.

Charmian was asleep in her little stick walled bedroom, "papered" with calico. The Carters were asleep in their lean-to close at hand—a curious apartment walled with split logs and floored with the tops of packing cases.

The rain was making so much noise that no one heard the approach of Scott and his train until the veranda, all of a sudden, shook and thundered under the tramp of an army of bare feet and the shock of twenty loads thrown down. Charmian, springing half out of bed in a wild alarm of Karivas, was stopped by the sound of Scott's voice loudly hailing the Carters, and the answering exclamation from the storekeeper's room.

In a moment, it seemed, lights were flitting everywhere, wood was being chopped in the cookhouse, men were waking on the back veranda (where the spare beds were put) and jumping up with loud thuds, dogs were barking, natives and whites calling to each other.

Charmian, barefooted and in her nightdress, slipped over to the wall that partitioned her room from the main veranda, tore a thread or two of the calico screening, and peeped through the sticks, her heart thumping so that she could hardly stand. The veranda was full of men, mostly in pajamas.

All this Charmian saw with half an eye, in half a second. Almost instantly her glance swept on to the central figure in the strange, uncivilized scene—Scott.

He stood in the middle of the whites, leaning up against the veranda rail as though he were tired with the day's tramp, and patiently answering the showers of excited questions cast at him by every one who could get in a word. She could not hear what they were saying because of the noise of the rain, but she could see that something had happened, and that Scott was telling about it.

Standing there in her nightdress, with the wet, warm wind blowing through the chinks of the crazy wall, she took her fill of gazing. He was changed. He had grown older and graver, even in those few weeks—so quickly does the Land of Mystery set her seal on those who serve her. But the bright, cool sunshine of his eyes and smile—the sunshine of that far northland that she had never known—was the same.

She found herself seeking for words to clothe a thought that floated before her, naked, dim, elusive. She had never been good at handling and clothing ideas, though her active brain brought forth its full share. People had not asked her to have ideas, or to express them. They had asked her to be pretty and charming, no more.

And now she was trying to be more, and she could not.

The love of the north. The love of the south. Dark and true and tender is the north, and bright, and fierce, and fickle is the . . .

"No—O, no!" said little Charmian, her lip beginning to quiver. "Fickle is the south—no—if I only were!

"There's something I'm afraid of in his face," was what she sobbed to herself at last. "I could do anything with poor Rupert. And Scott loves me far more, but with him——. There are men who would break your heart and their own just as they'd break a thread—a leaf—I can't say it, but I know what I mean.

"I've been saying all my life that men are too bad," she told herself, "and now there's one who's too—too—good.

"But I'm thinking such nonsense," she said. "I don't know what I mean myself. And I must hurry up and dress at once. O, I wonder would it be wicked to pray that I may do my hair really well?

"At any rate," she said, "it would do no harm. I'll pray God to make me look very, very pretty, indeed; that'll include the hair."

She prayed rapidly and inclusively while she dressed, not forgetting, all the same, to "keep her powder dry" so far as to select her prettiest blouse, and her long Sydney riding boots, because they looked so well under the brief skirts one had to wear at the Kikiramu. The trade glass on the wall gave back a gratifying reflection by the light of the hurricane lamp.

"Thanks very much, O Lord," she said. "I don't think I ever looked nicer . . . if I weren's so pale."

There was a little pot of rose-red powder in her trunk. She took it out, looked at it thoughtfully, then put it back.

"I won't," she decided. "He would think it horrible if he knew" (he in this case meaning Scott, not the Almighty). "And, anyhow, rouge is only for women who are wicked, or women who are dreadfully miserable, and want to hide it. It's really bad to put it on for mere becomingness, and I never did, so back it goes."

Nature, waiting with the rose of life in her hand, out there on the veranda, invisible but strong, touched the cheeks of the girl with the petals of the immortal flower as she came into full view of her lover, and Charmian, feeling her own beauty run through her veins like wine, knew that no rouge was needed.

So, like a rose indeed she came into his sight, shining out in the rabble of rough whites and naked savages, under the flickering glare of the hurricane lamps, against the background of the dark and roaring rain.

And when Scott saw her he ceased speaking.

"Go on!" yelled half a dozen voices. "Sticking in the reef like plums—go on! How much of it was in sight—how far do you reckon it runs down? How . . ."

They drowned each other in questions. They seemed half mad with excitement; every man's face was red or pale beyond common, and some of them were thumping wildly on the table, or half dancing on the shaky floor.

But the crowd were left to ask unanswered when Charmian came in. Straight to her went Scott, and "the light that never was on sea or land" was in his eyes as he took her hand.

"You here!" he said. "Charmian, I thought it was your ghost—your little ghost—when I saw——"

He dropped her hand, and suddenly his eyes, though looking into hers, were veiled.

"You have come up to see the field?" he said, in another voice. "I hope you'll have a pleasant time. You'll pardon my going back to these men, won't you, Mrs. Ducane? The fact is, our party have got on to very good gold, and they are all anxious to hear about it."

"I am glad you have been fortunate," said Charmian, feeling her transient roses ebb away.

"We have; I must tell you by and by," said Scott, moving back to the men and being instantly absorbed once more.

Charmian joined Mrs. Carter and began helping her with the supper.

"That's a good girl," said the lady of the house, with something less than her usual sharp decision of tone. "Come out to the store and help me to open some more tins; they'll be wanted."

In the comparative quiet of the store, as they took down the tins and sawed them open, tumbling the contents into plates, the two women had a chance to speak.

"What's it all about? I don't half understaid," said Charmian.

"Why, I reckon they've struck it rich somewhere up on the Iri. Scott's come down to file the claim for the lot of them, with the warden here. He'll be off again as soon as he's loaded up with tucker. Every mother's son on the field will be off, too, I reckon, Carter among them."

"And you?" asked Charmian, her head bent very low over the clumsy tool in her hand.

"And you, you mean," corrected Mrs. Carter, with a hard laugh. "It's all the same, however. You and me together don't go for so much as a rotten stick in the Kikiramu in flood—now. You've got to learn, my girl, how much a woman counts in a gold rush."

She swept her tin-opener round the top of a can of grapes and poured them bubbling out on to a plate.

"I hadn't seen Tim—not for a year," she said, in a dry, indifferent tone. "Hand me that pickle bottle. He gets asthma sometimes. Always bad in the high country under canvas. And he lives in wet clothes day and night, out of sheer damn foolishness. Some of these days—— Men are babies, the whole lot of them. You don't know—you're a girl."

"I think you forget I'm a married woman—or was," said Charmian quietly.

"O, no, I don't forget you've been to church with a man," answered the other woman, piling biscuits on plates with the rapidity and precision of a machine. "But you aren't a real wife, and you never was. You don't know. You've been a man's pet cat, and purred on a cushion to please him. There's all sorts of marriage, and a lot of it isn't marriage at all. If you'd ever been a real married woman, instead of just a plaything that a man had to pay for with a ring, you'd know they was all babies—you'd know your husband was far more your child than any of your children. If you're done, pick up them forks—you'll find more in paper in the drawer, and come along. Don't drop anything—you girls are that butter-fingered."

Charmian, a little dizzied by the hail of hard facts that had just been rained about her ears, followed mechanically in her hostess' track without asking herself why she, a gentlewoman, delicately bred, should act parlor maid to all these rough men.

"If you'd been a real married woman you'd know they was all just babies." The sentence buzzed in her ears as she came out into the veranda again and set down her load on the table, about which the men were beginning to gather. Scott had been set free at last and had found a place at the end of the log bench. He was reaching hungrily for tea, and his face, through the yellow tan of the bush, was white with weariness. Charmian slipped into a seat and helped herself to something, she scarcely knew what, in order to have an excuse to stay and look.

Tears almost came into her eyes. She would have liked to stand beside him and help him to all he wanted. She would have liked to feed him with a spoon. Would not he shout with laughter if he could read her silly thoughts! Yet—she supposed—most women cared for men.

"You'd know your husband was far more your child than any of your children."

"Why—that's what she meant!" thought Charmian in a flash of illumination. "How I used to hate to watch Grant at his dinner! He ate so much and his face grew so red! But if . . . . he . . . ate too much, I wouldn't mind. I wish he would; he never eats enough. I wish they wouldn't keep him talking so much."

The food on her plate turned to sawdust then, and she could not get on with it, for she remembered what it was they were talking about—this find of gold, this hateful thing that (she felt in her heart) would put yet another obstacle between her and him. Another? What was the first? Well, about that she did not want to think.

It was near 3 in the morning now, and supper was done, but talk still kept on. The rain had stopped; the valley below was full of sweet wet smells, and a cold night breeze was beginning to blow down from the far main range. The Kikiramu sang a deep, full throated song at the bottom of the gorge—the war chant of the wild, unbroken land that these strong men were seeking to break and tame.

Charmian crept away to bed with the sound of that song in her ears. Scott had looked at her many times in the course of the evening—but he had come near her, or spoken to her, scarce at all.

When she slept she dreamed that she stood somewhere in empty space, "whether in the body or out of the body" she knew not, and that Scott stood near her, but that she could not reach him or touch his hand because of two strange shapes that pressed her away. One of the shapes was veiled and dim, the other was clear to her sight. It was the figure of a woman, dark and savage, with cruel, beautiful eyes and blood stained mouth. With one hand the woman held her away, and with one she held the man, tight as the white toothed alligator holds in the steaming swamps of the river lands. And the name of the woman was Papua.

Charmian awoke. She had thrown off the sheet and felt cold. The house was still at last, and the dawn was creeping down, purest gold, from the peaks of the German ranges. The girl sat up and flung aside her net to look out across the valley.

"They say this country is full of witchcraft," she thought. "I believe it was a vision. I believe, between them, they will take him away."

Melba was singing in the Kikiramu valley. In the full white blaze of morning, from the rocks of the river bed to the trembling finals of the trees that crowned the ridge, rose and sank down the golden voice. Across the leaf embroidered heights of the giant staircase, away to the broken flumes and bush grown races in the branchy depths below—from the great drop-curtain of forest that might well hide peering eyes of the dreaded Kirivas, to the little cleared and built on piece of land, where stood the rough brown buildings of the store—Melba was singing:

"Falling leaf and fading tree—
Shadows rising on you and me,
Shadows rising on you and me."

Here, where never leaf seemed to fade or summer to die, Melba was singing of waning suns and dying flowers.

"The swallows are making them ready to fly,
Wheeling out on a windy sky,
Good-by, summer—good-by, good-by!"

Scott was climbing up the giant stairway at the head of his trail of carriers. All the way the voice beat upon him as a wave beats on a swimmer half buried in the surf. Its golden spray deafened and blinded him. It seemed to fill the world.

"What are you waiting for, O my heart?
Kiss me straight on the brows, and part."

Not even a kiss! not even a kiss to take with him on the long journey into winter and dark that must last the rest of his life. How could a lover be altogether unhappy if he had a kiss to carry with him? But he had not had a kiss from Charmian. He had held her hand, and let it go, and gone.

"What are we waiting for, you and I?
Good-by forever! good-by! good-by!"

The voice, the marvel of a century, rose into a passionate cry that embodied all the pain of all the lovers' partings in all the world. How could one feel such pain and live? How could one go on, stumbling up the ferny steps of the great staircase, with the forest ahead, and the brown, naked, cannibal carriers behind—the long day's tramp to come, the river to ford, the camp to make in the wilderness at night—as though the world held nothing of her?

He did not know how. He only knew that he was going.

"Good-by for ever!"

They had reached the top of the ridge. The voice was growing faint.

"Good-by! Good-by!"

They were over and plunging down the steep. Melba's voice was still.

Tim Carter, sitting on his veranda, took the finished record out of his new gramophone and slipped in another.

"I don't think much of that," he remarked to himself. "I'll have something tastier this time."

And in another moment the valley rang to the strains of "Stop Yer Ticklin', Jock"

He had scarcely settled down to enjoy the song when a terrible thing happened. Some one, tall, furious, and very much out of breath, swept on to the veranda like a "gooba" (a New Gunea hurricane), there was a rush, a smack, and Tim fell half over the side of his canvas chair, rubbing his ear.

"Old woman! old woman!" he groaned, without looking up. "What have you got against me now? What is it I've done this time?"

"Got against you?" demanded Mrs. Carter, dropping into a chair and speaking between exhausted gasps. "If I could have climbed up that confounded lower ladder in time I'd have let you know! I was down at Mick's camp—he's ill—and I heard you begin that thing when I was half way up those steps from the river—and I could no more hurry—Tim Carter, you're a born fool, if ever there was one!"

"Well, well," said Tim pacifically, content, as he had been content a hundred times, to accept what he could not understand, "better take a bit of a rest; there's a lot to do by and by, with all the men getting off, the stores coming up from the landing. There's fifteen carriers from the Dragon Fly in half an hour ago—they brought my new gramophone."

"O, you—you——" Mrs. Carter was on her feet again. "You and your gramophone!" the words were charged with blistering scorn.

Her silence, as she rose again and moved across the veranda in the direction of Charmian's room, was of such a highly charged kind that Tim, fearing to cut the wire by some unguarded word or act, fairly held his breath until his better half had disappeared. Then he slipped away on tiptoe, out to the native carriers' shed in the yard, carrying his silenced gramophone in his hands. Shortly after, the raucous scream of a Cockney recitation rose on the heated air, mingled with the delighted "Woofs" of the house boys.

Charmian was lying on her face, with the heels of her shoes pointing up to the sago thatch ceiling. Her hair had come down, and was spread all over the pillow.

"She's taking it hard—confound Tim and his "Good-bys!" thought Mrs. Carter. For a minute or two she waited.

Charmian stirred restlessly and flung her hand across the edge of the bed. A long sigh passed over her, shaking her as the wind shakes the spear grass at sundown.

"Mrs. Ducane," said the tall Fate.

"I want to be alone." Scarcely to be heard, muffled by long brown hair, came the reply.

"I know you do," answered Mrs. Carter, but I'm not going to let you. It's not time to cry till you know you've reason."

"I'm not crying." Charmian turned on her side and looked up. Her face was deadly white, and her eyes were underlined with splashes of purple, but she was not shedding tears, nor had she shed any.

"Things you can cry over aren't . . ." Her voice trailed away. "If the end of the world came you wouldn't . . . cry . . ."

"My God! how you do lie down to things!" said the woman who had tamed Northwest. "Before I'd let a man treat me like that——"

"Did you marry the man you cried about most?" asked Charmian, sitting up and flinging back her hair.

Mrs. Carter's hard, handsome face grew slowly red.

"No," she said.

"Then I don't see how you can talk." Charmian was aroused now, and looked at the other with the instinctive hatred of woman against woman, that flashes out beneath the crust of civilization when love's volcano fire begins to play.

"You're a lot braver and stronger than I am, but you couldn't help yourself either. You needn't come and triumph over me. We're all unhappy together—women—that's the truth. I don't believe in the story of the snake and the apple, but there's something true in it somewhere. Life couldn't be so abominable to us if we hadn't somehow done something that had to be punished."

She put her hands over her face suddenly.

"O, I'm talking—talking," she said, "and he's going away . . . all the time, I don't know why I can't cry. I'm . . . broken . . . somewhere."

"Look here"—Mrs. Carter had sat down on the bed beside her and taken her hand into firm custody—"let's drop all that skite and come to facts. Why has he left you? This week or two that he's been here you was never away from one another. You was walking on the ridge, and sitting on the log staircase, and spooning on the veranda in the moonlight, and getting up to see the sun rise, and—well, what does it all mean?"

"It means—the other woman," said Charmian. The momentary excitement had faded; she was sitting in a crumpled heap on the bed, her eyes like gold brown flowers that had faded in the rain.

"What other?" Mrs. Carter spoke with a certain sharpness, expressive of her contempt for the ways of men in general.

"He never told me. He only said—today—when his boys were ready, and they put the loads on—he just said, 'If I were free——' and then he took my hand, and then he went away."

"Did you tell him about the Ducane man?"

"Yes. Yesterday. He said I must never go back to him."

"O, he did, did he? And did he tell you how you were going to manage to live—not that I wouldn't keep you as long as you like, my girl, but I know you——"

"No, I wouldn't—thanks. What does it matter how I live? I shan't live long!"

She had propped her little chin on her hands, and with her hair falling all about her was looking out through the low window, a long, long way, beyond the valley, and the forest curtain, and the far high peaks of the German ranges—whither?

"O, hell!" said the woman of the backblocks, standing up straight and tall, with her hands on her hips, and setting her face in a baffled frown. For once she had met with a situation she could not handle.

She swung her foot irritably as she stood—a trick she had in moments of annoyance. The toe of her shoe struck against a parcel lying on the floor, half under the bed. In spite of the swinging stroke the parcel moved not at all. Mrs. Carter looked at it. It was a smallish oblong packet, sewn up in ship canvas, rather like a loaf of bread in shape and size. She bent down and put one hand under it to lift it. It stirred no more than if it had been nailed to the floor. She took both hands and raised it with a mighty heave. In spite of her strength she could scarcely hold it.

"My oath!" she panted. "Gold!" She set it down on the bed, and the crazy piece of furniture creaked with its weight.

"Here," said Mrs. Carter, pulling Charmian up with small ceremony, "what on earth do you mean by having a fortune lying on your floor? What's the gold? Where did you get it? My oath! there's every weight of eight hundred ounces in that. If Scott left it for you to take care of——"

"He didn't," answered Carmian in a dull, uninterested voice. "He gave it to me."

"Gave it to you!" Mrs. Carter could scarcely find words. "Why, it must be every bit he's got!"

"It isn't. He said it was half."

"And you leave three thousand pounds, or thereabouts, lying under your bed!"

"I didn't know it was so much," said Charmian, her face showing some disquiet. "It was such a small parcel. He gave it to a boy to carry to my room. He said it was half of his gold, and I was to keep it, to prevent my having to go back to . . . He was saying good-by—and I couldn't think of anything else. What does it matter? He's gone."

Her face was like an alabaster lamp when the flame is dead within.

"Matter?" said Mrs. Carter vigorously. "I should think it did matter. If you're going to take three thousand pounds from him, you may as well have it put away in Tim's safe. My word! they must have struck it rich all right—there won't be a digger in New Guinea but will be up on the field in another month—and from Australia, too. Half of what he got! Eight hundred!—There, let's take it to the scales."

She trod heavily out of the room, carrying the parcel of gold nursed in her arms.

"Tim!" she called. "Tim! You come along here, quick and lively. Tim!"

"Eight hundred and sixty-three ounces!" she proclaimed, returning by and by with the parcel still in her arms, freshly sewn up. "Three thousand and sixty-three pounds, or thereabouts, in money. Over fifty pounds sheer weight, avoirdupois. And what am I to do with it, Mrs. Ducane?"

There was no answer from the bed. She bent down and looked at the girl. Charmian seemed asleep, but she did not wake when spoken to, and her pulse, when Mrs. Carter lifted the delicate wrist, was very slow and faint. It grew fainter as the older woman held it.

"Brandy!" called Mrs. Carter, sending the gold under the bed with a kick. "Brandy, Tim—she's got a heart attack, or something like it."

The shadowy Tim drifted in with a bottle and glass, waited while his wife poured out and applied the remedy, saw the fluid trickle down unswallowed on the pillow, and watched still, while Mrs. Carter briskly, efficiently, yet with a growing shade of anxiety in her face, tried one fainting fit remedy after another—to no effect. Charmian breathed quietly, her pulse beat, though slowly. But she did not regain consciousness.

Mrs. Carter came out of Charmian's room at last. She was wiping her forehead with her handkerchief, and looked disheveled and tired but relieved.

"My word, Tim, I have had an afternoon!" she said. "Never came round till about half an hour ago, she didn't. I thought she was going to peg out, sure and certain. She seems all right now, and only thinks she fainted a little."

"Well, didn't she?" asked Carter, insinuating the corkscrew into a bottle of beer.

"If that's for the man, you may go on with it. If it's for yourself, put it back on the shelf; you've had enough," ordered the queen.

Carter meekly put it back.

"Faint?" went on his wife. "No. Nor heart attack, neither, so far as I can see. Looked to me more like something I've never seen in a white person—yet."

"What's that?"

"Well, you know how those niggers can die in half a day, without anything being the matter with them, if they happen to lose interest in life, and reckon it isn't good enough to go on?"

"O, yes, I know that, same as every one does."

"I'll swear," said Mrs. Carter, with some emotion, "if she hadn't been a white woman, I'd have been certain sure she was just going off like that. She's right, now—more or less—and I'm going to make her eat some tea if I have to choke it down her throat for her."

"Where's the gold?" asked Carter with a suddenness that was one of his most astonishing characteristics. You would have thought him half asleep, as a general rule, but he waked up when least expected.

Mrs. Carter changed color and stepped quickly back into the bedroom.

"Under the bed," she said with a glance and a kick. "Tim, you gave me a turn."

"You ought to have a turn, old woman, leaving it there. Of course there isn't a digger on the field would touch it, but these Kiwais are too fly altogether about gold; any one of them——"

"Lord Almighty!" said his wife, making a sudden dart outside the house into the fierce rain that was beating on the track—"if that isn't Scott coming back, you may call me a Chow!"

The track to Cripps' reef—the new track that Anderson had marked out for Scott to follow on his way back—was already unmistakable to the eyes of any bushman. Coming down Scott had gone mostly by compass and by the lie of the Iri river, which, as it turned out, ran much nearer the Kikiramu in the lower part of its course than any one had supposed. The men who went over the track some time after him went by the footmarks of scores of carriers, by campfire ashes, by felled bush and torn away vine, by rough log bridges newly thrown over unfordable rivers—by all the signs showing a road that has been passed over many times. For the rush had begun.

A very small rush as yet—only the men from the claims around the Kikiramu store, and a few who had come in from the outer camps after Scott's arrival. The news was even now going down the Kikiramu river in the Dragon Fly launch and before another three weeks had gone past would be flying by the fortnightly mail boat and the Australian telegraph wires south, east, and west, all over the great continent.

Rupert Dence, coming down to the Kikiramu for reasons best known to himself, found the track as plain as a highroad, if scarce as easy. It was only a three days' walk by the newly marked out way—the prospectors' wanderings had taken them far away from the goal at first, and by the time they had reached it they had verged back within thirty miles or so of the Kikiramu field. If you crossed the alligator swamp—a reasonably safe thing to do in daylight—you could even manage the trip in two days and a half, with loaded boys. Dence took care to strike the swamp before sundown; he did not want to go round by way of an unnecessary range of mountains and lose half a day—now.

As he had started in the middle of the night from Cripps' reef, it was the middle of the second day when he reached the spot where the new track to the Iri struck into the old track along the Kikiramu. There was a well worn camping ground here; trees had been cleared a little and rough bush sheds for carriers had been built.

"We'll kai-kai here," said Dence to his head boy, picking out a log under the shade of a huge buttressed trunk. "Get water—make fire."

The Papuan went down to the river and the Englishman sat himself upon the log and lit his pipe. It was good to rest and smoke after the tramp of the morning.

There was time for a good long halt, and he took it, letting the boys prepare the midday rice and meat at their leisure. They brought him his dinner in a tin plate and he ate it with the knife from his belt, drinking milkless tea out of his metal pannikin.

He had pleasant thoughts as he sat and ate, and yet anxious ones, too. He frowned a little at his food and often stopped halfway through a mouthful of rice to consider. The head boy thought the rice was badly cooked, and trembled over his own dinner, for the soft voiced Rupert had a heavy hand on occasion.

If one could divert the Taubada's mind to anything else there was perhaps a chance of escaping trouble. If there were any game to point out—any traces of nomad tribes to find and make much of—anything——

The Papuan stopped eating and sat still as a figure of wood, listening. Why, surely there was something—feet advancing in the far distance—the faint, faint tread of a white man's boot, the faraway pad of bare soles.

"Taubada, one white man he come!" cried the boy, springing up.

"Some more of the men coming up," said Dence to himself, and lifted a bladeful of rice. He watched the turn of the track before him without interest until the white man at the head of the column of carriers came into sight. Then he jumped to his feet and uttered an exclamation. The turn was very near, and he had seen the expression on Scott's face. Hagridden, desperate, white, wearied with fierce exercise that had failed, after all, to ease the torment of his mind—the man's whole aspect spoke aloud of defeat and of pain.

It was only for a moment. He saw Dence almost as quickly as Dence saw him, and instantly the blind was drawn down, the bright, hard smile lit up like a lamp, the bent shoulders straightened. Scott, when he tramped into the clearing and held out a hand to his mate, was Scott as every one knew him—tired looking, perhaps, but pleasant, cheerful, ready to talk and even to joke.

In the days of Samarai, which seemed so long ago, Dence had almost loved this man, and Scott assuredly had been drawn to him as he was not drawn to any other man in Papua—not even to the fine nature and noble courage of Anderson, their leader. Now the two met with pleasant words on their lips but the hate of hell itself in their hearts. The uppermost thought in each man's mind that moment was—"Does she care for him?"—and the undermost thought——

I think that neither Dence nor Scott knew what that thought was. But the savages who stood about them knew. And one from the Aird river country, where they kill men for pastime as a child might kill flies, began to chant a low, fierce song and to cast devilish looks and laughs behind him at his comrades.

Meantime the white men were talking.

"Only getting back now?" said Dence. "I thought I'd have met you a good deal farther out."

"Why, what's bringing you down, anyhow?" asked the other, speaking more lightly than he felt.

"Bringing me down?" replied Dence thoughtfully, as if he had been set a riddle. Then, brightly—"I'll think it over and let you know as soon as I find out. Do you know, I was just wondering that myself. Couldn't suggest anything, could you?"

This was insolence. Scott felt his blood warming up. For the moment he dared not trust himself to reply.

Dence seemed to draw new life from every line of Scott's worn face and body, as a vampire draws food from living veins.

"Had your kai-kai?" he asked, breaking into a gay whistle as soon as the question left his lips and staring about him in the forest.

"No," answered Scott.

"Have some?"

"No."

"Reef's pinchin' out, Anderson thinks. Hard luck for all the Johnnies who are comin' up now. What?"

"Is that why you left it?"

"No. I left it," explained Dence, smoking as he talked, and speaking very gently, "because I—as dear old Micawber would say—'in short, chose.'"

WHEN THE TURTLE TURNED DO

Fools Rushed In Where Wise Men Wouldn't, But the Fools Felt No Regrets.

THE calm confidence in her position that enables a woman to visit her husband's place of business without self-consciousness, and to enter his private office unannounced, is not acquired in two months. Hence Ellery Jordan experienced a new sensation, at once delicious and perplexing, when, with no previous warning, his office door was flung open by an impetuous hand and he looked up to find his wife upon the threshold.

"Hello!" was his involuntary exclamation.

"Who is Lancaster Welles?" she demanded.

He perceived her excitement, but, still enmeshed by the novel and delightful realization of all that such an unexpected and unannounced entrance meant, he densely gave back question for question.

"Why?"

"Tell me! Who is Lancaster Welles?"

Wonder began to sharpen Jordan's mental faculties at the expense of his tenderer emotions.

"Chicago man. New manager for the Boltwoods. Why?"

"For the Boltwoods! The Chicago Boltwoods, whom Mr. Bower hates so?" As she spoke she gripped the edge of the desk with nervous fingers.

"Yes. Why?"

"Ellery Jordan, I've done the most awful thing! I've asked them to dinner!"

"Why—how—what on earth! You don't know them!"

"I didn't—but I do! And I did!"

"Well, worse things might happen."

"But you don't understand!"

"No," cheerfully, "I don't in the least understand; but anyhow, if you did it, it's all right. Now, suppose we sit down and talk it over—eh? What's happened?"

"The impossible!"

"Well?" he suggested.

"I'll have to begin at the beginning, or you'll never understand. And it's all so silly—and so impossible! You see, I was going down to get that set of plates we talked about last night," he nodded, "when just as I got to Twenty-third street, who should overtake me but your Aunt Julia! She had been in a shop somewhere along Broadway, and when she saw me pass she proceeded to race after me. Of course, she wanted to know where I was going and what I was going to get, and—well, you know Aunt Julia!" She turned toward him, with a pretty gesture of impotence, and he smiled, nodding appreciatively. "Of course, Aunt Julia is—Aunt Julia, and all that, but she wouldn't understand why I should want an extra set of plates just because the Bowerses were coming to dinner, after we'd had all that lovely china given to us when we were married.

"Well, those I wanted were rather expensive, and I knew she'd ask why I wanted them, and what I paid for them, and if I thought a young man on a salary, and if a dozen more things, and then she'd go and talk it all over with the rest of the family, and—Ellery, I just couldn't stand it! Besides, I was in a hurry. I wanted to get home—I never should have come down this morning if it hadn't been for those wretched plates! But I didn't want to be rude, you know, or to hurt her feelings, or anything like that, so I just thought of a—well, of a sort of ruse, you know."

"Well, I tried to—but I hadn't counted on Aunt Julia. You see, we were just at the entrance of the Silverbrand hotel when she overtook me, and it seemed so easy! So, when she asked where I was going, I said I was going shopping, but first I was going to see a friend who was staying at the Silverbrand, thinking, of course, that I could simply walk through the hotel—in at Fifth avenue and out at the side street, you know. She'd never be the wiser, and it would save a lot of wear and tear on my nervous system."

"You don't know Aunt Julia," he chuckled.

"Oh yes, I do—now! She said she'd go in with me, and if my friend wasn't there we'd go shopping together."

"Every time!" murmured Aunt Julia's nephew.

"Precisely! Of course, after that there was nothing to do but walk in there and send up my card to somebody—anybody—and when word came back that the lady was not staying at the hotel, express polite surprise and walk out again."

"With Aunt Julia!" That Jordan was enjoying the recital was obvious.

"With Aunt Julia. Then, also, of course, we weren't inside the door before she asked my friend's name. Well, naturally my friend had to have a name, and on the spur of the moment I said Mrs. Lancaster Welles. I don't know why I said that!" she cried, turning toward him with expressively wide stretched arms. "It was just fate! I didn't know there was a Mrs. Lancaster Welles! I wondered at the time why that particular name occurred to me. I suppose now that I must have heard you mention it sometime, and that it stuck in my wretched memory minus any connection. Anyway, that's what I said, and I called a boy and sent my card to Mrs. Lancaster Welles."

"And when word came back that she was not in the hotel, you left an invitation to dinner."

"Oh, my land! If I only had! Ellery," again tragedy loomed, "that boy came back and said that Mrs. Welles would see me in her room."

"Great Cæsar!" Jordan straightened up and stared at her. "You don't mean to say she was there?"

"She was there! Naturally, I couldn't run away then."

Her husband gave way to peals of mirth.

"You had to live up to Aunt Julia's expectations, not to mention the boy's—and Mrs. Welles'!" he exclaimed. "Heavens! Louise, why don't you laugh? Can't you see how funny it is?"

"Wait!" ominously. "Just wait!"

"Don't tell me Aunt Julia went with you!"

"No; Aunt Julia, mercifully, departed, and I went alone to face Mrs. Welles."

"'To beard the lion in his den, the Douglas in his hall,'" chuckled Jordan.

"Don't Ellery! It isn't funny." He made an obedient but ineffectual effort to subdue his laughter, which still broke forth occasionally. "In the elevator I decided that when I saw her I'd look surprised and say: 'Oh! Oh, I beg your pardon! This isn't the Mrs. Welles I know!' You know, that sort of thing—and pretend that I had an old schoolmate who was also Mrs. Lancaster Welles, and lived in Borneo or Van Diemen's Land, or somewhere."

"That time you didn't count on Alicia Welles."

"No, I didn't!"

"She fairly fell on my neck, and said that one of the pleasures to which they had looked forward in New York was meeting Ellery Jordan's bride. Then I knew that they must know you, and that I was in for it in earnest!"

"I'll bet you carried it off so she never knew the difference!"

"I'm afraid I did. I wish I hadn't. I wish I'd told her plainly just how and why I went there."

"Why? The rest looks simple enough."

"Ellery, I asked them to dinner—tonight!"

"Tonight!" As he lifted himself slowly to his feet, staring at her, consternation wiped the lines of laughter from his face. "Tonight! Why, Louise, tonight the Bowers—"

"I know it," she broke in, desperately, "but I didn't know who the Welleses were. All the time I sat there I racked my brain trying to remember, and I haven't the least idea what we said or how it happened. She talked and talked, and I suppose I answered, and somehow I must have mentioned Mr. Bowers' name, for she said Mr. Welles had never met Mr. Bowers and was very anxious to do so. By this time I was ready to clutch at any expedient, and I remembered that Mr. Bowers likes a pretty woman; I knew you had planned this dinner especially to please him, and to make him very good natured—and she is charming, Ellery—and—and I couldn't seem to see any other way out—I was all mixed up and confused—so—I asked them to dine with us tonight, to meet Mr. and Mrs. Bowers."

"My Lord!" ejaculated her husband. "You might better have asked the old original serpent! He'd make less trouble. This settles my schemes!"

Louise regarded him mournfully. "I'm so sorry, dear! It was stupid, but I didn't know, and—I had to do something. Anyway, I thought I had to."

Bending over her, he took her hands in a close clasp, and murmured: "Of course you didn't know. There's no reason why you should," and warmly kissed her. For a moment she clung to him, hiding her face against his coat. Then, comforted but not deceived, she whispered:

"You're such a love! We'll make it come out right, somehow," and, mopping her eyes, prepared again to face the situation. "Now tell me how bad it is. Just what have I done? I suppose you've told me all about it before, but somehow it didn't seem so real, and I'm afraid I've got the names all jumbled up. I don't see why Mr. Bowers should take such violent exception to Mr. Welles, if he's never met him."

"Welles is practically George H. Boltwood and company now, since Boltwood's death."

"And just because Mr. Bowers quarreled with Mr. Boltwood when they were partners, is he going to hate forevermore everybody who ever worked for him, even after he's dead?"

"Well, that's Bowers, you know. He's like the turtle: when once he takes hold, he 'never turns lose 'til it thunders.' And Bowers is deaf to thunder. In the first place, he never forgave Boltwood for whatever it was they quarreled about—"

"What was it?"

"Nobody has ever told. Probably something personal. They were lifelong friends, you know. And then Boltwood added gall to the vinegar when he went straight to Chicago, as soon as the dissolution here was settled, and organized a competitive company. Old Boltwood was a fighter, too. By George, what a combination those two men would have made if they hadn't quarreled! As it was, they fought, tooth and nail, for ten years."

"But where does Mr. Welles come in?"

"He didn't come in much until Mr. Boltwood's death. When it was found that he had arranged to have Welles made manager of the business. It was a big step for him."

"Well, I think it's perfectly shameful!" Indignation snapped in Mrs. Jordan's eyes. "Why don't you go and work for the Boltwoods, too? Here is Mr. Welles, manager after just a little while, and here you are, not even a member of the firm, after slaving

"Who?" Jordan's mind was still pursuing the path of his frustrated hopes.

"Mrs. Welles."

"Oh, she probably calls him Cass. Most people do."

She caught her breath and stood for an instant poising on tiptoe, aglow with inspiration.

"Ellery! I—I believe it's possible! Did Mr. Bowers ever see Lancaster Welles?"

"Not that I know of."

"Nor Mrs. Welles?"

"Guess not."

"Then—don't you see?—we must simply keep the conversation in such channels that he won't find us out. Welles is not an uncommon name, and Lancaster Welles is the last man Mr. Bowers would expect to meet at our table. Do you suppose—no," swiftly deciding, "it wouldn't do to tell the Welleses. We can't let them know that the invitation was a mistake, or that their presence is in any way embarrassing."

Her husband regarded her speculatively. "It will be a bit like playing with dynamite; but, by George, Louise," his glance kindled, "I believe you can do it if anybody can! Anyhow, it's worth trying. It can't make things much worse."

"Goody! I'll run now and spend the rest of the day vibrating between the kitchen and the library. We'll pull through somehow. Goodbye."

. . . .

Radiant with triumph, sparkling with excitement in which there was still the consciousness of danger, Mrs. Jordan flashed an occasional comprehensive glance across the table at her husband.

Tempered rays mellowed the resolute lines of James Bowers' face and fell softly upon the features of his gentle, stately wife, whose white hair rose above her gray draperies like the crest of a noble wave. Mrs. Welles was Aurora, smiling from a haze of amethyst, and the folds of Louise's white gown gave back a faint glow where the light caught them. Both Mr. and Mrs. Welles had proved to be ideal dinner guests, of quick wit and wide interests. and the talk had ranged from Tammany hall to the bronze god in a certain Japanese temple.

There had been moments of suspense, as when Mr. Bowers, who seemed to have yielded the tribute of complete response to the subtle influences surrounding him, had turned to his hostess, asking in an undertone: "Who is this young Welles? He appears a brilliant fellow? What's his business?"

"Citizen of the world and heir of the ages," she had replied, lightly laughing. "He seems to have canvassed the earth, and I suspect him of having designs on Mars, the planet of war," she added, glancing audaciously at her husband's employer.

"Are you discussing Mars?" Welles, at her left, had caught the last word. "Have you seen the article in the current Aeon?" The talk swept easily to theories of interplanetary communication, and Mrs. Jordan's heart resumed a fairly regular rhythm.

In natural sequence followed a discussion of aerial navigation and its possibilities, and here again Welles showed an intimate knowledge of detail and a breadth of comprehension that led Mr. Bowers to whisper to Louise further comment and question concerning the stranger within her gates. An allusion to the characteristics common to most inventors reminded Mr. Bowers of an erratic genius with whom he had had dealings, and thus, for the first time, the conversation touched upon the business in which all three of the men present were interested. The ball swung lightly, but at the point of contact it interrupted the breath of at least two of the party.

"The most indefatigable inventor I ever met," began Mr. Bowers, "was a man in my own line. I don't know how familiar you are with the possibilities of electrical apparatus, Mr. Welles?" He paused for the reply.

To the younger guest the question seemed a bit of quizzical humor, indicative of the increasing complacence of one whose good will he desired; and he replied in kind, dryly smiling:

"I once took a course in electrical engineering—by correspondence."

"Then you are probably in a position to appreciate the sublime audacity of my man Melvin's proposition. One step farther would have carried him over into the bottomless abyss of insolence, but he stopped on the brink, and by Jupiter, his pluck was his salvation! I pulled him back, and he's working for me yet."

The end of the story was greeted with laughter, through which Welles' voice was heard asking:

"Is he the originator of the Melvin commutator?"

Mr. Bowers' brows met over a flashing glance, and the mellow social cadence was reduced to the level tone of the counting room. "You seem remarkably familiar with electrical devices, sir," said he. "I hold the patents of the Melvin commutator, but it has never been put upon the market."

"By the way, Welles," hastily interrupted the host, "I saw in the paper the other day that one John Stilwell had taken out a patent on something or other. I wonder if that's the Stilwell we know?"

As the Chicagoan turned to reply, Louise knew that Mr. Bowers bent upon her a suspicious glance. The time for concealment was obviously past. Telltale claws had pierced the silken pouch in which she had hidden them, and she perceived that the cat would out, and quickly, too. Better to untie the strings herself than to have the bag torn open.

"Welles?" Mr. Bowers' tone was low but tense. "What Welles?"

"Lancaster Welles of Chicago, manager for George H. Boltwood and company." The angle of Mrs. Jordan's chin bespoke a lively skirmish for the attacking party; her color was brilliant, and she looked directly into the blazing eyes of her elderly guest. She had forced the initiative upon him; a truce was possible, but if he insisted upon action, he should have it. At the moment he seemed not to perceive the apparent deliberation of the challenge. Quick temper impelled him to speech, although his utterance was impressively slow.

"I must believe this premeditated?"

"Certainly." Her mind quivered under the strain. Evidently hope for the future was futile; all her endeavor must be to prevent an immediate scene, and as far as possible to save her husband from the wrath to come by placing the responsibility for this disastrous dinner where it belonged, on her own shoulders, without compromising the position of her other guests.

"Certainly," she repeated, gaining time. "The plan to invite Mr. and Mrs. Welles to meet you was, however, entirely mine. Even my husband knew nothing about it until all my arrangements were made. I am entirely aware that I have done a daring thing, but when it became necessary for us to consider the possibility of Mr. Jordan's leaving your company and accepting a position with the Boltwood people, I did feel very strongly, Mr. Bowers, that you should be given an opportunity to meet Mr. Welles and to decide whether or not you would consider certain proposals which would make such a change unnecessary."

She paused, appalled at the sheer bravado of her defense, but, as he simply stared at her in silence, the necessities of the situation swept her on. "Mr. Welles, as you have said, is a brilliant man, and we feel that he will achieve large success in business, and that an alliance with him cannot fail to be profitable. If the fact that he was once employed by George H. Boltwood—"

"Madam! You are venturing very near that ground where angels fear to tread!" His voice shook. "George Boltwood was—"

"Was once your dearest friend and is now dead," she swiftly supplied, in terror, lest the conversation directed toward the other side of the table should languish. "And it is inconceivable to suppose that you will permit a feeling that has deprived you for years of the companionship of the only close friend you ever had, and that has, through that bitterness, prevented the proper development of your business along certain lines—" her auditor gasped slightly, and she leaned toward him, flushed, bright eyed, desperately trying to shock him into a quiescence that should outlast his stay under her roof, "Mr. Bowers, it is inconceivable to me that a man like you should permit such a feeling to continue to influence him, not only to mental disquiet, but to the lasting detriment of his business interests."

Mrs. Welles, who had been holding the attention of the others, now turned toward her hostess with a question, and Louise, inwardly quaking, but with indomitable front, met the inquiry with gay quips.

Twisting a wine glass in his fingers, Mr. Bowers long sat speechless, watching Mrs. Jordan through narrowed eyes.

"And if I do?" he asked, enigmatically, when at length opportunity offered.

"If you do?" The strain was beginning to tell on her, and her mind fumbled for the connection.

"Yes." His lips twisted in a wry smile. "If I, who alone, of all living men, know the causes leading to that separation of which you have spoken, continued to conduct my own business in my own way, regardless of the visits of angels—and the visitations of fools—"

"Why, then," driven into a corner, but denying defeat, she glanced around the table, preparing for flight, "then—Ellery will have but one course open to him—to resign his position with you and to accept one more promising under Mr. Welles."

She pushed back her chair, and the ladies arose. Mr. Bowers held the door open for them, and as she passed him Louise was aware that he still regarded her through half closed eyes. She felt that the keeen gaze penetrated her very soul, and that he read there her whole shallow artifice.

It was an hour or more before the men joined them—an hour during which Mrs. Jordan vainly strained her ears in an effort to catch the sound of voices in the dining room, while the subconsciousness developed by much social experience supplied her lips with a torrent of glib speech. When the door finally swung open, she instantly perceived that the younger men were somewhat flushed, and were manifestly making an effort to control strong excitement. Ellery laughed too often—an unfailing indication, she well knew, that his spirits were forced. Mr. Bowers stopped a moment to speak to his wife, and then they came together to where the hostess stood.

"Mrs. Jordan, we bid you good night," said the old man, with stately formality. "We lingered too long in the dining room, and Mrs. Bowers and I promised to stop at our nephew's on the way home." In his voice was neither resentment nor cordiality, and his face was like a mask. He passed on around the little circle, following his wife, and a moment later Ellery accompanied them to the elevator. In the reaction following the climax, when the door had actually closed upon them, Louise was conscious of an impulse toward tears, but the obligations of the hostess still lay heavy upon her, and, taking up a book at random, she was in the midst of a voluble description of its author when her husband reëntered the room and paused, alertly glancing from one to another.

"Well!" he exclaimed.

The cord of Mrs. Jordan's self-control parted, and she turned toward him, crying: "Oh, what did he say? I can't wait! What happened?"

Bewilderment overtook Mrs. Welles, but no one observed her. The men were wringing each other's hands, punctuating their broken laughter with inarticulate ejaculations.

"By George! What do you suppose struck him, Welles? You must be a wizard!"

"Why? Wasn't it all put up?" Welles' face evinced his surprise.

"Put up! O, Lord! Why, man alive——"

"Ellery!" Louise grasped his coat lapels and shook them. "Ellery, if you don't tell me! What happened?"

"Everything! We exchange patents, so Welles is happy; I'm a member of the firm; and maybe—just maybe—we consolidate."

"O! O, Ellery!"

"Why, Louise! Dear girl, don't cry about it! Louise!"

"O, never mind. I—it doesn't matter about me. I'm—I'm rather tired, I think."

"Well, I should think you might be, after all this! But what do you suppose struck him?"

A little laugh gurgled up through the sobs.

"You know you said he was a turtle, and I guess—I guess it thundered some."

AGO TRIBUNE.

The Mummy

This Is Another of the Series of Stories of Fu-Manchu— Tales of Thrill and Terror.

I SUPPOSE I did not awake readily. Following the nervous vigilance of the last six months my tired nerves, in the enjoyment of this relaxation, were rapidly recuperating. I no longer feared to awake to find a knife at my throat, no longer dreaded the darkness as a foe. So that the voice may have been calling (indeed, had been calling) for some time, and of this I had been hazily conscious before I finally awoke.

Then, ere the new sense of security came to reassure me, the old sense of impending harm set my heart leaping nervously. There is always a certain physical panic attendant upon such awakening in the still of the night, especially in novel surroundings. Now I sat up abruptly, clutching at the rail of my berth and listening.

"Dr. Petrie! Dr. Petrie!"

I threw off the bedclothes and stepped on to the floor of the cabin, fumbling hastily for my slippers. A fear that something was amiss, that some aftermath—some wraith of the dread Chinaman—was yet to come to disturb our premature peace, began to haunt me. I threw open the door.

Upon the gleaming deck, blackly outlined against a wondrous sky, stood a man who wore a blue greatcoat over his pajamas and whose unstockinged feet were thrust into red slippers. It was Platts, the Marconi operator.

"I'm awfully sorry to disturb you, Dr. Petrie," he said, "and I was even less anxious to arouse your neighbor; but somebody seems to be trying to get a message, presumably urgent, through to you."

"To me!" I cried.

"I cannot make it out," admitted Platts, running his fingers through dishevel hair, "but I thought it better to arouse you. Will you come up?" I turned without a word, slipped into my dressing gown, and with Platts passed aft along the deserted deck. The sea was as calm as a great lake. Ahead on the port bow an angry flambeau burned redly beneath the peaceful vault of the heavens. Platts nodded absently in the direction of the weird flames.

"Stromboli," he said; "we shall be nearly through the strait by breakfast time."

We mounted the narrow stair to the Marconi deck. At the table sat Platts' assistant, on his head the Marconi attachment—an apparatus which always set me thinking of the electric chair.

"Have you got it?" demanded my companion as we entered the room.

"It's still coming through," replied the other without moving, "but in the same jerky fashion. Every time I get it it seems to have gone back to the beginning; just 'Dr. Petrie—Dr. Petrie.'"

He began to listen again for the elusive message. I turned to Platts.

"Where is it being sent from?" I asked.

Platts shook his head.

"That's the mystery," he declared. "Look!" He pointed to the table. "According to the Marconi chart there's a Messagerie boat due west between us and Marseilles, and the homeward bound P. and O. which we passed this morning must be getting on that way also by now. The Isis is somewhat ahead, but I've spoken all these, and the message comes from none of them."

"Then it may come from Messina."

"It doesn't come from Messina," replied the man at the table, beginning to write rapidly.

Platts stepped forward and bent over the message which the other was writing.

"Here it is!" he cried excitedly; "we're getting it."

Stepping in turn to the table, I leaned over between the two and read these words as the operator wrote them down: "Dr. Petrie—My shadow . . ."

I drew a quick breath and gripped Platts' shoulder harshly. His assistant began fingering the instrument with irritation.

"Lost it again!" he muttered.

"This message——" I began.

But again the pencil was traveling over the paper: "—lies upon you all. . . . End of message."

The operator stood up and unclasped the receivers from his ears. There, high above the sleeping ship's company, with the carpet of the blue Mediterranean stretched indefinitely about us, we three stood looking at one another. By virtue of a miracle of modern science some one, divided from me by mile upon mile of boundless ocean, had spoken and had been heard.

"Is there no means of learning," I said, "from whence this message emanated?"

Platts shook his head perplexedly.

"They gave no code word," he said. "God knows who they were. It's a strange business and a strange message. Have you any sort of idea, Dr. Petrie, respecting the identity of the sender?"

I stared him hard in the face; an idea had mechanically entered my mind, but one of which I did not choose to speak, since it was opposed to human possibility.

But had I not seen with my own eyes the bloody streak across his forehead as the shot fired by Karamaneh entered his high skull, had I not known as certainly as it is given to men to know that the giant intellect was no more, the mighty will impotent, I should have replied:

"The message is from Dr. Fu-Manchu!"

My reflections were rudely terminated and my sinister thoughts given new stimulus by a loud though muffled cry which reached me from somewhere in the ship below. Both my companions started as violently as I, whereby I knew that the mystery of the wireless message had not been without its effect upon their minds also. But whereas they paused in doubt, I leaped from the room and almost threw myself down the ladder.

It was Karamaneh who had uttered that cry of fear and horror!

Karamaneh occupied a large stateroom aft on the main deck, so that I had to descend from the upper deck, on which my own room was situated, to the promenade deck, again to the main deck, and thence proceed nearly the whole length of the alleyway.

Karamaneh and her brother, Aziz, who occupied a neighboring room, met me near the library. Karamaneh's eyes were wide with fear; her peerless coloring had fled, and she was white to the lips. Aziz, who wore a dressing gown thrown hastily over his night attire, had his arm protectively about the girl's shoulders.

"The mummy!" she whispered tremulously; "the mummy!"

There came a sound of opening doors, and several passengers whom Karamaneh's cries had alarmed appeared in various stages of undress. A stewardess came running from the far end of the alleyway, and I found time to wonder at my own speed; for, starting from the distant Marconi deck, I had been the first to arrive upon the scene.

Stacey, the ship's doctor, was quartered at no great distance from the spot, and he now joined the group. Anticipating the question which trembled upon the lips of several of those about me, "Come to Dr. Stacey's room," I said, taking Karamaneh's arm; "we will give you something to enable you to sleep." I turned to the group. "My patient has had severe nerve trouble," I explained, "and has developed somnambulistic tendencies."

I declined the stewardess' offer of assistance with a slight shake of the head and shortly the four of us entered the doctor's cabin on the deck above. Stacey carefully closed the door. He was an old fellow student of mine, and already he knew much of the history of the beautiful eastern girl and her brother Aziz.

"Something has frightened you," he said gently, seating himself on the arm of Karamaneh's chair and patting her hand as if to reassure her. "Tell us all about it."

For the first time since our meeting that night the girl turned her eyes from me and glanced up at Stacey, a sudden warm blush stealing over her face and throat and as quickly departing, to leave her even more pale than before. She grasped Stacey's hand in both her own and looked again at me.

"Send for Mr. Nayland Smith without delay!" she said. "He must be put on his guard!"

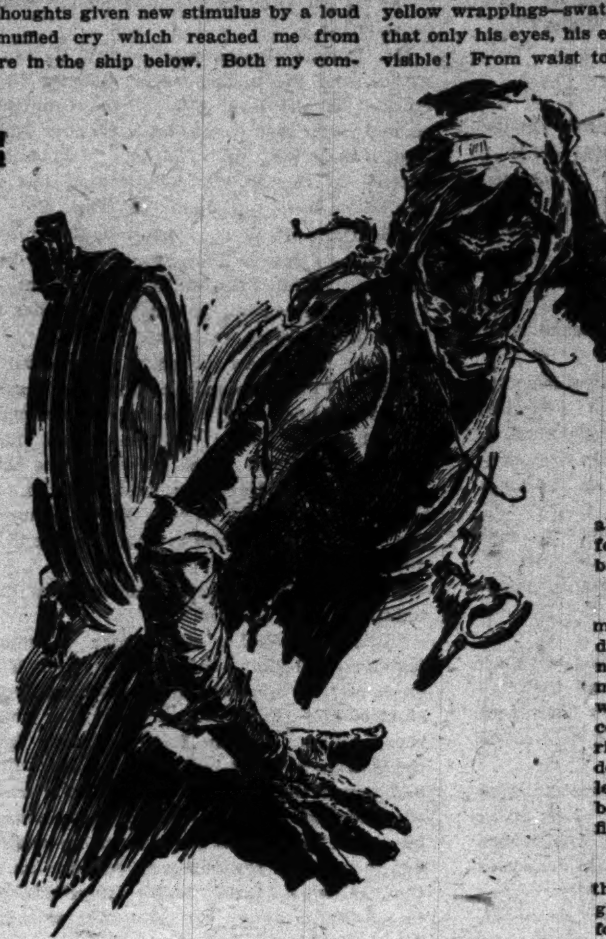
I started up.

"Why?" I said. "For God's sake tell us what has happened!"

"Something [Karamaneh paused, shuddering violently]—some dreadful thing, like a mummy escaped from its tomb, came into my room tonight through the porthole——"

"Through the porthole?" echoed Stacey amazedly.

"Yes, yes, through the porthole! A creature tall and very, very thin. He wore wrappings—yellow wrappings—swathed about his head, so that only his eyes, his evil gleaming eyes, were visible! From waist to knees he was covered also, but his body, his feet, and his legs were bare . . ."



"He crouched over the berth, seeking, seeking—"

"Was he?——" I began.

"He was a brown man, yes." Karamaneh, divining my question, nodded, and the shimmering cloud of her wonderful hair, hastily confined, burst free and rippled about her shoulders. "A gaunt, fleshless brown man, who bent and writhed bony fingers—so!"

"A thug!" I cried.

"He—it—the mummy thing—would have strangled me if I had slept, for he crouched over the berth, seeking, seeking——"

I clenched my teeth convulsively.

"But I was sitting up——"

"With the light on?" interrupted Stacey in surprise.

"No," added Karamaneh; "the light was out." She turned her eyes toward me as the wonderful blush overspread her face once more. "I was sitting thinking. It all happened within a few seconds and quite silently. As the mummy crouched over the berth I unlocked the door and leaped out into the passage. I think I screamed; I did not mean to. O, Dr. Stacey, there is not a moment to spare! Mr. Nayland Smith must be warned immediately. Some horrible servant of Dr. Fu-Manchu is on the ship!"

Nayland Smith leaned against the edge of the dressing table, attired in pajamas. The little stateroom was hazy with smoke and my friend gripped the charred briar between his teeth and watched in an abstracted way the blue-gray clouds arising from the bowl. I knew that he was thinking hard, and from the fact that he had exhibited no surprise when I had related to him the particulars of the attack upon Karamaneh I judged that he had half anticipated something of the kind. Suddenly he stood up, staring at me fixedly.

"Your tact has saved the situation, Petrie," he said. "I failed you momentarily, though, when you proposed to me just now that we should muster the Lascars for inspection. Our game is to pretend that we know nothing—that we believe Karamaneh to have had a bad dream."

"But, Smith——" I began.

"It would be useless, Petrie," he interrupted me. "You cannot suppose that I overlooked the possibility of some creature of the doctors being among the Lascars. I can assure you that not one of them answers to the description of the midnight assailant. From the girl's account we have to look (discarding the idea of a revivified mummy) for a man of unusual height, and there's no Lascar of unusual height on board, and from the visible evidence that he entered the stateroom through the porthole we have to look for a man more than normally thin. In a word, the servant of Dr. Fu-Manchu who attempted the life of Karamaneh is either in hiding on the ship or if visible is disguised.

"From our knowledge of Fu-Manchu and of the group surrounding him (and, don't forget, surviving him) we may further assume that the wireless message was no gratuitous piece of melodrama, but that it was directed to a definite end. Let us endeavor to link up the chain a little. You occupy an upper deck berth; so do I. Experience of the Chinaman has formed a habit in both of us; that of sleeping with closed windows. Your port was fastened and so was my own. Karamaneh is quartered on the main deck, and her brother's stateroom opens into the same alleyway. Since the ship is in the Strait of Messina and the glass set fair, the stewards have not closed the portholes nightly. We know that that of Karamaneh's stateroom was open. Therefore, in any attempt upon our quartet, Karamaneh would automatically be selected for the victim, since failing you or myself she may be regarded as being the most obnoxious to Dr. Fu-Manchu."

I nodded comprehendingly. Smith's capacity for throwing the white light of reason into the darkest places often amazed me.

"You may have noticed," he continued, "that Karamaneh's room is directly below your own. In the event of any outcry you would be sooner upon the scene than I should, for instance, because I sleep on the opposite side of the ship. This circumstance I take to be the explanation of the wireless message which, because of its hesitancy [a piece of ingenuity characteristic of the group], led to your being awakened and invited up to the Marconi deck; in short, it gave the would-be assassin a better chance of escaping before your arrival.

"I regret the episode," continued Smith, "as a posthumous attempt of the doctor's—a legacy of hate which may prove more disastrous than any attempt made upon us by Fu-Manchu in life. Some fiendish member of the murder group is on board the ship. We must, as always, meet guile with guile. There must be no appeal to the captain, no public examination of passengers and crew. One attempt has failed; I do not doubt that others will be made. At present you will enact the role of physician in attendance upon Karamaneh and will put it about for whom it may interest that a slight return of her nervous trouble is causing her to pass uneasy nights. I can safely leave this part of the case to you, I think?"

I nodded rapidly.

"I haven't troubled to make inquiries," added Smith; "but I think it probable that the regulations respecting closed portholes will come into operation immediately we have passed the strait, or at any rate immediately there is any likelihood of bad weather."

"You mean——"

"I mean that no alteration should be made in our habits. A second attempt along similar lines is to be apprehended tonight. After that we may begin to look out for a new danger."

"I pray we may avoid it," I said fervently.

As I entered the saloon for breakfast in the morning I was subjected to solicitous inquiries from Mrs. Prior, the gossip of the ship. Her room adjoined Karamaneh's, and she had been one of the passengers aroused by the girl's cries in the night. Strictly adhering to my role, I explained that my patient was threatened with a second nervous breakdown and was subject to vivid and disturbing dreams. One or two other inquiries I met in the same way ere escaping to the corner table reserved to us.

That iron bound code of conduct which rules the Anglo-Indian had in the first days of the voyage threatened to ostracize Karamaneh and Aziz, by reason of the eastern blood to which their brilliant but peculiar type of beauty bore witness. Smith's attitude, however—and in a Burmese commissioner it constituted something of a law—had done much to break down the barriers. The extraordinary beauty of the girl had done the rest; so that now, far from finding themselves shunned, the society of Karamaneh and her romantic looking brother was universally courted.

The last inquiry that morning respecting my interesting patient came from the bishop of Damascus, a benevolent old gentleman whose ancestry was not wholly innocent of oriental strains and who sat at a table immediately behind me. As I settled down to my porridge he turned his chair slightly and bent to my ear.

"Mrs. Prior tells me that your charming friend was disturbed last night," he whispered. "She seems rather pale this morning; I sincerely trust that she is suffering no ill effect."

I swung around with a smile. Owing to my carelessness there was a slight collision, and the poor bishop, who had been invalided to England after typhoid in order to undergo special treatment, suppressed an exclamation of pain, although his fine dark eyes gleamed kindly upon me through the pebbles of his gold-rimmed pince-nez.

"Can you forgive my clumsiness?" I began.

His system was supercharged with typhoid bacilli, and, as sometimes occurs, the superfluous "bugs" had sought exit. He could only walk with the aid of two stout sticks, and bent very much at that. His left leg had been surgically scraped to the bone, and I appreciated the exquisite torture to which my awkwardness had subjected him. But he would entertain no apologies, pressing his inquiry respecting Karamaneh in the kindly manner which had made him so deservedly popular on board.

"Many thanks for your solicitude," I said: "I have promised her sound repose tonight, and since my professional reputation is at stake I shall see that she secures it."

In short, we were in pleasant company, and the day passed happily enough and without notable event.

With the approach of evening, in place of that physical contentment which usually heralds the dinner hour at sea, I experienced a fit of the seemingly causeless apprehension which too often in the past had harbingered the coming of grim events; which I had learned to associate with the nearing presence of one of Fu-Manchu's death agents. In view of the facts as I afterward knew them to be I can not account for this.

Yet in an unexpected manner my forebodings were realized. That night I was destined to meet a sorrow surpassing any which my troubled life had known. Even now I experience great difficulty, in relating the matters which befell, in speaking of the sense of irrevocable loss which came to me. Briefly, then, at about ten minutes before the dining hour, while all the passengers, myself included, were below dressing, a faint cry arose from somewhere aft on the upper deck—a cry which was swiftly taken up by other voices, so that presently a deck steward echoed it immediately outside my own stateroom:

"Man overboard! Man overboard!"

All my premonitions rallying in that one sickening moment, I sprang out on the deck, half dressed as I was, and, leaping past the boat which swung nearly opposite my door, craned over the rail, looking astern.

Half in the streak of the wake and half out of it, I perceived the sleeve of a white jacket, and, near to it, a soft felt hat. The sleeve rose up once into clear view, seemed to describe a half circle in the air, then sink back again into the glassy swell of the water. Only the hat remained floating upon the surface.

By the evidence of the white sleeve alone I might have remained unconvinced, although upon the voyage I had become familiar enough with the drill shooting jacket, but the presence of the gray felt hat was almost conclusive.

The man overboard was Nayland Smith!

To spring overboard to the rescue was a natural impulse, but to have obeyed it would have been worse than quixotic. In the first place, the drowning man was close upon half a mile astern; in the second place, others had seen the hat and the white coat as clearly as I—among them the third officer, standing upright in the stern of a boat which had already been swung into the water. The steamer was being put about, describing a wide arc around the little boat dancing on the deep blue rollers.

Of the next hour I cannot bear to write at all. Long as I had known him, I was ignorant of my friend's powers as a swimmer, but I judged that he must have been a poor one from the fact that he had sunk so rapidly in a calm sea. Except the hat, no trace of Nayland Smith remained when the boat got to the spot.

Dinner was out of the question that night for all of us. Karamaneh, who had spoken no word, but grasping my hands, had looked into my eyes, her own glassy with unshed tears, and then stolen away to her cabin, had not since reappeared. Seated upon my berth, I stared unseeingly before me upon a changed ship, a changed sea and sky—upon another world. The poor old bishop, my neighbor, had glanced in several times as he hobbled by, and his spectacles were unmistakably humid, but even he had vouchsafed no word, realizing that my sorrow was too deep for such consolation.

When at last I became capable of connected thought, I found myself faced by a big problem. Should I place the facts of the matter, as I knew them to be, before the captain, or could I hope to apprehend Fu-Manchu's servant by the methods suggested by my poor friend? That Smith's death was an accident, I did not believe for a moment; it was impossible not to link it with the attempt upon Karamaneh. In my misery and doubt I determined to take counsel with Dr. Stacey. I stood up and passed out on to the deck.

Those passengers whom I met on my way to his room regarded me in respectful silence. By contrast, Stacey's attitude surprised and even annoyed me.

"I'd be prepared to stake all I possess, although it's not much," he said, "that this was not the work of your hidden enemy."

He blankly refused to give me his reasons for the statement, and strongly advised me to watch and wait, but to make no communication to the captain.

At this hour I can look back and savor again something of the profound dejection of that time. I shut myself in my cabin, where I sat mourning my poor friend's tragic end.

Since I had not counted the bells, to this day I have only the vaguest idea respecting the time whereat the next incident occurred which it is my duty to chronicle. Perhaps I was on the verge of falling asleep, seated there as I was; at any rate, I could scarcely believe myself awake, when unheralded by any footsteps to indicate his coming, some one, who seemed to be crouching outside my stateroom, slightly raised himself and peered in through the porthole, which I had not troubled to close.

He must have been a fairly tall man to have looked in at all, and, although his features were indistinguishable in the darkness, his outline, which was clearly perceptible against the white boat beyond, was unfamiliar to me. He seemed to have a small and oddly swathed head, and what I could make out of the gaunt neck and square shoulders in some way suggested an unnatural thinness—in short, the smudgy silhouette in the porthole was wierdly like that of a mummy!

For some moments I stared at the apparition; then, rousing myself from the apathy into which I had sunk, I stood up very quickly and stepped across the room. As I did so the figure vanished, and when I threw open the door and looked out upon the deck, the deck was wholly untenanted!

For some time I stood in my doorway, wondering in a disinterested fashion, which now I cannot explain, if the hidden enemy had revealed himself to me or if disordered imagination had played me a trick. Later I was destined to know the truth of the matter, but when at last I fell into a troubled sleep that night I was still in some doubt upon the point.

My state of mind when I awakened on the following day was indescribable. I found it difficult to doubt that Nayland Smith would meet me on the way to the bathroom as usual, with the cracked briar fuming between his teeth. I felt myself almost compelled to pass around to his stateroom in order to convince myself that he was not really there. The catastrophe was still unreal to me, and the world a dream world. Indeed I retain scarcely any recollections of the traffic of that day or of the days that followed it until we reached Port Said.

Two things only made any striking appeal to my dulled intelligence at that time. These were the aloof attitude of Dr. Stacey, who seemed carefully to avoid me, and a curious circumstance which the second officer mentioned in conversation one evening as we strolled up and down the main deck together.

"Either I was fast asleep at my post, Dr. Petrie," he said, "or last night, in the middle watch, some one or something came over the side of the ship just aft the bridge, slipped across the deck, and disappeared."

I stared at him wonderingly.

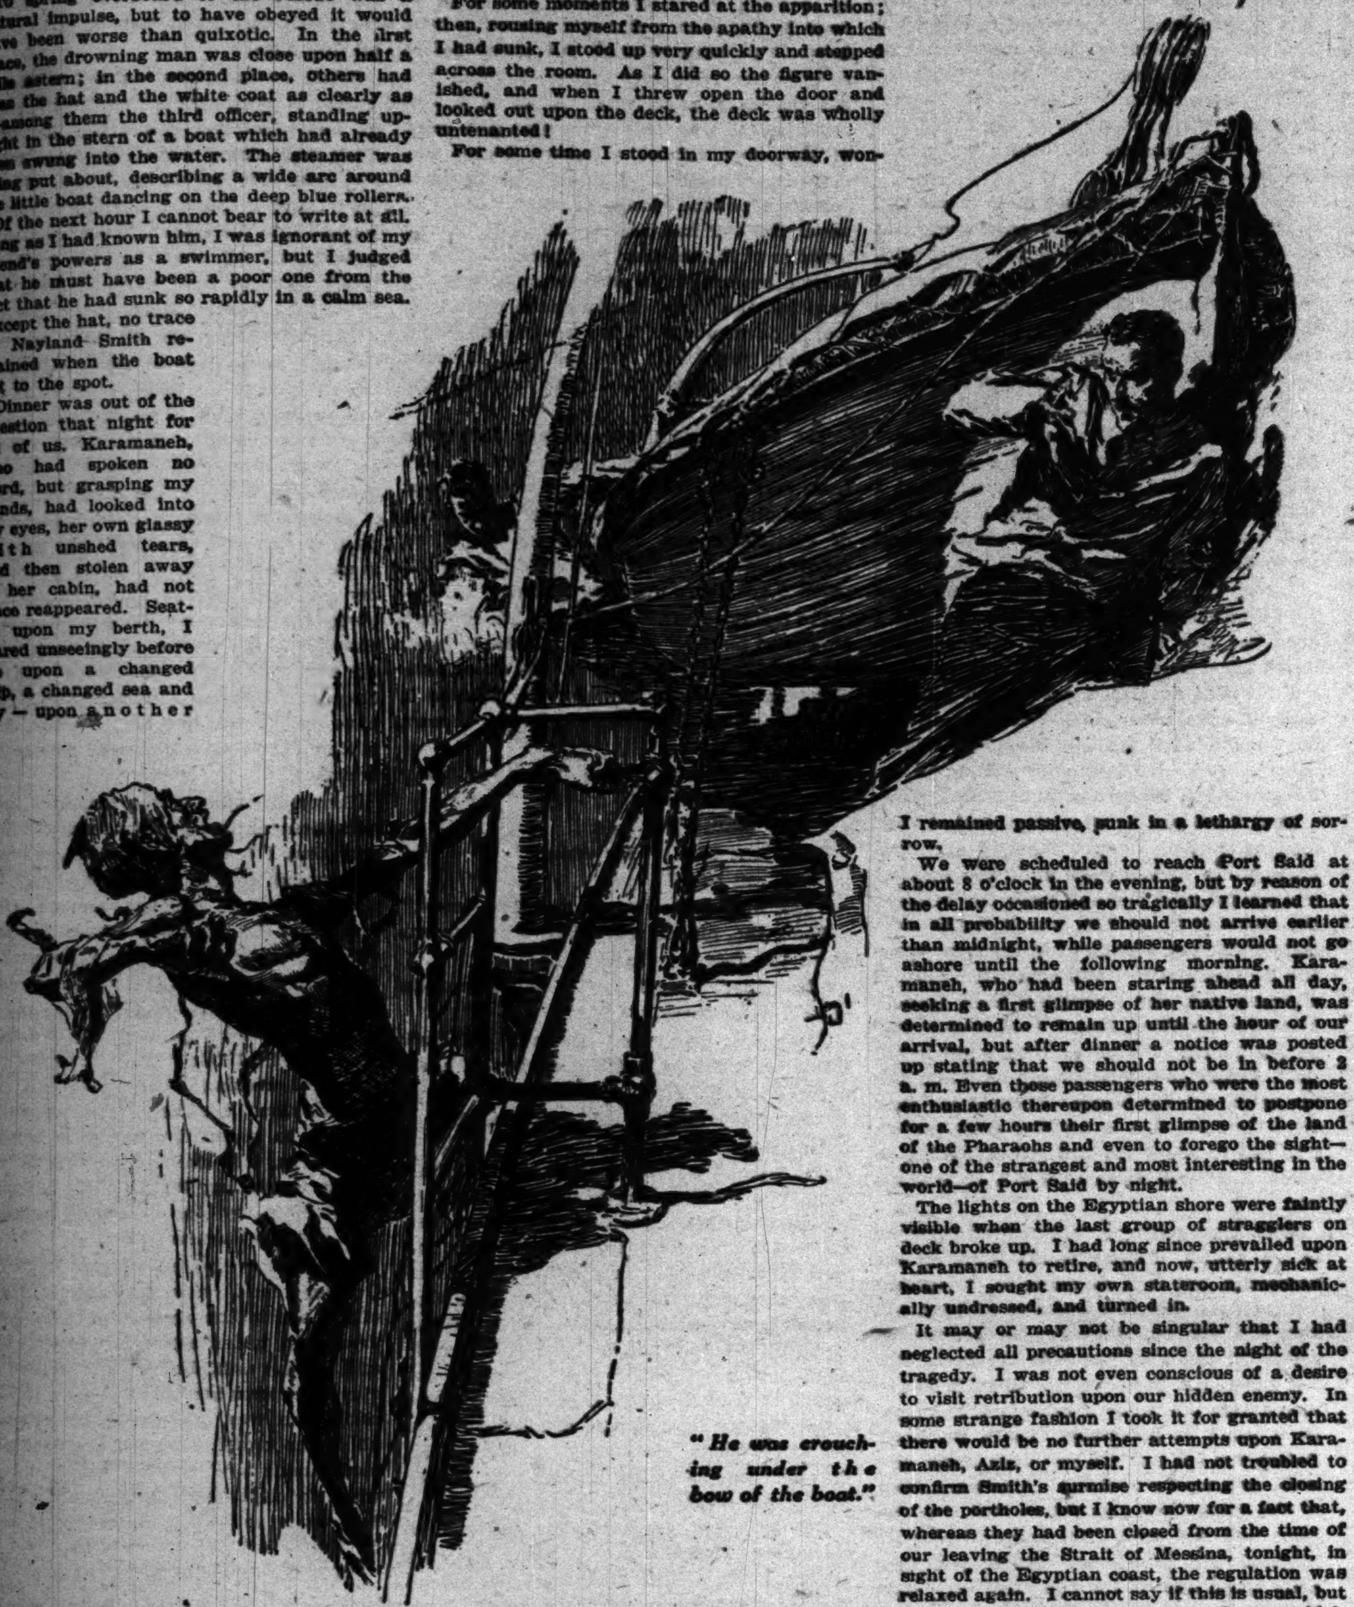
"Do you mean something that came up out of the sea?" I said.

"Nothing could very well have come up out of the sea," he replied, smiling slightly, "so that it must have come up from the deck below."

"Was it a man?"

"It looked like a man, and a fairly tall one, but he came and was gone like a flash, and I saw no more of him up to the time I was relieved. To tell you the truth, I did not report it because I thought I must have been dozing; it's a dead slow watch, and the navigation on this part of the run is child's play."

I was on the point of telling him what I had seen myself two evenings before, but for some reason I refrained from doing so, although I think had I confided in him he would have abandoned the idea that what he had seen was phantasmal; for the pair of us could not well have been dreaming. Some malignant presence haunted the ship; I could not doubt this; yet



"He was crouching under the bow of the boat."

I remained passive, sunk in a lethargy of sorrow.

We were scheduled to reach Port Said at about 8 o'clock in the evening, but by reason of the delay occasioned so tragically I learned that in all probability we should not arrive earlier than midnight, while passengers would not go ashore until the following morning. Karamaneh, who had been staring ahead all day, seeking a first glimpse of her native land, was determined to remain up until the hour of our arrival, but after dinner a notice was posted up stating that we should not be in before 2 a. m. Even those passengers who were the most enthusiastic thereupon determined to postpone for a few hours their first glimpse of the land of the Pharaohs and even to forego the sight—one of the strangest and most interesting in the world—of Port Said by night.

The lights on the Egyptian shore were faintly visible when the last group of stragglers on deck broke up. I had long since prevailed upon Karamaneh to retire, and now, utterly sick at heart, I sought my own stateroom, mechanically undressed, and turned in.

It may or may not be singular that I had neglected all precautions since the night of the tragedy. I was not even conscious of a desire to visit retribution upon our hidden enemy. In some strange fashion I took it for granted that there would be no further attempts upon Karamaneh, Aziz, or myself. I had not troubled to confirm Smith's surmise respecting the closing of the portholes, but I know now for a fact that, whereas they had been closed from the time of our leaving the Strait of Messina, tonight, in sight of the Egyptian coast, the regulation was relaxed again. I cannot say if this is usual, but that it occurred on this ship is a fact to which I can testify—a fact to which my attention was to be drawn dramatically.

The night was steaming hot, and, because I welcomed the circumstance that my own port was widely opened, I reflected that those on the lower decks might be open also. A faint sense of danger stirred within me; indeed, I sat upright and was about to spring out of my berth when that occurred which induced me to change my mind.

All passengers had long since retired, and a midnight silence descended upon the ship, for we were not yet close enough to port for any unusual activities to have commenced.

Clearly outlined in the open porthole, there suddenly arose that same grotesque silhouette which I had seen once before.

Prompted by I know not what, I lay still and simulated heavy breathing, for it was evident to me that I must be partly visible to the watcher, so bright was the night. For ten—twenty—thirty seconds, with my eyes partly closed, I watched, breathing heavily all the time. Then, making no more noise than a cat, he moved away across the deck, and I could judge of his height by the fact that his small, swathed head remained visible almost to the time that he passed to the end of the white boat which swung opposite my stateroom.

In a moment I slipped quietly to the floor, crossed, and peered out of the porthole, so that at last I had a clear view of the sinister mummy-man. He was crouching under the bow of the boat and attaching to the white rails below a contrivance of a kind with which I was not entirely unfamiliar. This was a thin ladder of silken rope, having bamboo rungs, with two metal hooks for attaching it to any suitable object.

My pistol was in my cabin trunk, and to have found it in the dark, without making a good deal of noise, would have been impossible. Doubting how I should act, I stood watching the man with the swathed head while he threw the end of the ladder over the side, crept past the bow of the boat, and swung his gaunt body over the rail, exhibiting the agility of an ape. One quick glance fore and aft he gave, then began to swarm down the ladder—in which instant I knew his mission.

With a choking cry, which forced itself unwilled from my lips, I tore at the door, threw it open, and sprang across the deck. Plans I had none, and since I carried no instrument wherewith to sever the ladder, the murderer might indeed have carried out his design for all that I could have done to prevent him, were it not that another took a hand in the game!

At the moment that the mummy-man—his head now on a level with the deck—perceived me, he stopped dead. Coincident with his stopping, the crack of a pistol shot sounded from immediately beyond the boat.

Uttering a sort of sobbing sound, the creature fell, then clutched, with straining yellow fingers, at the rails, and, seemingly by dint of a great effort, swarmed along aft some twenty feet, with incredible swiftness and agility, and clambered on to the deck.

A second shot cracked sharply, and a voice [God! was I mad?] cried: "Hold him, Petrie!"

Rigid with fearful astonishment I stood as out from the boat above me leaped a figure attired solely in shirt and trousers. The newcomer leaped away in the wake of the mummy-man, who had vanished around the corner by the smoking room. Over his shoulder he cried back at me: "The bishop's stateroom! See that no one enters!"

I clutched at my head, which seemed to be fiery hot; I realized in my own person the sensations of one who knows himself mad. For the man who pursued the mummy was Nayland Smith!

I stood in the bishop's stateroom, Nayland Smith, his gaunt face wet with perspiration, beside me, handling certain odd looking objects which littered the place and lay about amid the discarded garments of the absent cleric.

"Pneumatic pads!" he snapped. "The man was a walking air cushion!" He gingerly fingered two strange rubber appliances. "For distending the cheeks," he muttered, dropping them disgustedly on the floor. "His hands and wrists betrayed him, Petrie. He wore his cuffs unusually long, but could not entirely hide his bony wrists. To have watched him, while remaining myself unseen, was next to impossible; hence my device of tossing a dummy overboard, calculated to float for less than ten minutes! It actually floated nearly fifteen as a matter of fact, and I had some horrible moments!"

"Smith!" I said, "how could you submit me—"

He clapped his hands on my shoulders.

"My dear old chap, there was no other way, believe me. From that boat I could see right into his stateroom, but, once in, I dared not leave it, except late at night, stealthily! The 'second' spotted me one night and I thought the game was up, but evidently he didn't report it.

"But you might have confided—"

"Impossible! I'll admit I nearly fell to the temptation that first night; for I could see into your room as well as into his!" He slapped me boisterously on the back, but his gray eyes were suspiciously moist. "Dear old Petrie! Thank God for our friends! But you'd be the first to admit, old man, that you're a dead rotten actor! Your portrayal of grief for the loss of a valued chum would not have convinced a soul on board!

"Therefore I made use of Stacey, whose callous attitude was less remarkable. Gad, Petrie! I nearly bagged our man the first night! The elaborate plan—Marconi message to get you out of the way, and so forth—had miscarried, and he knew the porthole trick would be useless once we got into the open sea. He took a big chance. He discarded his clerical guise and peeked into your room, you remember? But you were awake, and I made no move when he slipped back to his own cabin. I wanted to take him red-handed."

"Have you any idea?"

"Who he is? No more than where he is! Probably some creature of Dr. Fu-Manchu specially chosen for the purpose; obviously a man of culture, and probably of thug ancestry. I hit him in the shoulder, but even then he ran like a hare. We've searched the ship without result. He may have gone overboard and chanced the swim to shore."

We stepped out on to the deck. Around us was that unforgetable scene, Port Said by night. Now the ship was barely moving through the glassy water. Smith took my arm and we walked forward. Above us was the mighty peace of Egypt's sky, ablaze with splendor; around and about us moved the unique turmoil of the clearing house of the near east.

"I would give much to know the real identity of the bishop of Damascus," muttered Smith.

He stopped abruptly, snapping his teeth together, and grasping my arm as in a vise. Hard upon his words had followed the rattling clanger as the great anchor was let go; but horribly intermingled with the metallic roar there came to us such a fearful, inarticulate shrieking as to chill the very soul.

The anchor plunged into the water of the harbor; the shrieking ceased. Smith turned to me, and his face was tragic in the light of the arc lamp swung hard by. "We shall never know," he whispered. "God forgive him; he must be in bloody tatters now. Petrie, the poor fool was hiding in the chain locker!"

The Mummy

This Is Another of the Series of Stories of Fu-Manchu—Tales of Thrill and Terror.

I SUPPOSE I did not awake readily. Following the nervous vigilance of the last six months my tired nerves, in the enjoyment of this relaxation, were rapidly recuperating. I no longer feared to awake to find a knife at my throat, no longer dreaded the darkness as a foe. So that the voice may have been calling (indeed, had been calling) for some time, and of this I had been hazily conscious before I finally awoke.

Then, ere the new sense of security came to reassure me, the old sense of impending harm set my heart leaping nervously. There is always a certain physical panic attendant upon such awakening in the still of the night, especially in novel surroundings. Now I sat up abruptly, clutching at the rail of my berth and listening.

"Dr. Petrie! Dr. Petrie!"

I threw off the bedclothes and stepped on to the floor of the cabin, fumbling hastily for my slippers. A fear that something was amiss, that some aftermath—some wraith of the dread Chinaman—was yet to come to disturb our premature peace, began to haunt me. I threw open the door.

Upon the gleaming deck, blackly outlined against a wondrous sky, stood a man who wore a blue greatcoat over his pajamas and whose unstockinged feet were thrust into red slippers. It was Platts, the Marconi operator.

"I'm awfully sorry to disturb you, Dr. Petrie," he said, "and I was even less anxious to arouse your neighbor; but somebody seems to be trying to get a message, presumably urgent, through to you."

"To me!" I cried.

"I cannot make it out," admitted Platts, running his fingers through dishevel hair, "but I thought it better to arouse you. Will you come up?" I turned without a word, slipped into my dressing gown, and with Platts passed aft along the deserted deck. The sea was as calm as a great lake. Ahead on the port bow an angry flambeau burned redly beneath the peaceful vault of the heavens. Platts nodded absently in the direction of the weird flames.

"Stromboli," he said; "we shall be nearly through the strait by breakfast time."

We mounted the narrow stair to the Marconi deck. At the table sat Platts' assistant, on his head the Marconi attachment—an apparatus which always set me thinking of the electric chair.

"Have you got it?" demanded my companion as we entered the room.

"It's still coming through," replied the other without moving, "but in the same jerky fashion. Every time I get it it seems to have gone back to the beginning; just 'Dr. Petrie—Dr. Petrie.'"

He began to listen again for the elusive message. I turned to Platts.

"Where is it being sent from?" I asked.

Platts shook his head.

"That's the mystery," he declared. "Look!" He pointed to the table. "According to the Marconi chart there's a Messagerie boat due west between us and Marseilles, and the homeward bound P. and O. which we passed this morning must be getting on that way also by now. The Isis is somewhat ahead, but I've spoken all these, and the message comes from none of them."

"Then it may come from Messina."

"It doesn't come from Messina," replied the man at the table, beginning to write rapidly.

Platts stepped forward and bent over the message which the other was writing.

"Here it is!" he cried excitedly; "we're getting it."

Stepping in turn to the table, I leaned over between the two and read these words as the operator wrote them down: "Dr. Petrie—My shadow . . ."

I drew a quick breath and gripped Platts' shoulder harshly. His assistant began fingering the instrument with irritation.

"Lost it again!" he muttered.

"This message——" I began.

But again the pencil was traveling over the paper: "—lies upon you all. . . . End of message."

The operator stood up and unclasped the receivers from his ears. There, high above the sleeping ship's company, with the carpet of the blue Mediterranean stretched indefinitely about us, we three stood looking at one another. By virtue of a miracle of modern science some one, divided from me by mile upon mile of boundless ocean, had spoken and had been heard.

"Is there no means of learning," I said, "from whence this message emanated?"

Platts shook his head perplexedly.

"They gave no code word," he said. "God knows who they were. It's a strange business and a strange message. Have you any sort of idea, Dr. Petrie, respecting the identity of the sender?"

I stared him hard in the face; an idea had mechanically entered my mind, but one of which I did not choose to speak, since it was opposed to human possibility.

But had I not seen with my own eyes the bloody streak across his forehead as the shot fired by Karamaneh entered his high skull, had I not known as certainly as it is given to men to know that the giant intellect was no more, the mighty will impotent, I should have replied:

"The message is from Dr. Fu-Manchu!"

My reflections were rudely terminated and my sinister thoughts given new stimulus by a loud though muffled cry which reached me from somewhere in the ship below. Both my companions started as violently as I, whereby I knew that the mystery of the wireless message had not been without its effect upon their minds also. But whereas they paused in doubt, I leaped from the room and almost threw myself down the ladder.

It was Karamaneh who had uttered that cry of fear and horror!

Karamaneh occupied a large stateroom aft on the main deck, so that I had to descend from the upper deck, on which my own room was situated, to the promenade deck, again to the main deck, and thence proceed nearly the whole length of the alleyway.

Karamaneh and her brother, Aziz, who occupied a neighboring room, met me near the library. Karamaneh's eyes were wide with fear; her peerless coloring had fled, and she was white to the lips. Aziz, who wore a dressing gown thrown hastily over his night attire, had his arm protectively about the girl's shoulders.

"The mummy!" she whispered tremulously; "the mummy!"

There came a sound of opening doors, and several passengers whom Karamaneh's cries had alarmed appeared in various stages of undress. A stewardess came running from the far end of the alleyway, and I found time to wonder at my own speed; for, starting from the distant Marconi deck, I had been the first to arrive upon the scene.

Stacey, the ship's doctor, was quartered at no great distance from the spot, and he now joined the group. Anticipating the question which trembled upon the lips of several of those about me, "Come to Dr. Stacey's room," I said, taking Karamaneh's arm; "we will give you something to enable you to sleep." I turned to the group. "My patient has had severe nerve trouble," I explained, "and has developed somnambulistic tendencies."

I declined the stewardess' offer of assistance with a slight shake of the head and shortly the four of us entered the doctor's cabin on the deck above. Stacey carefully closed the door. He was an old fellow student of mine, and already he knew much of the history of the beautiful eastern girl and her brother Aziz.

"Something has frightened you," he said gently, seating himself on the arm of Karamaneh's chair and patting her hand as if to reassure her. "Tell us all about it."

For the first time since our meeting that night the girl turned her eyes from me and glanced up at Stacey, a sudden warm blush stealing over her face and throat and as quickly departing, to leave her even more pale than before. She grasped Stacey's hand in both her own and looked again at me.

"Send for Mr. Nayland Smith without delay!" she said. "He must be put on his guard!"

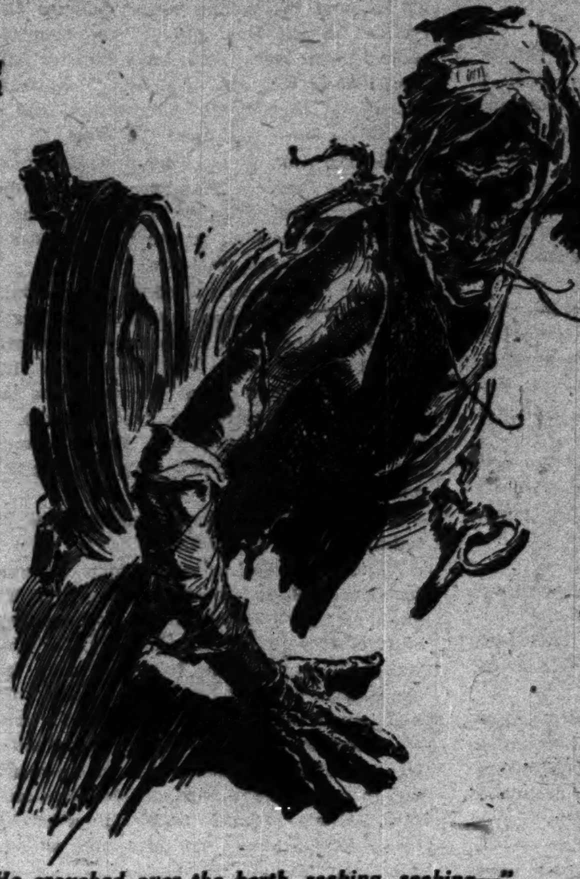
I started up.

"Why?" I said. "For God's sake tell us what has happened!"

"Something [Karamaneh paused, shuddering violently]—some dreadful thing, like a mummy escaped from its tomb, came into my room tonight through the porthole——"

"Through the porthole?" echoed Stacey amazedly.

"Yes, yes, through the porthole! A creature tall and very, very thin. He wore wrappings—yellow wrappings—swathed about his head, so that only his eyes, his evil gleaming eyes, were visible! From waist to knees he was covered also, but his body, his feet, and his legs were bare . . ."



"He crouched over the berth, seeking, seeking—"

"Was he?——" I began.

"He was a brown man, yes." Karamaneh, divining my question, nodded, and the shimmering cloud of her wonderful hair, hastily confined, burst free and rippled about her shoulders. "A gaunt, fleshless brown man, who bent and writhed bony fingers—so!"

"A thug!" I cried.

"He—it—the mummy thing—would have strangled me if I had slept, for he crouched over the berth, seeking, seeking——"

I clenched my teeth convulsively.

"But I was sitting up——"

"With the light on?" interrupted Stacey in surprise.

"No," added Karamaneh; "the light was out." She turned her eyes toward me as the wonderful blush overspread her face once more. "I was sitting thinking. It all happened within a few seconds and quite silently. As the mummy crouched over the berth I unlocked the door and leaped out into the passage. I think I screamed; I did not mean to. O, Dr. Stacey, there is not a moment to spare! Mr. Nayland Smith must be warned immediately. Some horrible servant of Dr. Fu-Manchu is on the ship!"

Nayland Smith leaned against the edge of the dressing table, attired in pajamas. The little stateroom was hazy with smoke and my friend gripped the charred briar between his teeth and watched in an abstracted way the blue-gray clouds arising from the bowl. I knew that he was thinking hard, and from the fact that he had exhibited no surprise when I had related to him the particulars of the attack upon Karamaneh I judged that he had half anticipated something of the kind. Suddenly he stood up, staring at me fixedly.

"Your tact has saved the situation, Petrie," he said. "I failed you momentarily, though, when you proposed to me just now that we should muster the Lascars for inspection. Our game is to pretend that we know nothing—that we believe Karamaneh to have had a bad dream."

"But, Smith——" I began.

"It would be useless, Petrie," he interrupted me. "You cannot suppose that I overlooked the possibility of some creature of the doctors being among the Lascars. I can assure you that not one of them answers to the description of the midnight assailant. From the girl's account we have to look (discarding the idea of a revivified mummy) for a man of unusual height, and there's no Lascar of unusual height on board, and from the visible evidence that he entered the stateroom through the porthole we have to look for a man more than normally thin. In a word, the servant of Dr. Fu-Manchu who attempted the life of Karamaneh is either in hiding on the ship or if visible is disguised.

"From our knowledge of Fu-Manchu and of the group surrounding him (and, don't forget, surviving him) we may further assume that the wireless message was no gratuitous piece of melodrama, but that it was directed to a definite end. Let us endeavor to link up the chain a little. You occupy an upper deck berth; so do I. Experience of the Chinaman has formed a habit in both of us; that of sleeping with closed windows. Your port was fastened and so was my own. Karamaneh is quartered on the main deck, and her brother's stateroom opens into the same alleyway. Since the ship is in the Strait of Messina and the glass set fair, the stewards have not closed the portholes nightly. We know that that of Karamaneh's stateroom was open. Therefore, in any attempt upon our quartet, Karamaneh would automatically be selected for the victim, since failing you or myself she may be regarded as being the most obnoxious to Dr. Fu-Manchu."

I nodded comprehendingly. Smith's capacity for throwing the white light of reason into the darkest places often amazed me.

"You may have noticed," he continued, "that Karamaneh's room is directly below your own. In the event of any outcry you would be sooner upon the scene than I should, for instance, because I sleep on the opposite side of the ship. This circumstance I take to be the explanation of the wireless message which, because of its hesitancy [a piece of ingenuity characteristic of the group], led to your being awakened and invited up to the Marconi deck; in short, it gave the would-be assassin a better chance of escaping before your arrival.

"I regret the episode," continued Smith, "as a posthumous attempt of the doctor's—a legacy of hate which may prove more disastrous than any attempt made upon us by Fu-Manchu in life. Some fiendish member of the murder group is on board the ship. We must, as always, meet guile with guile. There must be no appeal to the captain, no public examination of passengers and crew. One attempt has failed; I do not doubt that others will be made. At present you will enact the role of physician in attendance upon Karamaneh and will put it about for whom it may interest that a slight return of her nervous trouble is causing her to pass uneasy nights. I can safely leave this part of the case to you, I think?"

I nodded rapidly.

"I haven't troubled to make inquiries," added Smith; "but I think it probable that the regulations respecting closed portholes will come into operation immediately we have passed the strait, or at any rate immediately there is any likelihood of bad weather."

"You mean——"

"I mean that no alteration should be made in our habits. A second attempt along similar lines is to be apprehended tonight. After that we may begin to look out for a new danger."

"I pray we may avoid it," I said fervently.

As I entered the saloon for breakfast in the morning I was subjected to solicitous inquiries from Mrs. Prior, the gossip of the ship. Her room adjoined Karamaneh's, and she had been one of the passengers aroused by the girl's cries in the night. Strictly adhering to my role, I explained that my patient was threatened with a second nervous breakdown and was subject to vivid and disturbing dreams. One or two other inquiries I met in the same way ere escaping to the corner table reserved to us.

That iron bound code of conduct which rules the Anglo-Indian had in the first days of the voyage threatened to ostracize Karamaneh and Aziz, by reason of the eastern blood to which their brilliant but peculiar type of beauty bore witness. Smith's attitude, however—and in a Burmese commissioner it constituted something of a law—had done much to break down the barriers. The extraordinary beauty of the girl had done the rest; so that now, far from finding themselves shunned, the society of Karamaneh and her romantic looking brother was universally courted.

The last inquiry that morning respecting my interesting patient came from the bishop of Damascus, a benevolent old gentleman whose ancestry was not wholly innocent of oriental strains and who sat at a table immediately behind me. As I settled down to my porridge he turned his chair slightly and bent to my ear.

"Mrs. Prior tells me that your charming friend was disturbed last night," he whispered. "She seems rather pale this morning; I sincerely trust that she is suffering no ill effect."

I swung around with a smile. Owing to my carelessness there was a slight collision, and the poor bishop, who had been invalided to England after typhoid in order to undergo special treatment, suppressed an exclamation of pain, although his fine dark eyes gleamed kindly upon me through the pebbles of his gold-rimmed pince-nez.

"Can you forgive my clumsiness?" I began.

His system was supercharged with typhoid bacilli, and, as sometimes occurs, the superfluous "bugs" had sought exit. He could only walk with the aid of two stout sticks, and bent very much at that. His left leg had been surgically scraped to the bone, and I appreciated the exquisite torture to which my awkwardness had subjected him. But he would entertain no apologies, pressing his inquiry respecting Karamaneh in the kindly manner which had made him so deservedly popular on board.

"Many thanks for your solicitude," I said: "I have promised her sound repose tonight, and since my professional reputation is at stake I shall see that she secures it."

In short, we were in pleasant company, and the day passed happily enough and without notable event.

With the approach of evening, in place of that physical contentment which usually heralds the dinner hour at sea, I experienced a fit of the seemingly causeless apprehension which too often in the past had harbingered the coming of grim events; which I had learned to associate with the nearing presence of one of Fu-Manchu's death agents. In view of the facts as I afterward knew them to be I can not account for this.

Yet in an unexpected manner my forebodings were realized. That night I was destined to meet a sorrow surpassing any which my troubled life had known. Even now I experience great difficulty, in relating the matters which befell, in speaking of the sense of irrevocable loss which came to me. Briefly, then, at about ten minutes before the dining hour, while all the passengers, myself included, were below dressing, a faint cry arose from somewhere aft on the upper deck—a cry which was swiftly taken up by other voices, so that presently a deck steward echoed it immediately outside my own stateroom:

"Man overboard! Man overboard!"

All my premonitions rallying in that one sickening moment, I sprang out on the deck, half dressed as I was, and, leaping past the boat which swung nearly opposite my door, craned over the rail, looking astern.

Half in the streak of the wake and half out of it, I perceived the sleeve of a white jacket, and, near to it, a soft felt hat. The sleeve rose up once into clear view, seemed to describe a half circle in the air, then sink back again into the glassy swell of the water. Only the hat remained floating upon the surface.

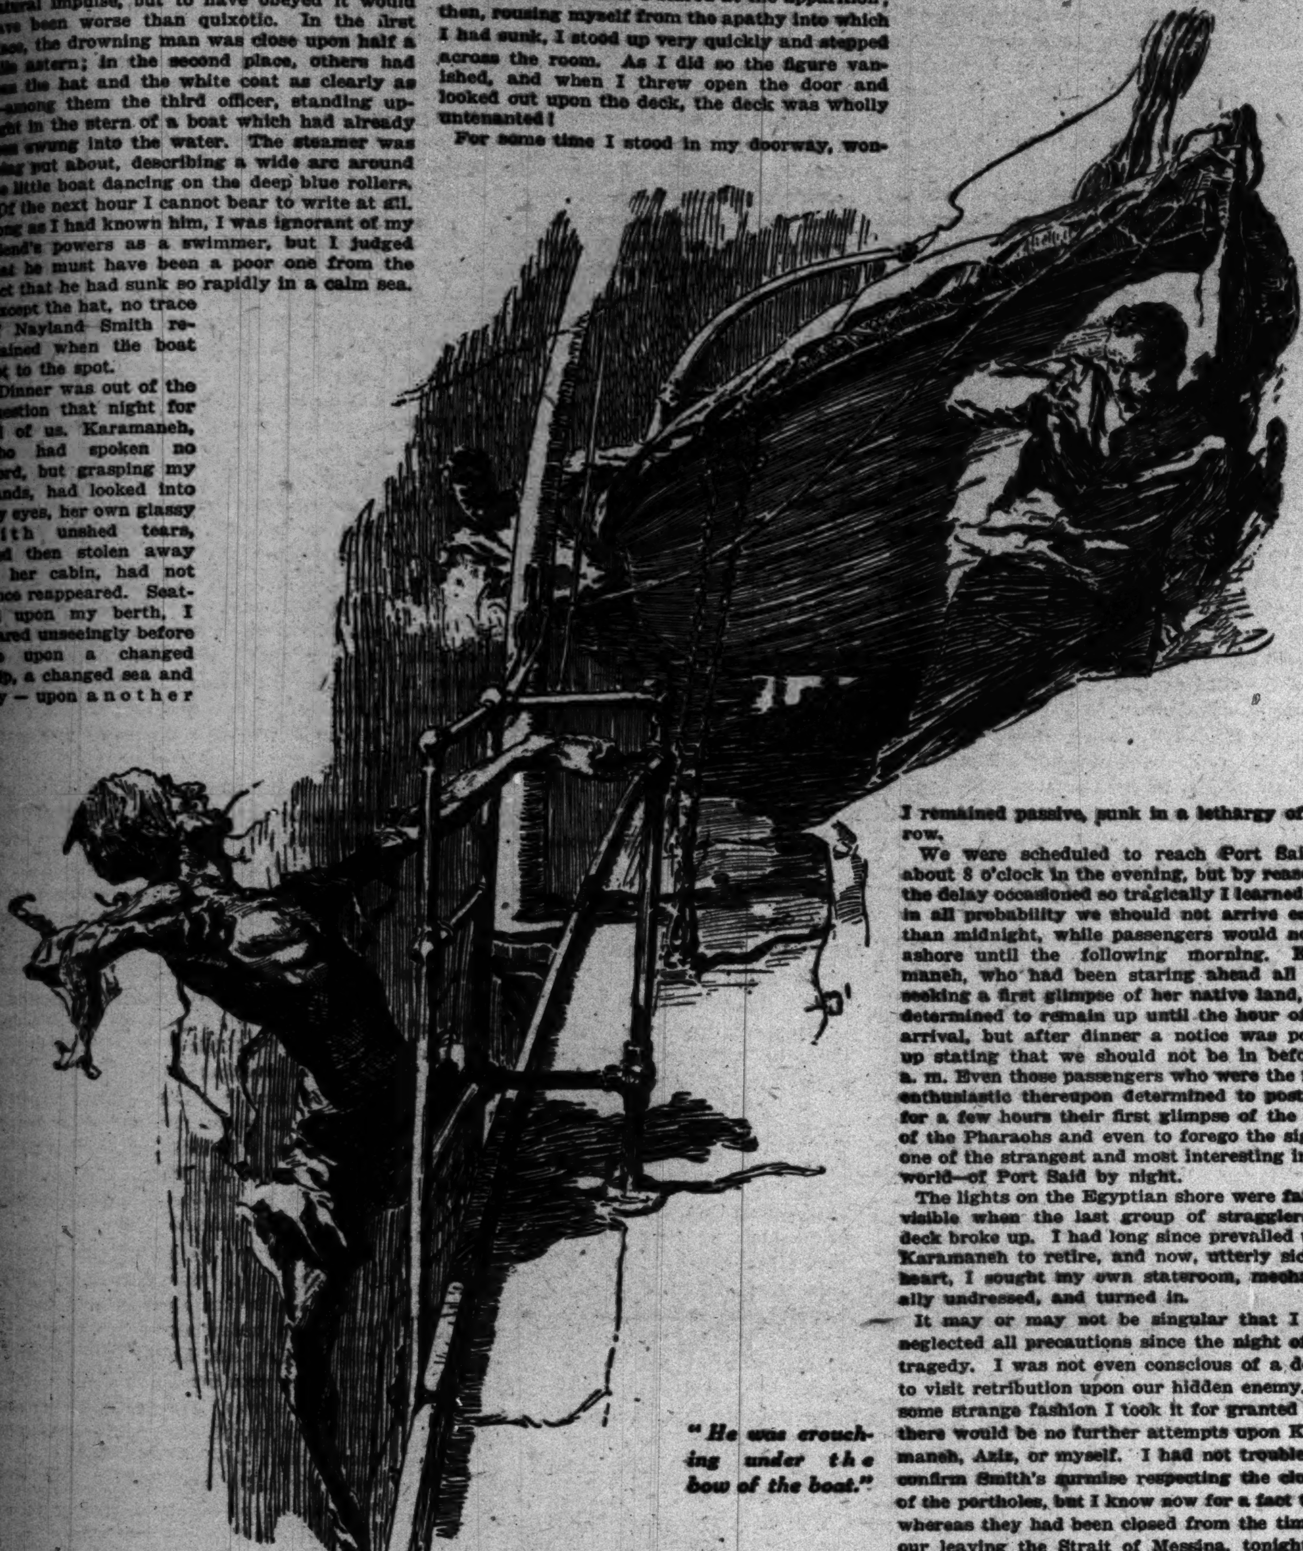
By the evidence of the white sleeve alone I might have remained unconvinced, although upon the voyage I had become familiar enough with the drill shooting jacket, but the presence of the gray felt hat was almost conclusive.

The man overboard was Nayland Smith!

To spring overboard to the rescue was a natural impulse, but to have obeyed it would have been worse than quixotic. In the first place, the drowning man was close upon half a mile astern; in the second place, others had seen the hat and the white coat as clearly as I—among them the third officer, standing upright in the stern of a boat which had already been swung into the water. The steamer was being put about, describing a wide arc around the little boat dancing on the deep blue rollers.

Of the next hour I cannot bear to write at all. Long as I had known him, I was ignorant of my friend's powers as a swimmer, but I judged that he must have been a poor one from the fact that he had sunk so rapidly in a calm sea. Except the hat, no trace of Nayland Smith remained when the boat got to the spot.

Dinner was out of the question that night for all of us. Karamaneh, who had spoken no word, but grasping my hands, had looked into my eyes, her own glassy with unshed tears, and then stolen away to her cabin, had not since reappeared. Seated upon my berth, I stared unseeingly before me upon a changed ship, a changed sea and sky — upon another world. The poor old bishop, my neighbor, had glanced in several times as he hobbled by, and his spectacles were unmistakably humid, but even he had vouchsafed no word, realizing that my sorrow was too deep for such consolation.



"He was crouching under the bow of the boat."

When at last I became capable of connected thought, I found myself faced by a big problem. Should I place the facts of the matter, as I knew them to be, before the captain, or could I hope to apprehend Fu-Manchu's servant by the methods suggested by my poor friend? That Smith's death was an accident, I did not believe for a moment; it was impossible not to link it with the attempt upon Karamaneh. In my misery and doubt I determined to take counsel with Dr. Stacey. I stood up and passed out on to the deck.

Those passengers whom I met on my way to his room regarded me in respectful silence. By contrast, Stacey's attitude surprised and even annoyed me.

"I'd be prepared to stake all I possess, although it's not much," he said, "that this was not the work of your hidden enemy."

He blankly refused to give me his reasons for the statement, and strongly advised me to watch and wait, but to make no communication to the captain.

At this hour I can look back and savor again something of the profound dejection of that time. I shut myself in my cabin, where I sat mourning my poor friend's tragic end.

Since I had not counted the bells, to this day I have only the vaguest idea respecting the time whereat the next incident occurred which it is my duty to chronicle. Perhaps I was on the verge of falling asleep, seated there as I was; at any rate, I could scarcely believe myself awake, when unheralded by any footsteps to indicate his coming, some one, who seemed to be crouching outside my stateroom, slightly raised himself and peered in through the porthole, which I had not troubled to close.

He must have been a fairly tall man to have looked in at all, and, although his features were indistinguishable in the darkness, his outline, which was clearly perceptible against the white boat beyond, was unfamiliar to me. He seemed to have a small and oddly swathed head, and what I could make out of the gaunt neck and square shoulders in some way suggested an unnatural thinness—in short, the smudgy silhouette in the porthole was wierdly like that of a mummy!

For some moments I stared at the apparition; then, rousing myself from the apathy into which I had sunk, I stood up very quickly and stepped across the room. As I did so the figure vanished, and when I threw open the door and looked out upon the deck, the deck was wholly untenanted!

For some time I stood in my doorway, wondering in a disinterested fashion, which now I cannot explain, if the hidden enemy had revealed himself to me or if disordered imagination had played me a trick. Later I was destined to know the truth of the matter, but when at last I fell into a troubled sleep that night I was still in some doubt upon the point.

My state of mind when I awakened on the following day was indescribable. I found it difficult to doubt that Nayland Smith would meet me on the way to the bathroom as usual, with the cracked briar fuming between his teeth. I felt myself almost compelled to pass around to his stateroom in order to convince myself that he was not really there. The catastrophe was still unreal to me, and the world a dream world. Indeed I retain scarcely any recollections of the traffic of that day or of the days that followed it until we reached Port Said.

Two things only made any striking appeal to my dulled intelligence at that time. These were the aloof attitude of Dr. Stacey, who seemed carefully to avoid me, and a curious circumstance which the second officer mentioned in conversation one evening as we strolled up and down the main deck together.

"Either I was fast asleep at my post, Dr. Petrie," he said, "or last night, in the middle watch, some one or something came over the side of the ship just aft the bridge, slipped across the deck, and disappeared."

I stared at him wonderingly.

"Do you mean something that came up out of the sea?" I said.

"Nothing could very well have come up out of the sea," he replied, smiling slightly, "so that it must have come up from the deck below."

"Was it a man?"

"It looked like a man, and a fairly tall one, but he came and was gone like a flash, and I saw no more of him up to the time I was relieved. To tell you the truth, I did not report it because I thought I must have been dozing; it's a dead slow watch, and the navigation on this part of the run is child's play."

I was on the point of telling him what I had seen myself two evenings before, but for some reason I refrained from doing so, although I think had I confided in him he would have abandoned the idea that what he had seen was phantasmal; for the pair of us could not well have been dreaming. Some malignant presence haunted the ship; I could not doubt this; yet I remained passive, sunk in a lethargy of sorrow.

We were scheduled to reach Port Said at about 8 o'clock in the evening, but by reason of the delay occasioned so tragically I learned that in all probability we should not arrive earlier than midnight, while passengers would not go ashore until the following morning. Karamaneh, who had been staring ahead all day, seeking a first glimpse of her native land, was determined to remain up until the hour of our arrival, but after dinner a notice was posted up stating that we should not be in before 2 a. m. Even those passengers who were the most enthusiastic thereupon determined to postpone for a few hours their first glimpse of the land of the Pharaohs and even to forego the sight—one of the strangest and most interesting in the world—of Port Said by night.

The lights on the Egyptian shore were faintly visible when the last group of stragglers on deck broke up. I had long since prevailed upon Karamaneh to retire, and now, utterly sick at heart, I sought my own stateroom, mechanically undressed, and turned in.

It may or may not be singular that I had neglected all precautions since the night of the tragedy. I was not even conscious of a desire to visit retribution upon our hidden enemy. In some strange fashion I took it for granted that there would be no further attempts upon Karamaneh, Aziz, or myself. I had not troubled to confirm Smith's surmise respecting the closing of the portholes, but I know now for a fact that, whereas they had been closed from the time of our leaving the Strait of Messina, tonight, in sight of the Egyptian coast, the regulation was relaxed again. I cannot say if this is usual, but that it occurred on this ship is a fact to which I can testify—a fact to which my attention was to be drawn dramatically.

The night was steaming hot, and, because I welcomed the circumstance that my own port was widely opened, I reflected that those on the lower decks might be open also. A faint sense of danger stirred within me; indeed, I sat upright and was about to spring out of my berth when that occurred which induced me to change my mind.

All passengers had long since retired, and a midnight silence descended upon the ship, for we were not yet close enough to port for any unusual activities to have commenced.

Clearly outlined in the open porthole, there suddenly arose that same grotesque silhouette which I had seen once before.

Prompted by I know not what, I lay still and simulated heavy breathing, for it was evident to me that I must be partly visible to the watcher, so bright was the night. For ten—twenty—thirty seconds, with my eyes partly closed, I watched, breathing heavily all the time. Then, making no more noise than a cat, he moved away across the deck, and I could judge of his height by the fact that his small, swathed head remained visible almost to the time that he passed to the end of the white boat which swung opposite my stateroom.

In a moment I slipped quietly to the floor, crossed, and peered out of the porthole, so that at last I had a clear view of the sinister mummy-man. He was crouching under the bow of the boat and attaching to the white rails below a contrivance of a kind with which I was not entirely unfamiliar. This was a thin ladder of silken rope, having bamboo rungs, with two metal hooks for attaching it to any suitable object.

My pistol was in my cabin trunk, and to have found it in the dark, without making a good deal of noise, would have been impossible. Doubting how I should act, I stood watching the man with the swathed head while he threw the end of the ladder over the side, crept past the bow of the boat, and swung his gaunt body over the rail, exhibiting the agility of an ape. One quick glance fore and aft he gave, then began to swarm down the ladder—in which instant I knew his mission.

With a choking cry, which forced itself unwilled from my lips, I tore at the door, threw it open, and sprang across the deck. Plans I had none, and since I carried no instrument wherewith to sever the ladder, the murderer might indeed have carried out his design for all that I could have done to prevent him, were it not that another took a hand in the game!

At the moment that the mummy-man—his head now on a level with the deck—perceived me, he stopped dead. Coincident with his stopping, the crack of a pistol shot sounded from immediately beyond the boat.

Uttering a sort of sobbing sound, the creature fell, then clutched, with straining yellow fingers, at the rails, and, seemingly by dint of a great effort, swarmed along aft some twenty feet, with incredible swiftness and agility, and clambered on to the deck.

A second shot cracked sharply, and a voice [God! was I mad?] cried: "Hold him, Petrie!"

Rigid with fearful astonishment I stood as out from the boat above me leaped a figure attired solely in shirt and trousers. The newcomer leaped away in the wake of the mummy-man, who had vanished around the corner by the smoking room. Over his shoulder he cried back at me: "The bishop's stateroom! See that no one enters!"

I clutched at my head, which seemed to be fiery hot; I realized in my own person the sensations of one who knows himself mad. For the man who pursued the mummy was Nayland Smith!

I stood in the bishop's stateroom, Nayland Smith, his gaunt face wet with perspiration, beside me, handling certain odd looking objects which littered the place and lay about amid the discarded garments of the absent cleric.

"Pneumatic pads!" he snapped. "The man was a walking air cushion!" He gingerly fingered two strange rubber appliances. "For distending the cheeks," he muttered, dropping them disgustedly on the floor. "His hands and wrists betrayed him, Petrie. He wore his cuffs unusually long, but could not entirely hide his bony wrists. To have watched him, while remaining myself unseen, was next to impossible; hence my device of tossing a dummy overboard, calculated to float for less than ten minutes! It actually floated nearly fifteen as a matter of fact, and I had some horrible moments!"

"Smith!" I said, "how could you submit me—"

He clapped his hands on my shoulders.

"My dear old chap, there was no other way, believe me. From that boat I could see right into his stateroom, but, once in, I dared not leave it, except late at night, stealthily! The 'second' spotted me one night and I thought the game was up, but evidently he didn't report it.

"But you might have confided—"

"Impossible! I'll admit I nearly fell to the temptation that first night; for I could see into your room as well as into his!" He slapped me boisterously on the back, but his gray eyes were suspiciously moist. "Dear old Petrie! Thank God for our friends! But you'd be the first to admit, old man, that you're a dead rotten actor! Your portrayal of grief for the loss of a valued chum would not have convinced a soul on board!

"Therefore I made use of Stacey, whose callous attitude was less remarkable. Gad, Petrie! I nearly bagged our man the first night! The elaborate plan—Marconi message to get you out of the way, and so forth—had miscarried, and he knew the porthole trick would be useless once we got into the open sea. He took a big chance. He discarded his clerical guise and peeked into your room, you remember? But you were awake, and I made no move when he slipped back to his own cabin. I wanted to take him red-handed."

"Have you any idea?"

"Who he is? No more than where he is! Probably some creature of Dr. Fu-Manchu specially chosen for the purpose; obviously a man of culture, and probably of thug ancestry. I hit him in the shoulder, but even then he ran like a hare. We've searched the ship without result. He may have gone overboard and chanced the swim to shore."

We stepped out on to the deck. Around us was that unforgetable scene, Port Said by night. Now the ship was barely moving through the glassy water. Smith took my arm and we walked forward. Above us was the mighty peace of Egypt's sky, ablaze with splendor; around and about us moved the unique turmoil of the clearing house of the near east.

"I would give much to know the real identity of the bishop of Damascus," muttered Smith.

He stopped abruptly, snapping his teeth together, and grasping my arm as in a vise. Hard upon his words had followed the rattling clangor as the great anchor was let go; but horribly intermingled with the metallic roar there came to us such a fearful, inarticulate shrieking as to chill the very soul.

The anchor plunged into the water of the harbor; the shrieking ceased. Smith turned to me, and his face was tragic in the light of the arc lamp swung hard by. "We shall never know," he whispered. "God forgive him; he must be in bloody tatters now. Petrie, the poor fool was hiding in the chain locker!"

OVER HERE — The Story of a War Bride

SYNOPSIS.

Elizabeth, on her eighteenth birthday, is a sweet little "bud" who looks on the war abroad as an irritating and necessary evil. She hopes America won't get into it—war would spoil so many things for her. And it certainly would take away Tommy, her oldest suitor, already at Plattsburg. Though she doesn't know it, she is really falling in love with Tommy. Lester, heir to millions, a pacifist, and one of Beth's suitors, proposes and is turned down, though her mother favors the match. In the meantime her interest in the war and Tommy deepens. Beth visits Greenwich village and meets the freaks. Tommy hears and is jealous. They quarrel. "Making up," they are married quietly. Her interest in the war grows deeper.

FIFTH INSTALLMENT.

MAY.

The Richardson family don't talk any more about the war than we did at home—they couldn't—but they seem somehow more intimate with it. Of course, Mr. Richardson knows Wilson and all that, but that isn't what I mean. He gets personally excited because Balfour broke the precedent of a century and a half by addressing the house—Balfour being a British representative, and the president going and sitting in the gallery in order to let him. He was so thrilled at having a marshal of France in New York he could hardly eat his lunch; and still he didn't read any of the speeches the commissions made. He said he was sure they said all the suitable and proper things. I could just see father devouring them bit by bit and making texts for his discourses out of them, and yet I knew he wouldn't go so far out of his way to look at either Joffre or Balfour or Viviani.

I, of course, would and did. I not only stood on Fifth avenue for hours waiting for the procession that was leading Joffre to the home of Henry Frick—I hope he liked the nice strip of green turf on Mr. Frick's front lawn—but I went with Eileen Douglas up to Columbia as an alleged student to see him receive his honorary degree there. Joffre was a darling, he looked like somebody's fierce old grandfather. Tommy went to the lawyers' dinner to Viviani, but, of course, he was too busy to trapes around with me any. It was only two days before he went to Plattsburg.

It was a funny thing that in one part of me I didn't so much mind having Tommy go. I don't know how to explain it. Of course, the other part of me was almost dying of it. I think I had had so much pure happiness in two weeks of having Tommy all to myself that I was almost stupefied with it—anesthetized. I mean. I had rested in Tommy's arms, until I felt that being there actually wasn't the point. The point was that they were my arms, and I belonged there. It was like coming into the ownership of a perfectly good house. You'd have it just the same if you weren't in it every minute. In fact, you couldn't expect to be. So, I got a lot of undue credit for my bravery in letting Tommy go; and afterward when the real ache for him set in nobody knew it—Tommy!

I went home on the 18th and it was a peculiar homegoing. Mother was at the Red Cross doing more emergency work for them, and father and I and the conscription bill sat down to dinner together. Father was father, and cook was cook, and Bessie—our half a servant who comes in only afternoons—was Bessie; but I was changed. I was Mrs. Richardson, the well known, in family circles, war bride, and I couldn't get over it. Father and I were very merry, however, and I tried to talk to him about the way I thought Tommy would have talked, until Bessie brought in the dessert, which was prune whip—Tommy's favorite dessert and mine, too—and the strain was too much for me. So I fled.

What do I care about the British gains southeast of Loos? Or the Hindenburg line? This war is getting to be like a stupid game that nobody beats, and the Germans go on killing everybody in sight and those that are hidden in trenches, too. I am not going to read any more war books. They make my head ache.

Thirteen days of Tommy's three months are gone already. I'm going to see him next month if everybody thinks it's best. One unexpected thing about my marriage is that it rather curtails my freedom. I was getting to have a very good time being grown up. I put all my theories into practice and was very firm with father and mother. I even went to matinées alone. One must see war plays—even if it is rather criminal to spend money on one's own pleasures at this time of strife, and I did other things of equal harmlessness that every one concerned was too busy to notice; but now since I wear a wedding ring I'm a more general object of attention and therefore advice, and therefore actual admonitions not to do things. I know it's foolish to write to newspapers and magazines about personal problems, but I've been thinking seriously of doing so, guardedly and under a nom de plume, of course, just to inquire at what age it isn't perfectly barbarous for a wife to stop minding her mother and father.

General conditions haven't changed so terribly. We're still pretty much alive and kicking in this country. It's still their war over across the ocean, and we hope and pray over here that we shan't have any nearer glimpse of its privations. Food has practically hit the sky, though, and over on the east side there have been riots and things all the spring about onions and potatoes. Also they mobbed the city hall one day, but like that character of Shakespeare's we so often hear of, I forget which one, I think the poor things rather "protest too much." Father says the're incited by the I. W. W.'s and the labor leaders and others of Lester's friends.

Anyway, I went out to see their parade and it consisted of numbers of enormously fat or fattish women in good clean clothes with shining rosy faces marching and carrying banners saying, "Our Children Are Starving," and in a van behind them a lot of robust children enjoying the scenery. I suppose the really starving ones weren't able or presentable enough to parade.

It's perfectly awful to say but I don't care so much who starves if it isn't Americans that I know and like or the French that I know I would like. All these Hungarians and Jews are much less near to me than the poor Belgians, for instance.

A very funny thing happened to me when I was watching that parade, though, and I don't see how it could have been an emotional effect since I didn't feel any emotion, but I keeled over in a one second faint—a thing I have never done before in all my life. I didn't tell anybody because I was so ashamed of it—but is Tommy getting an unhealthy wife? He wouldn't like that, I know.

Also, I am not so altogether pleased with food as I was. That, I think, is just natural pining. If you wake up in the morning and cry for your husband every day between the hours of 6 and 7:30, why it would seem logical that you wouldn't feel the same appetite for breakfast. I still opine that I'm not a crying girl, and I wouldn't have Tommy know for anything that I ever shed a tear on his behalf. "Whither thou goest I will go." I can't go to Plattsburgh with him, but his people are my people—I should say they were—and his God is my God even though I've had to adopt the lord god of battles, to whom I was so much averse a little while ago.

Well, I am getting a very unworthy prayer in my heart. Tommy would think it was unworthy, but is it so much so, I wonder? I'm praying that this god I've adopted will stop the war, now that I've let Tommy enroll in it. America has done her part. She has subscribed herself to it. She'll send her men across the water if necessary, but maybe it won't be necessary. That's my hope. Before you are married you don't know how much you need a husband. Afterward some of the things you thought at that time become null and void. Not having had your husband with you every minute you then gaily speed him on his figurative way after the ceremony; but married people ought not to be torn apart from each other—war or no war. It isn't right.

George has joined the navy. I just simply don't see how he could wear that sailor suit and childish hat. He looks about as distinguished and refined as our milk man, but he's as proud as a peacock in it. He wants to marry somebody, but I told him not to.

"Why shouldn't I get married?" he said. "You did," which, of course, is a logical argument.

"I don't think you'd better, George," I said, "especially since you haven't anybody in particular in mind."

"I could pick one out," he said.

"Don't marry for the sake of getting married," I said.

"Why?"

"George," I said earnestly, "there are lots of good reasons."

But he simply could not see that I was right. He rather wanted me to sound out Dolly Grainger for him, but Dolly gets into my family only over my dead body; besides she's out for higher game than a sailor suit and baggy trousers wrapped round the inconsiderable figure of my cousin George. Roland might suit her better, as he has quite a lot of money of his own, but I'm not on very good terms with him, as he has never spoken a word to me since my marriage and wouldn't come to the wedding. He sent me a beautiful rug, though. Persian, with a rose color background and a blue border. It looks worth about a million dollars. I want a home with Tommy to put it in.

"You must remember, dear," Tommy writes, "that this is literally a school for officers, up here"—in that little peak on the map way up on the top of New York state—"every hour and minute of the day is spent in learning to do something that is to be done by the men under our charge, a little later. I've been through the ropes before so it comes very easy to me. I think I've got the trick, some way. A lot of things come perfectly natural to me that give some of the other fellows a heluva (s'cuse me, dear) lot of trouble. I think Gen. Richardson handed me down something that I never knew I had before. It can't be any muddier in France than it is here. I came in from a ten mile hike an hour or so ago the muddiest man that the American skies ever looked down upon. I had my picture taken to show you. You will see that it looks more like a gingerbread man than it does your Tommy."

The rest was all about other and more personal things. Romeo and Juliet didn't have very much on us in some ways—to put it slangily. Tommy has made me a map of Plattsburg and his quarters, so I can follow him around with the point of a pencil when I am going over his letters.

I'm trying to harden my mind, but it won't stay hard for long at a time. I simply can't bear rifle practice any more. To shoot at a clay pigeon upsets my nerves. Maybe I wouldn't be so timid about a Boche, I don't know.

Marcella Harcourt came to see me today all dressed in black.

"Your brother?" I said.

"No," she said. "My friend."

"Are you sure?"

"Yes, my brother wrote me. He—knew."

Then the pitiful tears began to stream down her face.

"Marcella," I said, "why didn't you do what I did—marry him?"

"He never asked me," she said. "I don't think he cared as I did—and now I shall never know."

"Don't say that," I said mechanically.

"It's true," she said.

But while I was comforting her a terrible thing was taking place in my own mind. I had decided that if Mercella loved that man he couldn't be dead. for I knew from my own experience that two people who loved each other could not lose each other in that dreadful way—so soon. I knew it. When Marcella told me that her friend was really dead it was a shock to me, but when she confessed that it hadn't been a mutual love I felt relieved in that part of me devoted to me and Tommy exclusively. I don't claim that this was a worthy or holy way to feel, but it was what I felt.

Nobody could be sorrier or perhaps as sorry for Marcella as I was, however, though I was a little glad when she got all through her crying and went home. That kind of grief keeps on and on indefinitely, you know, and I was expecting other and less melancholy guests to arrive at any moment. They were Lester and Peter Ives, Billy and Eileen Douglas, and Dolly Grainger. I didn't get up any party, but they all telephoned at different times and asked to come. I thought it would rather bring back my girlhood days if I allowed them to appear in a bunch. So I did.

Eileen and Billy appeared first.

Billy kissed me gayly.

"Welcome to the order," she said, pointing to my wedding ring. "You'll have a lot better time being married than you ever had single. You mark my words."

"I expect to," I said.

"You can't be quite so useful to me," Eileen sighed. "I did think it would be such larks if we could have gone across together later."

"That wouldn't have come off anyway," I reassured her. "My parents consider me too young to go to France."

"Though old enough to be married," Billy laughed. "They say the nurses are having the time of their young lives. They smoke all the soldiers' cigarets and send back home for more, which they also smoke. I'd give my eyes to go with Eileen."

"O! I wouldn't be allowed to go if you were going," Eileen said cheerfully. "I'm going over there to work seriously."

"Well, at least pick up all the scandal you can to bring home to me," Billy implored.

On this chatter the boys came in—the same old boys. Lester had just the same things to say combined with some minute information he had picked up about the way New York was policed, which we all know anyway. He insisted on reiterating what steps would be taken at once if New York were attacked, how signals were arranged from one police station to another and where the emergency camps were to be located and all that dope.

"Tell us that there is a net in New York harbor to catch submarines, Lester, and that all one night last spring the port of New York was closed while they were mending it," Billy said satirically, which, of course, hurt Lester's feelings, whereupon Peter Ives jumped into the breach. Peter may be lightweight and all that, but his mother certainly brought him up to do and say the polite and correct things in an emergency.

Dolly Grainger arrived with my cousin, George. I was quite amused at George's enterprise, though a little angry at Dolly for taking the trouble to string him. George is a good boy, but he is not affectionate and he hasn't any real sense of humor, two things which I consider to be essential to a successful existence either on one's own part or the part of others with whom one is associated. Dolly is frankly pleased with my marriage for the simple reason that it gives her one more of her own set for chaperon. She always has so much mischief up her sleeve that she needs a collusive chaperon stationed at about every block. I have yet to tell her that Tommy has forbidden my being a chaperon to any of the crowd.

Bessie brought in the tea, and the conversation continued in the same old familiar way that I have heard ever since we grew old enough to run around together. I portioned out lemon and sugar and passed cocoanut kisses the same way I have always done when they dropped in—but there was something different about the whole proceedings. Something had happened to me, and I felt it more and more as the eating and drinking progressed. I felt it even more than I did the first evening when father and I had dinner alone together. The whole bunch seemed to grow dim and fade before my very eyes, and nothing to remain but a bright unwinking fire in the fireplace, and me alone in my blue and white ruffled dress that Tommy likes so much.

It was somewhat electrifying to have Mrs. Godfrey announced in the midst of this scene of gay and intimate persiflage. She came in, dressed in golden brown broadcloth and seal, and looking as if she had just stepped out of a packing case instead of a wind blown avenue. She was, however, very pleasant to all of the crowd. Even if she does say the most inane and pointed things to people when she first sees them she certainly knows how to do so. She is a picture to look at. To that I will agree any time.

"Tommy seems to be having a good time, doesn't he?" she inquired in a sprightly way of me.

"He's working pretty hard," I said.

"Yes, of course. Mrs. Allensby was at Plattsburg over the week end, you know."

"Yes?" I said.

"She said she had the pleasure of taking Tommy and her brother out in her motor Sunday afternoon."

"Yes," I said, "wasn't it kind of her?"

Tommy had written me that he was motoring Sunday afternoon, but he certainly hadn't mentioned doing so with Mrs. Allensby and her brother.

I stood up to bid one after another good-by, and they had the usual hard time breaking away, parting from each other and remembering to run back and say little silly things to me. Mrs. Godfrey went last. I was awfully tired of standing by that time. I don't know why. I just was.

"When are you going up?" was my sister-in-law's parting shot. "Mrs. Allensby goes up every week. You must meet her some time."

And after she was safely out of the door I

by Ethel M. Kelley

crumpled up on the floor and fainted away, and all that I said for some time after that, according to mother, was:

"I want my husband, I want my husband, I want my husband."

. . . .

Tommy has married a very ignorant wife which is a pity, because he himself is so cultured in some ways. Of ccourse I speak French and German and had a lot of fun doing chemistry in school, but none of my other education, though flung at me hard enough at the time, seemed to stick.

I've always thought it didn't matter so much what you could do with your mind if you could do about everything with your body. I thought tennis and swimming and riding like a streak were about all there was to it, but now that I am getting to be a trifle puny and having aches and pains that I never knew anything about before except by hearsay, I am worried about my poor old mind. I am not Tommy's intellectual equal. There's no use talking. I'm not. Also I know very little that's useful. When I tried to write out my military census I was abashed at what I couldn't do for my country.

Then I don't know what I think, and that alarms me. I am getting worried for fear Tommy married me because he thought I knew what my attitude was in a great many matters that I don't feel stable about at all. He sets such a great store by my sporting instinct—and, after all, what and where is it?

Do I want to let him go on being at Plattsburg and having Mrs. Allensby up there every week end? Answer: I do not.

Am I crazy for him to get his commission and go over and join Pershing at the first possible minute? Answer: I am not. I am not.

Do I follow the campaigns on the different fronts with a map and a pencil with enthusiasm and intensity? Answer: No.

Do I know anything about this much discussed situation in the Balkans that I could reel off at short notice? Could I even define a Balkan without referring to the book? Answer; Well, no—well, no.

Do I know anything about the Russian revolution to speak of—or care? Only that they revoluted and then fought about it and that Kerensky is pronounced with the accent about equally distributed between the first and second syllables. Tommy won't have to go to Russia, not by the wildest stretch of the imagination—so "no" to the caring end of it.

What good am I, therefore, to a man like Thomas Richardson Jr.? Answer: Not very much at the most ambiguous estimate.

The only way I can keep his love is to pretend to him that I am worthier than I am, I suppose—and healthier. When I get up to Plattsburg and actually see him it may be very hard to keep up the bluff, but I am going to try to. And in the meanwhile I am entering into all the serious discussions I can get into with my father in order to train my mind and exercise it more adequately.

"Father," I said the other day, "what do you really think about this being a war of the capitalists? Do you or don't you think that England got into it because of her greedy desire to gobble up a few indemnities?"

"Don't be silly, dear," father said, somewhat unflatteringly. "All that patter comes from the pacifists and propagandists. This is the struggle of right against might, and don't you forget it, Piggie, no matter what arguments your rejected suitors may set forth."

"I won't," I said meekly, "besides, I never talk war with Lester any more. But, father," I continued, resolved on prolonging the conversation by some pretext or other for the sake of my mental poise and development, "don't you think this will be the last war of the world? Don't you think that what we are fighting now is a gigantic struggle for everlasting peace? What with all our fearsome engines of destruction, don't you feel that this is the last great combat of the ages?"

"No, I don't," father said shortly; "nor, I trust, do you, in spite of your fluffing. Stop and think a minute. In the last three thousand years there has been a bare five hundred free of war. Are you and I so arrogant that we can assume that anything that happens in the span of our meager little lives can change the majestic habit of evolutionary progress?"

"Well, no," I said, "I don't suppose so. You think, then, dad, that we can get just so far and no farther—that civilization climbs up to its apex and then retreats again like the noble king of France?"

"Something like that," father smiled. "Is that a very discouraging thought to you?"

"Well, no," I said, "not so very. If one great cleanup would cure the world of everything that was the matter with it I suppose there wouldn't be much sense in propagating the species. There wouldn't be any real work for the species to do when they got propagated."

"Exactly." Father began to take an interest in me at this. "Life is a struggle for life. Remove the struggle and you have a static—a nonexistent world."

"I know it," I said; "but what use is it, then, father? What do we do it for, in your opinion—why all this getting up our muscle and then the end?"

"Our spiritual muscle?"

"Well, yes."

"There is usually something to use our muscle on in this world when we come into full use of our functions. Why wouldn't that argument hold good with things that are not temporal?"

"Well, it ought to," I said, thinking. "I think it does, father. Most everything we want is—somewhere. We want heaven and a life beyond; why isn't that somewhere, too?"

"I trust it is," father said; then, looking at me keenly, he added: "I've noticed one thing, daughter; since this war began my personal faith in things seems to be augmented rather than lessened. I am not a religious man in any sense of the word, but I am more nearly a religious man than I have been since I reached my maturity. How do you account for that?"

"I don't account for it," I said, "but I know what you mean. I say my prayers every night now. For a long time I didn't!"

"I said mine the other night," he said a trifle sheepishly. Then he changed the subject. I am somewhat superstitious about speaking of the life beyond. I used to think that it usually meant that some one was going to die, but I guess the great war has brought all those deeper subjects to be more a matter of general conversation than formerly. Besides, people are dying all the time, whether they are people you know or not.

Plattsburg! I am not one of those who has seen my own country first, or even last, or all the time. I've been to Palm Beach and to Chicago and to our cottage at the seashore, and most of my other traveling has been commuting. I've never seen any mountains but the Berkshire hills before these Adirondacks—these boiling, steaming, wrapped around in blue mist and gray vapor mountains, all intimately named and conversed about as if they were friends. They are not friends of mine yet. Under their distant shadow my husband lives in barracks and dresses in khaki and spends all his waking hours in a martial routine. I arrived on a Saturday morning accompanied by Mrs. Richardson, and did I see my Tommy's face waiting at the station to greet me? Well, I didn't expect to. I knew all about the rules and regulations up there, of course, but that didn't make them a whit easier to abide by.

"When is a husband not a husband?"

"When he's in military training." I repeat this silly and meaningless conundrum over and over to myself as if it had some real significance. After that I hum the melancholy chorus: "For the duration of the war. For the duration of the war." I did not tell my father why I had begun to say my prayers again, and I shall not tell Tommy even that I am saying them.

It was a wonderful reunion that night. I did not go to camp, but I went in next day, which was Sunday, and the day after that was the day that I went home again, leaving these mountains and the Wetherill house, which is the nondescript hotel that I stayed at, until the next tantalizing and hungry visit can be brought about.

"Tommy," I said, "I have brought you a dozen jars of marmalade that I made all myself, and two pounds of fudge." That was my greeting.

My husband took my hands and saw that I was trying not to shrink from him, but doing so nevertheless.

"Mother," he said to Mrs. Richardson, who stood looking at me wonderingly, "get out of here, will you? And forgive me?" Then he went down on his knees and grasped me in his strong arms. "What is it, Beth?" he said.

I laughed foolishly, and then I cried without any other reason. "I don't want there to be any war," I complained, "and I want you to come home to me if you love me—and want to—I can't help saying these things now this minute—but if you will hold me in your arms without letting me go for a little while I guess I can stop them."

"You are not well, Beth?" Tommy cried

"I have a husband," I said diplomatically and jokingly, "who is in the service, and even if I didn't want to keep myself in condition for myself, I would, of course, do so in order to be an example to him."

"Well, don't take this chap Hoover too literally, dear. Keep yourself nourished up to the blooming point no matter what happens."

"To the allies?" I suggested mischievously.

"To the angels," he said recklessly, "so long as you are as you should be."

"The war couldn't stop, could it, Tommy?" I said.

"No, dear, not without disaster to the whole civilized world."

"Well, my point is that if you feel that way about the angels——"

"There isn't any personal happiness possible to any of us now until this business is settled," Tommy said gravely. "It's a cruel way to feel, dear, but it's the only way."

"I know it," I said.

The point is now, do I know it? Father and Tommy—they feel it in their souls. It comes with their breath, they draw it in and out of the atmosphere as they breathe. It comes first. Does it come first with me? Could I measure it by my love for Tommy and say, "Save the world and let the love go?" Could any woman? Marcella Harcourt does now—now that there is no other way left for her to feel. Perhaps you could assent to a sacrifice after it was made for you. I don't know, but it seems preposterous to me that anybody could feel that way either before or after a thing like what has happened to her. I don't see why she cares what happens to the allies now.

[To be continued.]

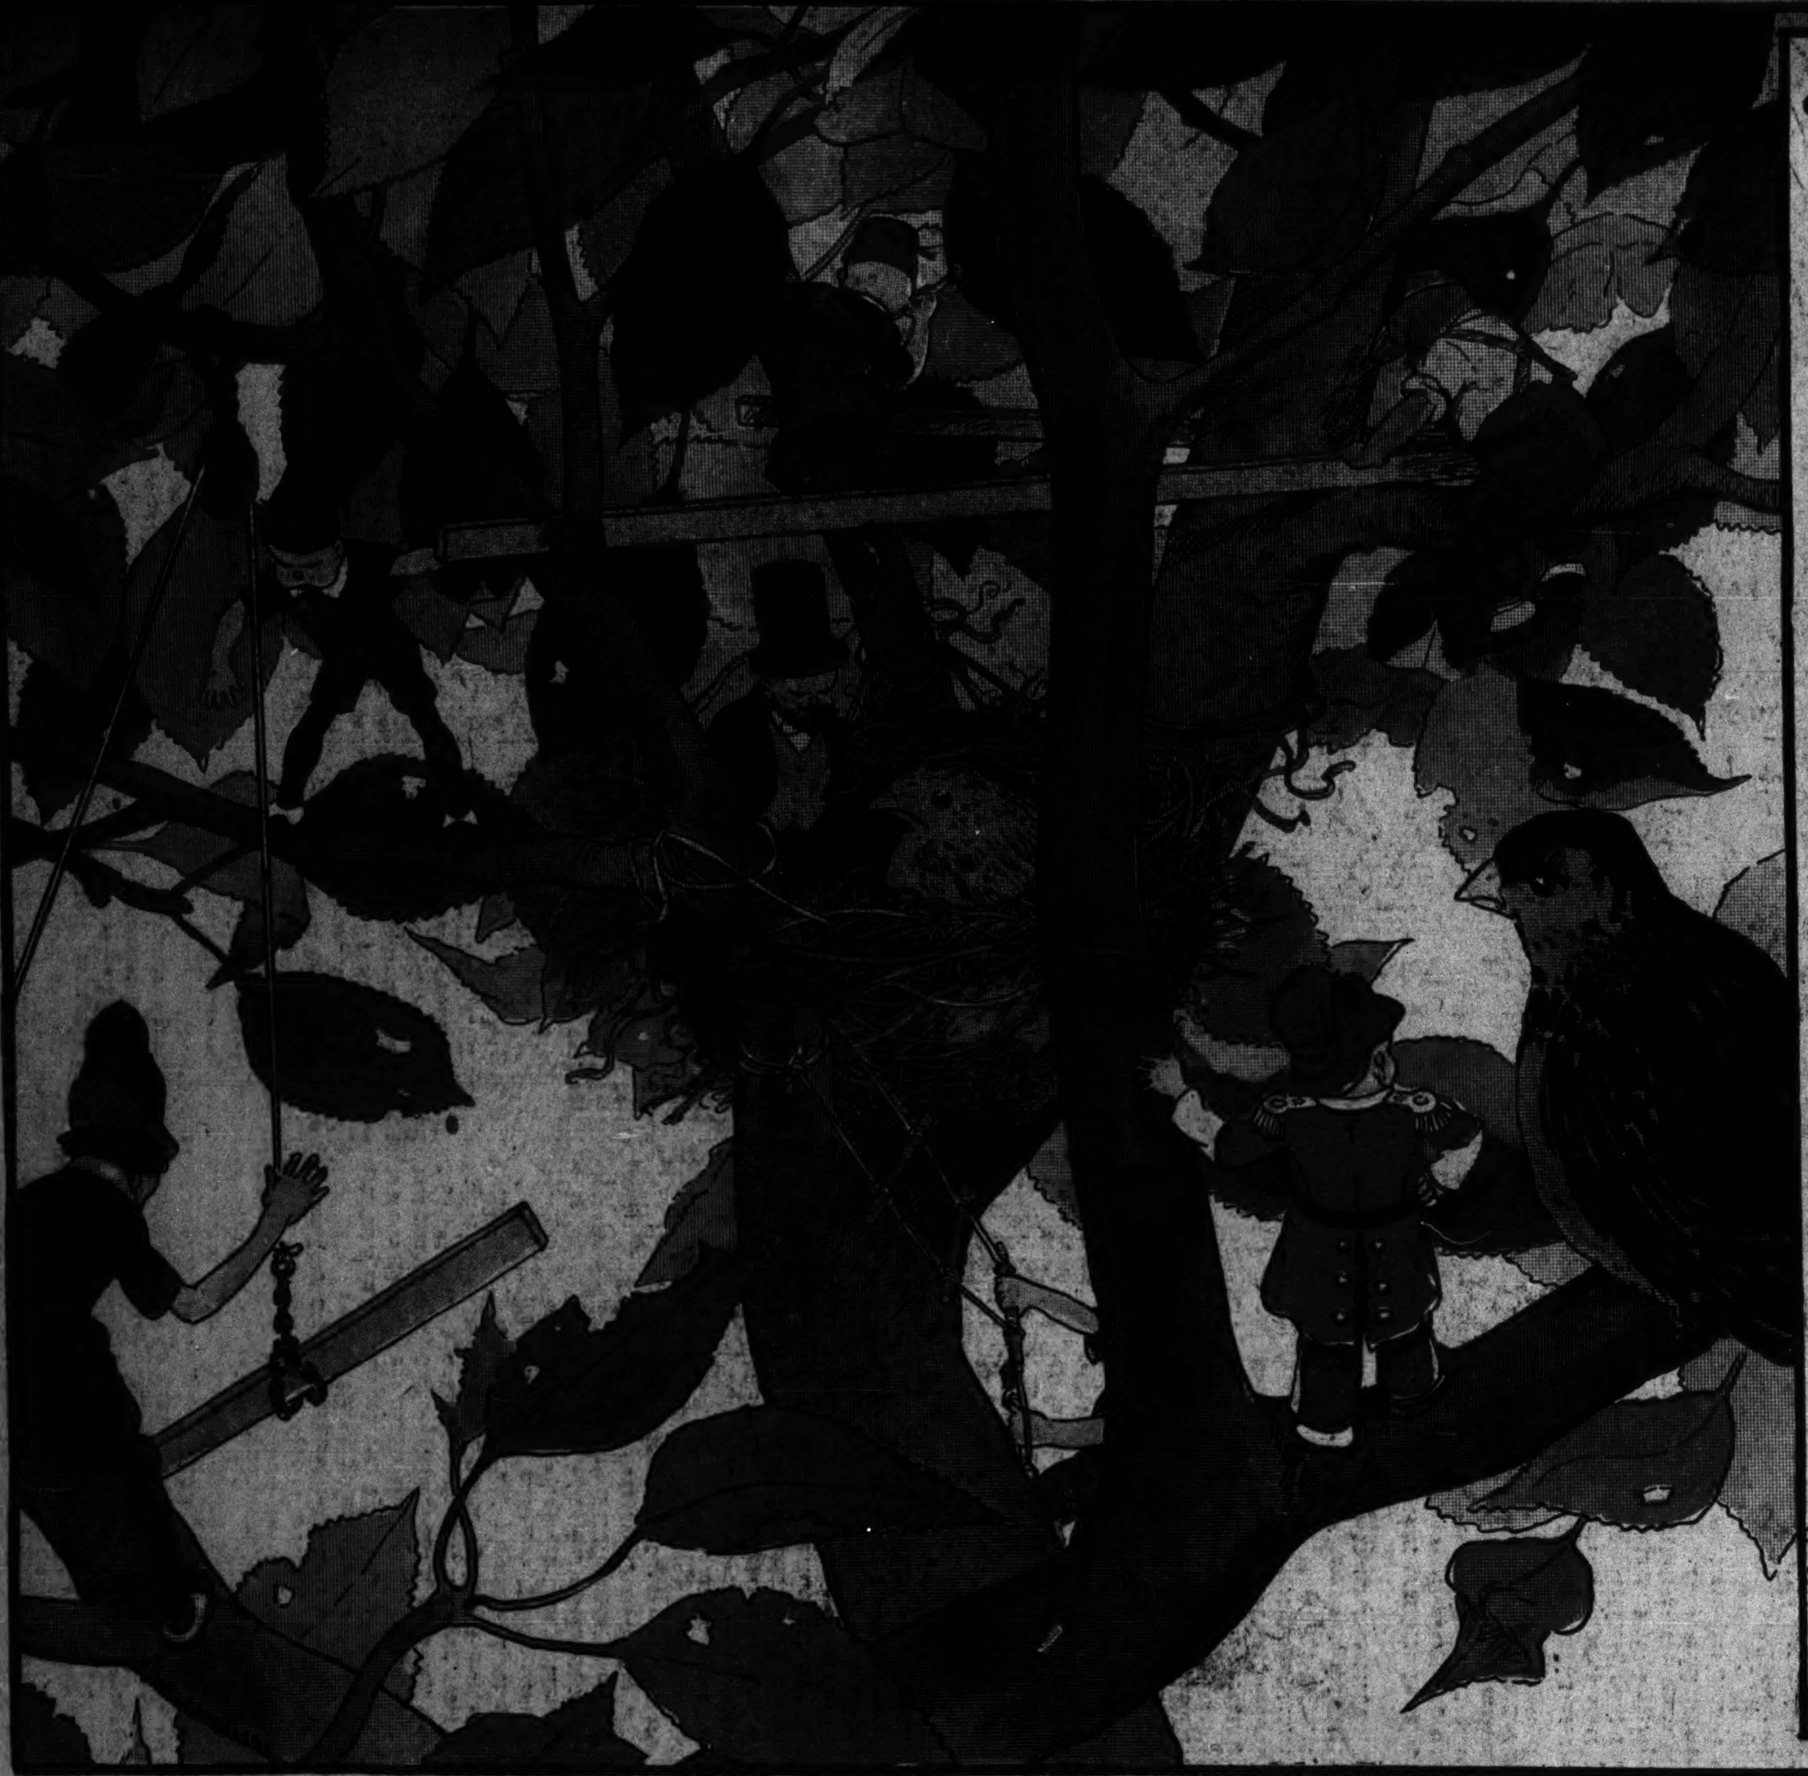
"When Tommy did come in he was boiling with rage. He said he couldn't explain, but Teddy Godfrey had got him into something that took a heluva lot of time and he could not get to us before. Would we forgive him? I could readily, and did."



THE TEENIE WEENIES.

THE DOCTOR ATTENDS A SICK BIRD.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

"DOCTOR!" shouted the Dunce one morning as he popped his head into the library, "t-t-there's a b-b-bird outs-s-side who wants to s-s-see you."

"All right," answered the Doctor, "tell him I'll be out in a minute."

"I think he's a her," said the Dunce, "but anyhow she's awfully excited and I think something terrible must have happened."

The Doctor stepped out onto the Teenie Weenie front porch and before the house he saw a bird in the act of shaking a tear off the end of her bill.

"Well, madam," said the Doctor, "what can I do for you?"

"Oh, Doctor," cried the bird, "please save my baby! I have lost two babies in the last month and please, oh, please, save my last baby for me."

"Be calm," my dear lady," said the Doctor, "and tell me all about the case."

"Well," began the mother, "I had three lovely babies this spring and about six weeks ago two of them were taken suddenly ill. I did everything I could for them, but they both died and only last night my last baby was taken sick. A squirrel, who lives in a tree near my nest, told me about you and I decided to come to you for help.'

"I'll get my medicine case and join you in a minute," said the Doctor, and running into the tiny house he soon returned.

"Jump right onto my back," said the bird, "and I'll take you to my baby in a jiffy."

The Doctor climbed onto the bird's back and in another minute he found himself sailing over the top of the trees so fast he could scarcely breathe. In a few minutes the bird landed on a bush and quickly hopped to a very pretty nest hidden beneath the green leaves. The Doctor slid off into the nest, where he found a young and very sick bird.

"Let's see your tongue," said the Doctor, but the poor bird was so sick he could hardly open his mouth and the Doctor was forced to take hold of his beak and help. Next the Doctor examined the bird's eyes and felt his pulse."

"What has the patient been eating lately?" asked the Doctor.

"I have given him only the nicest and fattest bugs and worms I could find," answered the mother.

"Madam," said the Doctor, "your baby is a very sick boy, but I think I can save his life if you will follow my advice."

"I'll do anything to save my boy," cried the poor mother.

"First," said the Doctor, "the patient must not have much to eat. He will have to have a very special diet which the Teenie Weenie Cook will prepare for him. The patient must be kept dry at all costs," continued the Doctor.

"I never leave the nest when it's raining," cried the mother bird, "and I keep him just as dry as can be."

"You keep the rain off your child, no doubt," said the Doctor, "but the nest gets wet and it must be kept dry, too."

The bird carried the Doctor back to the shoe house, where he soon made arrangements for taking care of the sick bird. Several of the Teenie Weenies carried lumber over to the bird's home, where they built a snug cover over the nest, while the Cook made angle-worm broth and cooked corn and rice for the sick bird.

After a week's diet under the Doctor's care the young bird showed great improvement and at the end of a month he was fully cured.

Easy-Mades for Vacation Days

By Corinne Lowe

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—As some one said to us the other day, war has taken the "d" out of wardrobe. What is left is warrobe and few of these. Consequently those of us who are looking forward to summer vacations are no longer looking forward to the two or three trunks which used to accompany us on our vacation pilgrimages. A suitcase is almost big enough to accommodate the few things that we need.

Yet because we are reducing summer wardrobes is no reason why the few frills that we do select should be without charm. Quite the reverse. The fact of it is, indeed, that most of the fashion authorities bear witness to the excellent and careful dressing of American women throughout the year that we have been at war.

"It stands to reason," remarks the buyer of a famous specialty shop during the course of a long talk, "that if a woman knows she can have only a few frocks she will select those few with the utmost care. The result is that this spring we have sold not only a higher priced line of frocks but also a line illustrating more careful thinking on the part of our public. Nowadays when a woman buys a frock she wants to be sure, first of all, that the material and workmanship are good, since therein lies true economy of dressing. Next, she picks out the thing that is most becoming to her type. As a result there has been all over the country a wave of simple, yet tasteful dressing. We have no one style, but a variety of styles. And we have the refreshing spectacle of the American woman turning away from the expensive 'cheap' things to the economical high priced clothing."

All this is immensely comforting. And now that vacation days lie before us it is pleasant to know that we do not have to "suffer a sea change into something new and strange." Satisfactory summers have been passed at the more retiring resorts in a bathing suit and in a number of shirtwaists and separate skirts. And this year even the pretentious hotel will call for no more elaborate wardrobe than is suggested by the four costumes pictured here.

First of all comes the bathing suit. Some years ago we were not particular about Mr. Neptune's feelings. Each season, however, the sun-mermaid becomes more dressy and elaborate. Yet, though in bathing suits we borrow all sorts of sophisticated touches from our ordinary clothes, the introduction is not effected at the cost of aquatic freedom. Indeed, along with more spectacular effects we get more and more freedom for real water stunts.

Take the type of bathing suit shown here, for instance. This is one of the popular combinations of taffeta and jersey and it is immensely chic—but, also, mark you, immensely duck, for the jersey bodice gives the greatest freedom for swimming and the tight knickers of jersey are not the old water-logged bloomers. The taffeta here is black, the jersey green. Black stitching finishes the jersey and there are bands of green jersey on the skirt. With this goes a cap of green rubber set off by a wreath of sea anemones in the same fabric.

Suits of black and navy taffeta are good this summer and we see shown many of these developed with apron panels back and front—an arrangement not only decorative but valuable because of the increased freedom. With the most of these modern bathing suits, decollette as they are, the beach cape of satin, jersey, rubberized material, or sataiga, that glorified alpaca invented by Rodier, are almost indispensable. As for caps, these range widely from Jack Tar's caps, these range widely from Jack Tar's own tam bonnet to various piquant Napoleonic or admiral hats. There is also a brand new bathing accessory. It is the knitting bag of rubber, often festively set off with rubber flowers.

We have a new term this summer. It is the calico-quette. At the extreme right here is one of these decorations dressed in a darling old fashioned calico where upon a brick-red background occur sprigs of yellow flowers. This is trimmed with cuffs, collar, pockets, and skirt bands of white pique, and there is seen a separate little coat of this white material. Narrow black ribbon laces the front and the crown of the sailor of starched yellow calico with its round yellow buttons is plain black satin.

There are dozens of such effective little morning frocks this year. Those of voile, gingham, cross-barred organdy, and even cretonne all have their claim upon us. But the brand new fad of the hour is calico and upon this fabric the designers have used up some of their cutest little ways.

Silk suits! We always got out a megaphone and cried it loudly. We always said there was nothing which fitted in so well all the hollow chinks of a summer wardrobe. Now we are glad to see that an obstinate public is at last heeding our advice. Silk suits of all descriptions have been coming out in the smartest Fifth avenue shops. Among these there are Roshanara crepes, taffetas, shantungs, and lately a strong impetus to Georgette crepe suits. The most serviceable of these is probably the model made up in natural colored rajah or shantung and we submit as the third costume a suit of this description trimmed with narrow grosgrain ribbon of the same shade. Note the simplicity of this suit—the plain little skirt, the simple little coat with its narrow girdle passing through slot seams, the pretty soft ruffles of the Georgette crepe waist. A costume which one may wear to country club, for morning call, and on the summer streets of the city! With this goes one of the smart new high crowned hats of dark blue taffeta faced and bound rajah and set off by wings of the same color.

Speaking of hats, many of the latest imports from Paris have irregular brims and the turbans, like the one shown here, show the cuffed brim. As to the sailor of rough straw, with its soft draped band of Georgette or silk, this was seen constantly during the early spring for wear with spring suits and with the serviceable dress of silk or serge. It is the same old story, however. The popularizing of any garment nearly always leads to loss of its exclusive flavor and now the smartest women are turning more and more to the tailored turban.

Evening gowns are now almost a lost art. Few women are buying them. In their place we find afternoon frocks of lace or net or point d'esprit combined with satin. Above all, however, come the pretty soft chiffons in neutral shades—beige, navy, black, mauve, and gray. These clinging chiffons round out afternoon and evening occasions. For the older woman they are the type of frock par excellence.

Along with these chiffons of subdued tint come various printed chiffons. Floral designs in black and white, gray and white, blue and white, combine charmingly with satin for the afternoon frock and there are also lovely striped effects such as we show to the left of this page.

THE calico-quette is here represented by a dark red background sprigged in yellow combined with white pique coat and trimming. Above, a bathing suit of black taffeta and green jersey turns a new trick by bringing up the folds of the skirt to the suspender-like cross pieces.

The woman is hard to suit who does not like shantung made up in its natural color and trimmed with grosgrain ribbon of the same tint. Here combined with a blue taffeta turban trimmed with rajah and wing of the rajah color.

The Barrie Scotsman who said, "What we think of in the trenches is chiffuns," could see his dream come true nowadays. Among the many various models of chiffon frocks we submit one of striped chiffon in turquoise blue and violet made up with shell-pink organdy and trimmed with rose colored estrich fringe and flowers.

A SOLDIER'S MOTHER IN FRANCE

BY RHETA CHILDE DORR

HOW YOUR MONEY IS SPENT.

JOHN SMITH of Ravenswood gave $5 to the Red Cross during the last drive. It was a big sum for a man with his responsibilities and a small income to part with, but John gave the money and all over the country men like him, women, too, and children, gave what they could to help the wounded and the desolated across the seas.

I want to tell John and the others how their money was spent, and I shall ask them first to go with me to a huge basement room of the Gare du Nord, the big north station of Paris. The room was taken over by the American Red Cross at the beginning of the spring offensive, March 21, and here for days and nights, terrible days, sinister nights, a stream of refugees from the invaded districts poured in and out, coming by train from Soissons, Compiegne, Montdidier, Albert, and from dozens of little villages and farms between Laon and Amiens.

The Red Cross fed and clothed and refreshed these refugees in that basement, loaded them on big motor trucks, and took them across the city to the Orleans or the Quai d'Orsay stations and saw them off to the sheltered south.

All on your money, you fortunate, generous, tender hearted givers. We who were over there in those first desperate days of spring had the privilege only of helping the Red Cross take care of the stricken men, women, and children who had fled before the German hordes for the second time since the war began.

Vividly before me I see that great basement room, the only kind of a place that is half way safe in Paris these days. It is night, or, rather, it is early morning, nearly 2 o'clock, and I have spent every minute of the time since 9 o'clock fitting shoes, your gift, to refugee children.

When I went on duty early in the evening there were five or six babies standing at the counter over the edge of which their little white, dirty, tired faces were barely visible, and their round black eyes were fixed enviously on a huge pile of shoes waiting to be distributed.

I picked up the smallest babe, a little boy of 4, and asked him if he needed shoes. "Oui, madame," he did, and stockings, too, for his feet were literally on the ground. I grabbed a bunch of stockings, found the right size, and explored the pile of shoes until that infant was fitted, and then I attended to the rest, for every child needed both shoes and stockings.

So, it appeared to me that night, did almost every child in France. They came on and on, some in their mothers' arms, some toddling along, some leading other children. I worked steadily, with only a pause now and then when a new train load came in and were fed.

Given Complete Outfits.

The shoes were new and they rubbed off, and soon my hands and face and big gingham apron were streaked and spotted with black. I was almost as dirty as the refugees, but still the children demanded shoes.

They forgot that they had endured agonies of fear and horror, they forgot the roar of the shells in the village streets. They forgot the hunger and thirst and the deadly weariness of the flight. Their little stomachs were full, they were warm and safe, and they had new stockings and new shoes on their feet.

They had more, for when my part was done other women took them in hand and gave them new shirts and gowns and the shiny black pinafores which every French child, boy as well as girl, looks upon as an indispensable article of dress. If you could have seen their smiles, heard their lisping words of gratitude, felt their warm little handclasps, O, you fortunate and generous givers, you would have been repaid a thousand, thousand times for your gift to the Red Cross.

Because the French rarely have large families, it must not be thought that they do not value children. They adore children, as a matter of fact, and their gratitude to the Red Cross for what was done for children during those days of flight and anguish was pathetic to see and hear.

Women came into the basement of the Gare du Nord in a condition of half nudity. When the storm burst they gathered up their babies, took what they could carry of household goods and treasures, and simply fled. Much of what they carried was lost by the wayside. Their clothes were rags, some of the rags were taken off by the mothers that the children might be kept alive, for the weather was cold and rainy. But when these poor women came into the Red Cross room their first thought was always for their babies.

"You have need of shoes yourself, madame," I said to more than one. She always answered, "Yes, but le petit first."

When you saw a woman who would not eat, who cared not at all for the new blouse or the warm coat they offered her, who wept unceasingly or wore a look of wild misery like insanity, you knew that she had lost her children in the flight. That happened not infrequently. Part of the money you gave the Red Cross is spent to find those lost children and bring them back to the desolate mother's breast.

Boy Joins Red Cross.

Late one night during that exciting period in March the workers at the Gare du Nord found a boy of 13 who had been separated early in the flight from his family. He had walked a distance of twelve and a half miles before he reached the railroad station, and he carried with him on that walk and on the journey to Paris two bags of feed for the horse, four or five pounds of beans in a paper sack, a cross cut saw, two axes, some harness, and a gas mask.

When the Red Cross workers discovered him he was about all in, but he was brave. He sat on his baggage and ate sandwiches and drank hot chocolate like a famished tramp.

He had an aunt and a grandmother in Paris, he said, but he did not know his aunt's married name. He knew the name of the street she lived on, though, and the next morning a Red Cross man went with the boy to the street, and by the simple process of calling at every house in every block finally located the aunt.

But that wasn't all. Eloi, his name was Eloi Beaussart, needed a job, and the Red Cross gave it to him. Now that game youngster wears a khaki uniform with A. R. C. on the collar, and works in a Red Cross canteen. When I came away Eloi's family had not yet been found, but he was serene and hopeful. The American Red Cross, in his opinion, can do anything if you give it time.

Your money did not wait until the refugees got to Paris before it helped them. In front of the Red Cross headquarters in the Place de la Concorde crowds gathered daily to see the great motor trucks being loaded with food to be sent up into the fringes of the war zone. Thousands of loaves of bread, tins of meat, condensed milk, chocolate, coffee, everything necessary and practical.

The Red Cross had a great many stations in the sections over which the Germans swept, and, while the workers in those stations were helping to evacuate whole populations, the workers in Paris were rushing supplies to feed them. With guns roaring and shrapnel bursting around them, the Red Cross camions went steadily on taking hope and relief and life to thousands of civilians and wounded soldiers.

In one station yard, waitin_ for trains to carry them to base hospitals down the line, the Red Cross found and succored 3,000 wounded French soldiers. In the town of Beauvais, almost the last habitable point near the war zone, a large number of sick civilians, mostly women and children, were found. There was no hospital left in the place, which had been shelled and largely evacuated, and to show you how promptly your money acts, I am going to tell you what the Red Cross workers did for the suffering population of Beauvais.

Some time in the early morning a hospital was established on paper. That is, it was decided to establish a hospital. At 10 o'clock that same morning a partially furnished house was rented. At 12 o'clock the house was in order, a surgery with full supplies was installed, two doctors, four nurses, and several helpers were at their post, and before the afternoon was half over forty patients were in the beds being treated and cared for.

Wouldn't you rather feel that you had helped do a job like that than to have another summer hat?

Saving the Babies.

In the quaint old city of Toul, through which the famous Rhine-Marne canal flows, and close to which our troops are holding the line against the Germans, I saw another hospital, a children's hospital, established and supported by Red Cross money. The 466 little children in this place came from towns and villages which have been bombarded with gas bombs, instruments of torture invented in hell especially for the German army.

Those bombs killed, suffocated to death, a large number of babies, but the Red Cross rescued many. There in that hospital on the hill above Toul 466 children have had their tortured lungs cleared of the poisonous stuff, and their anguished little bodies have been brought back to ease.

Wouldn't you be happier helping a gassed French child back to life than to buy a box of expensive cigars?

There is not room enough in a newspaper article, or in a dozen of them, to tell half of what the Red Cross has done and is doing in France alone in this war.

Twenty-three hundred people, doctors, nurses, canteen workers, business men, social workers, and others, are enrolled in France. Twenty hospitals, seventy-six dispensaries, and several sanitariums are in operation. For wounded soldiers of the allies the Red Cross supplies nearly 4,000 hospitals. It has a model hospital train; it has innumerable dressing stations, canteens, health stations, sewing rooms for the destitute. Nearly 3,000,000 soldiers a month are served in Red Cross canteens alone.

In Paris there are thirteen canteens always busy serving French soldiers on leave. In Bourg there is a canteen where thousands of our soldiers going to Aix-les-Bains and Chambery for their vacations got a real American home breakfast. I heard many soldiers speak enthusiastically of that breakfast, served by the Red Cross women, but purchased by mothers, fathers, and friends of American soldiers in the United States.

Those sons of ours who are being rapidly transported to France to join the hundreds of thousands already there soon will be training behind the battle lines in Lorraine, Picardy, the Aisne. Soon after that they will be fighting, the fight to death if need be, to clear the world of that evil thing, war.

REAL LOVE STORIES

PRIZE IN THE CHEESE BOX.

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

BELLE was the daughter of the postmaster in a little village snuggled down in the dairying and cheese making part of Wisconsin. She was very pretty, but so shy that she refused to meet any of the interested young men in the neighboring city who had sought introductions to her through the aunt she occasionally visited there.

Her shyness stimulated their interest, but she always evaded them. One day she was in the village postoffice, helping her father's clerk distribute mail, when a very fine team and a shiny top buggy drew up to the store platform and one of the most persistent of thwarted city youths alighted and came toward the store. Belle saw him coming. "Hide me—hide me," she begged the clerk.

There was a big cheese box, in which the prize mammoth cheese had been shipped to the state fair, standing near the counter, sent back empty for next year's shipment of another mammoth cheese. Quickly the clerk snapped off the lid and helped Belle in, then closed it down loosely. Belle, crouching within, was horrified to hear the mischievous clerk call out:

"Hello, Mr. F. Come back here a minute." Mr. F. responded and swung himself lightly over the counter.

"Here's a box somebody left for you. Better see what's in it."

Mr. F. immediately lifted the lid and Belle sprang up indignantly. The clerk introduced them and there was nothing for the startled and embarrassed victim to do but to shake hands and smile.

That was the beginning, and they have been married for sixteen years, and the clerk, who is a retired farmer, loves to tell the story. J. H.

Camp Stories Contest.

Your son, your brother, your husband, or your sweetheart in the service undoubtedly has told you some amusing incident that has occurred in his camp. Undoubtedly, too, there are ever so many stories originating in camp that are still untold. This contest is especially open to the soldier himself if he has a good camp story to tell. It is open also to every one who has been told a good camp story of actual happening. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Camp Stories Editor, Chicago Tribune.

On a Sortie.

A well known army officer tells this one on himself. He was inspecting one of the new draft camps, and came to a place where there should have been a sentry. He could see none there, so looked around a bit. Finally he spied a soldier sitting alone in a corner of the fence playing solitaire.

"Do you know who I am?" he asked impressively.

"No," said the soldier, intent on his cards.

"Well," thundered the officer, "I am a sort of a brigadier general."

"All right," replied the soldier; "wait until I finish this game and I'll give you a sort of a salute." C. G.

Well and Happy.

Some friends of ours whose son has recently arrived in France, received what they thought was a nice long letter from him. To their surprise on opening it they found almost an entirely blank page with a heading "Dear Folks," and down at the bottom, "Love to all, from Philip." The censor had used ink eradicator on the whole contents and substituted, "Your son is well and happy, but he's too darn newsy." L. B. B.

Draft on Dad.

A young fellow of our town who is in coast artillery work and stationed at Fort Dade, Fla., wrote to his father: "Dear Dad, I wish you could send me a cool breeze, for down here there is only a screen door between us and hell." M. O.

Uniform Comes First.

There was a long line of people at the box office of a theater in Chattanooga, Tenn., near Fort Oglethorpe, waiting to buy tickets. Among the crowd was a young man dressed in the uniform of a camp librarian in the service of the American Library association. He was near the end of the waiting line.

Presently a fat, jolly looking old fellow, who was standing just before him, turned and said, "Here, you're a soldier, take my place," whereupon the supposed soldier explained that he was not a soldier but a civilian in the employ of the library association.

"Don't make a bit of difference," said the old man, somewhat gruffly, "any fellow with a uniform on is better than I am—step up." And he did. C. O.

Catchy Stuff.

An excited lieutenant entered the captain's tent. "Have you got a pencil and some paper?" he hurriedly questioned.

"Will fly paper do?" asked the amused captain.

"Yes; it's for the aviators," retorted the underofficer. E. G.

Mess Call.

Our regiment was drawn up for parade. The band had passed in review, playing a snappy march, "retreat" had been sounded, and the flag had been lowered to the crashing strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner," and, after the prescribed ceremonies had been gone through with by the field officers, the regimental adjutant stood up in his stirrups and commended: "Attention-n to-o orders!" Not a sound broke the stillness, as he unfolded the papers in his hand.

Then from the mess kitchen far across the parade ground a loud voice was clearly heard to bawl: "Hey, Pete, Fer Pete's sake, hurry up with them spuds!"

Some one said that the colonel's horse smiled—but then, the colonel couldn't see his face. R. O.

His Share.

My soldier boy in camp writes me the following story: A soldier was in the habit of getting candy from home, and of course had to divide it among his comrades. In his last letter home he said: "Thanks for the chocolates; the one I got was fine." V. R.

* *

Subject to Chills.

A sailor at Great Lakes reported at sick call one morning, and the doctor, not finding anything wrong with him, said, "You're not sick."

"O, no," was the reply, "I'm not sick now, but when I go on guard I get chills." V. M.

Never Looks Behind.

The captain, walking between the ranks, saw that one of the men had a shine on the toes of his shoes, but that the heels were caked in mud.

"How is this," he asked, "didn't you notice that your heels were dirty?"

"A good soldier never looks behind," was the reply.

He helped serve Sunday dinner as a result. E. J.

Rewarding a Hero.

An American hero who had killed a dozen Germans or so was pointed out to a young French girl. She rushed up to him and said: "Let me kiss the hand that killed those Germans." "You surely are a chump," said his partner, "why didn't you tell her you bit them to death?" L. S.

Dodging the Draft.

A man in the draft who would much rather have stayed at home complained of having poor eyesight. After being put through the eye test the doctor told him to go in the next room for further examination. The man gave a sigh of relief. When he came to the door he noticed a black thread running across and dodged it, whereupon the eye doctor said, "Come back, cutey; you're all right." F. G.

Easy Money.

Two recruits at Fort Logan were discussing religious questions. One accused the other of not knowing the Lord's prayer, whereupon the one accused bet $5 he could repeat it. The bet was taken and he proceeded: "Now I lay me down to sleep; I pray the Lord my soul to keep." "You win," cried the first recruit, take the five. I never thought you knew it." N. C. R.

* *

Careless.

First sergeant—"Have you a belt?"

Private—"No, sir."

First sergeant—"Report to quartermaster for a new one and don't forget to tell him to charge you for the one you lost. I'll stop this carelessness."

Private—"All right, old top; but I loaned you the belt about two months ago." S. C. S.

His Trigger Finger.

A young lad appeared before the exemption board with the right index finger badly bent. The final question was: "How was it before it became bent?" The lad, forgetting himself for a moment, straightened it out and replied: "Like this." J. Z.

Sure of Promotion.

All the privates work for promotion and one boy was sure he was going to get a promotion, because the other morning while the soldiers were marching the sergeant said that every one was out of step except him. J. C.

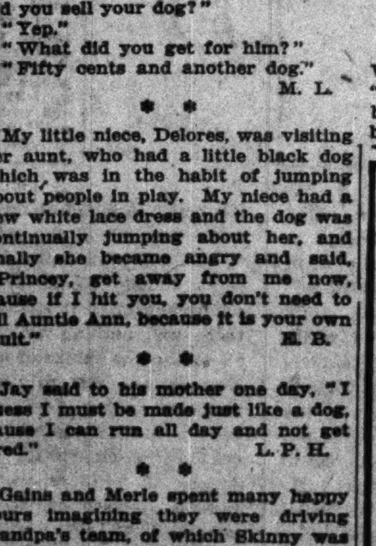
Cad had a dog that was the pest of the family. One day, to their extreme delight, he announced that he was going to sell his dog. After his being gone up town for a couple of hours they heard him coming down the walk, whistling. His brother, Boyd, ran out and called, "Well, Cad, did you sell your dog?"



"Yep."

"What did you get for him?"

"Fifty cents and another dog." M. L.

My little niece, Delores, was visiting her aunt, who had a little black dog which was in the habit of jumping about people in play. My niece had a new white lace dress and the dog was continually jumping about her, and finally she became angry and said, "Princey, get away from me now, 'cause if I hit you, you don't need to tell Auntie Ann, because it is your own fault." "Give him back!" said mother.

"Here, take him!" said Gains disgustedly, as with a gesture he restored the imaginary Skinny to his owner.

Immediately the wailing ceased. C. B. B.

HOW TO EAT CARROTS.

AT the first taste of ground carrot, heated up with cream and baked with crumbs, some one to whom it was given as a test said answer to the question, "What is it?" "O, it is sweet corn with carrot!" there was no corn in it, only the carrot, cream, and crumbs.

Grated raw carrot served on a lettuce leaf with French dressing is scarcely distinguishable from the lettuce. Like the lettuce and more than the lettuce, it is cool and refreshing to the taste, just as are watermelon and other watery products of the soil.

Rightly grown vegetables bring us what they do of health just because of the precious water they contain, water in which are dissolved the minerals we need in their minute quantities for our health. We need the water, too. Vegetables must have plenty of water to grow to wholesomeness, and little water for their cooking, if they are to yield us the most precious water on the face of the earth. No mineral spring water can surpass this.

Carrot pulp used as a filler for jams and marmalades, if rightly prepared, is hardly distinguishable from the pulp of the orange and lemon, or more especially the rind of these fruits, with which it is combined. It contains a little more cellulose than the fruity pulp, but not much more, perhaps, than that of the peel.

Made Palatable with Cream.

Carrot in a pudding or pie may easily pass for something other than it is, or under some circumstances [illegible] about what it is. Everything depends on the way it is treated. A carrot pudding served with a sauce made of syrup will show up what it is made of to the bluntest taste. But served with cream, the most exacting might be deceived, and even knowing what it was one might hardly be able to tell the carrot from the cereal with which it was combined, both being flavored with some fruit like the raisin.

Carrots are sweetish and will take a bit of sweetening to advantage, as do peas and sweet corn, but add more than a little, or a strong sweetening, and they lose their delicacy, as they do utterly when their sweetness is dissolved in a lot of water, especially a water in which corned beef is boiling. Then they become nearly detestable. It is a queer thing, though, that the "calico hash" made of these same "boiled dinner" vegetables is improved by a little of the spoiled carrot chopped.

Cream of Carrot Soup.

By the way, a rather delectable combination is carrot pie, with banana sliced over it, with whipped cream topping all. When no cream is to be had for a carrot pudding a hard sauce is the next best thing, as far as I know. There are good ways of cooking carrots without milk or cream, but with one or the other of these used in its preparation, this vegetable may rise in favor until it wins the place it deserves on our tables as a delicate, highly individual, and desirable food. Because it can be grown so easily and abundantly, it is our duty to make the most and best use of it we can in these days.

A cream of carrot soup when prepared with due regard for the inherent qualities of this vegetable is one of the pleasantest soups that may come to our table. It can be made at any time from carrot cooked in a basic way, that of the glazed carrot, that particularly fits it for garnishments or for rectifying almost any soup, whether of beans or celery tops, that for some reason lacks character.

In preparing a company dinner it seems to be always wise to have cooking a little pot of glazed carrots. If anything goes wrong with the soup here is base for a new one, or for toning up what we have, and the new one can be prepared in ten minutes or so. Glazed carrots are a pretty garnish for fish or meat or vegetable, or pretty to use as a sole occupant of the vegetable dish. They are prettiest served on a small platter when used alone and will take a green garnish nicely.

To prepare glazed carrots, scrape and slice the raw roots and put them in a small kettle, which can be tightly covered with one small onion, about a teaspoon of sugar or a little more per cup of carrots, a somewhat generous piece of butter, perhaps a tablespoon per cup, and finally about four tablespoons of cold water per cup. When the carrots are tender they may be turned into the frying pan and all the water rapidly cooked away. They may be browned a bit if to taste.

Too Much Water Spoils Flavor.

Carrots in particular give up a great deal of their flavor to any quantity of water in which they are wrongly cooked. A little, and that ultimately cooked away, around them is the best way to cook them, even if they are to be served in a cream sauce, or perhaps because they are to be served in such a sauce.

Creamed carrots may be an abomination if the delicate flavor is too much diluted. Even the strong lemon juice is flat if too much water is added to it, and the more delicate flavors and lighter strength of vegetable juices are made flatter yet by watering. In a sense this flavor is made fairly blue with a lot of water as milk is made blue in flavor by watering.

This point is one to preach about, almost to swear about, for the reason that vegetables are so often wasted by being made to flavor up, as best they can in proportion to their strength, a lot of water which is thrown away. Potatoes, even, are half ruined by this dilution of their soluble elements.

A way of keeping intact their solubles, other than that of cooking the carrots in a bit of water, is to steam them in their skins and then to mash or bake or fry according to our taste. With the back of a silver knife the skin rubs off as easily as does the skin of a boiled beet. Just mashed and seasoned well, these make a delicate vegetable, but some people like to further cook them, making them like glazed sweet potatoes for one thing, and some add cheese and then sauté them.

Carrot as a Flavoring.

When a large amount of carrots must be prepared for cooking it may be best to drop them into boiling water for ten minutes before breaking the skin. The skin then rubs off easily with the back of a knife. This is mostly the method used in canning carrots and also in drying them. This latter process is accomplished in a short time and carrots so prepared are likely to become increasingly serviceable, especially for flavoring.

And as to flavoring, the experienced cook finds the carrot as indispensable as the onion, especially for what we call the stronger meats, like mutton. It may give just that necessary fillip to a stew that is so much more wholesome than any pickle while making the absence of the pickle unnoticed by those who tear down their digestive powers, by slow degrees, with vinegary foods. The vegetable loaf needs the carrot. Dried peas when cooked for a purée need the carrot as much as they need the onion, and so do beans. In any bed of vegetables on which a meat like a pot roast is cooked the carrot is a necessary ingredient. A piece of carrot, if not a whole root, is always to be found in the soup bunch. Julienne carrots are beautiful in white sauces for fish.

By the way, a great many people put carrots through a meat grinder, whereby a part of the pulp is discolored and there is almost surely waste of that precious yellow juice which our grandmothers used for coloring the butter. It is probably a better thing to use for coloring our oleo than anything else, if we must use something, but why use anything? At any rate, we know exactly what it is, and that it has not the nature of a preservative, nor has it been preserved.

Recipe for Carrot Pudding.

In England and her provinces the carrot has been used in various puddings and savories for a hundred years or two. Recipes for these are to be found in many English cook books. A recipe for a carrot pudding I know to be excellent and one highly popular at present I find in a clipping from the Housewife for April, 1910. It was credited to Mrs. Hiram C. Treffry, Hawtrey, Ontario, Canada. It reads:

"One cup each of granulated sugar, seeded raisins, currants, grated carrot, grated raw potato, and chopped suet, one and one-half cups of flour, one teaspoon of baking powder, and a pinch of salt. Mix all together and steam for three hours. Serve with hard or liquid sauce such as accompanies plum pudding."

I say serve with cream if you want to appreciate this pudding to the full, and if you want to serve it to people who have had in the past some reason for disliking corrots. The author prefaces her recipe with the following statement: "This pudding can be made a day or a week before serving and be steamed hot when wanted. It finds favor with all who try it and is digestible, also more like a plum pudding than a vegetable one."

Yes, it keeps well if you keep it where it would not mold.

THINKING OF THEIR MOTHERS.

WHAT the faith of mothers means to soldier sons in the hour of battle is touchingly illustrated in the following letter to a Chicago mother:

"SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE.—Dear Mamma: Today is Mother's day. Gen. Pershing has so much commemorated it that he has issued a special order asking all men and officers of the American expeditionary forces to write home to their mothers today, and so I am writing home to you today that since I have come over here and separated myself from all home ties I begin to realize all that you have done for me and I feel that at this time I am able to appreciate and be grateful for your numerous sacrifices and love you have given me.

"Today is also the feast of blessed Joan of Arc, the girl who from her heavenly vision was ordained to lead the French to victory. On this, her feast day, the world is once more engaged in a war of freedom, and it is the thought of our mothers at home and what they think their boys to be that will inspire us Americans to save the civilized world and win a true and Godlike victory over those forces of darkness, who are inspired solely by lust of conquering and ambition.

"I hope, mamma, that I live up to what you think me to be; that the small part I take in this great work will be well done, and that I will be a credit to you and papa. When you pray for me, pray that the spirit of Joan of Arc may be imbued in me and that if my time ever comes that in a supreme emergency I will be a real American and do my job well, for "up the line" a little band of Americans are doing that same job and doing it well, and all I ask is that when it comes my turn to go up the line I will not fail and be as my brethren who at this moment are living up to those glorious American traditions of old. With lots of love, your son. J. C.

Patriotism in School.

I am one of the teachers in an eighth grade of 150 pupils in the immediate vicinity of Milwaukee. More than half the names in my class book are German.

Last fall I felt about carefully to ascertain how many of those children came from anti-American homes. The number was unpleasantly large. As a history teacher I felt that my opportunities for instilling patriotism were unusually large. I did not "rub it in" to those I believed to be anti-American. In fact, I began work upon the supposition that their loyalty was unquestioned.

On the reading table in the assembly room we have THE TRIBUNE and a large number of the decidedly patriotic magazines. In these I mark the articles most worth while and a strong article is read aloud in class. We take time during the class period every day to discuss the big things in the morning papers. And seldom a day passes that some little lesson of loyalty or story of patriotism does not come in on the lesson.

I helped to organize thrift stamp societies in our school and we now have a 100 per cent membership. I mustered up the cartoonists in the class and every week we have new and clever cartoons boosting the thrift stamps up in the various rooms. I organized and am chaperoning the Eighth Grade Girls' Knitting club and helped the boys in collecting books for the soldiers. Every pupil in my classes was encouraged and urged to sign the garden pledge. I am instigating and hope to organize a Junior Red Cross in our city.

My school work has been more interesting this year than ever before. My pupils are just full of young American enthusiasm. I have no anti-Americans among them now, and I have reason to believe that much of our patriotism has leaked out and been taken home with the pupils.

Upon learning that I had taken the civil service examination a business man said to me the other day: "I believe you are doing better work for Uncle Sam right here than you would if you go to Washington. H. H.

Suet Saves Lard.

If you will buy at the market each week a piece of suet costing 5 or 10 cents you will be surprised at the saving in lard and in other cooking oils or substitutes. Meat, potatoes, etc., may be fried in it or it may be browned and gravy made of it. Put through the food chopper, it may be used in cookies or gingerbread. In baked beans it can scarcely be distinguished from pork. W. O.

Relieves Home Nurse.

My mother, who is a trained nurse, has been doing her part by nursing. This last winter she has taken a number of cases, some just to relieve the nurse in charge a few hours a day, and others on twenty-four hour duty. Although her income is small, every cent she has made has been saved, and instead of buying any new clothes this spring she bought a bond. From the money for her food she has saved for thrift stamps until she has a card full. And although her eyes have been in constant pain for the last six years, she is diligently knitting for the Navy league. Surely this is working for Uncle Sam! M. H.

Working in Home Charities.

I went to the headquarters of the United Charities, made inquiries, and found that the need for volunteer helpers in that organization is great. I asked to be assigned to a district, and the following day I registered at the United Charities office in that district as a volunteer.

I give two days a week there from 9 until 5 and one day a week for the same number of hours at the downtown offices of another of our big charitable organizations.

In caring for the needy and unfortunate within our gates, we are helping to win the war just as surely as if the same number of hours were spent in rolling bandages or making surgical dressings. F. D. S.

How Small Savings Help.

At the time we purchased our first bond I had been in the habit of visiting the loop each week, accompanied by my 14 year old daughter. On each visit we had our shoes polished at one of the shoe stands; we also had our heads shampooed once each month, which cost $2 more. We decided to do this work ourselves, thereby saving $4.17 monthly. Seeing that we were economizing, my husband gave up his four times per week visit to the barber's for a shine and shave, which cost $1 weekly, and took a pleasure in doing for himself what he had heretofore paid others to do. I also agreed to press his clothes instead of sending them to the tailor's, thus saving another $1 per week and making our total savings $12.50 each month.

Our first bond is paid for and we are making regular payments on additional Liberty bonds.

"If this war lasts five years more, we will save nearly $1,000 by this little economy," said father. As follows:

		Interest.
First bond, already paid for.	$100.00	$ 4.00
First year's sav'gs for bonds	150.00	10.87
Second year's savings........	150.00	16.74
Third year's savings........	150.00	23.12
Fourth year's savings........	150.00	29.50
Fifth year's savings........	150.00	35.87
	$850.00	$119.60
		$969.60

And we have only begun to economize. C. H.

"WARTIME RECIPES"
The Chicago Tribune

IN the rotogravure section of this issue appears the seventh set of successful recipes, which means that seventy of the 120 ten dollar prizes are already awarded.

But it means, too, that there are still fifty ten dollar prizes to be awarded for the best wartime recipes—recipes based on the meat, wheat, fat, and sugar saving policy of the United States food administration.

It means, farther, that these fifty ten dollar prize winners (maybe you are one of them), have an equal chance with the seventy prize winners (whose names have appeared in this issue and the six preceding Sunday issues of The Tribune), of getting one of the six capital prizes. You have the same chance of winning the $500 prize or one of the other five in amounts from $300 to $25.

So don't hesitate about sending in your recipe! You cannot afford to let that recipe lie idly on the pantry shelf when it may bring you in a $500 prize, can you? Send it this week. If you leave it until next you will still have forty chances, to be sure, but why not send it when you have fifty chances to win a prize?

Ten more prize winning recipes are published in the rotogravure section today, and ten will appear each Sunday until the 120 prizes have been distributed.

No recipes mailed after midnight of Monday, July 1, will be considered. The $10 prizes are awarded immediately after their publication in "The Tribune." The six capital prizes will be paid at the expiration of the contest—July 21. No one person will be paid more than one $10 prize, but one may earn a $10 prize and one of the six capital prizes.

All prizes will be paid in Liberty bonds and United States thrift stamps. No recipes will be returned. Upon payment of $10 by "The Tribune" each recipe shall become the property of "The Tribune." You may send in as many recipes as you wish. Address them plainly on one side of the paper, adding your name thereto, and mail to Wartime Recipes, "Chicago Tribune."

The judges in this contest are Miss Jane Eddington, food expert of "The Tribune"; Harry A. Wheeler, food administrator of Illinois, and Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman of the National Council of Defense.

Better Housekeeping

By Mary Bronson Hartt

EASIER WAYS IN KITCHEN.

TO SERVE leftovers of lemon or coffee jelly, warm the broken molds over hot water, or on the back of the stove just enough to liquify the jelly. Remold in pretty low glasses. The flavor suffers if the jelly boils or gets really hot.

To use beef suet with lard for shortening, fry out the suet in the oven, mix with the lard, and keep stirring till the mixture sets. After that the suet cannot harden, being too thoroughly blended with soft lard.

To clean iron dripping pans left in a closed house till badly rusted, grease them inside and out and let them burn off on the stove. The only flaw in the process is the smoke and smell of their burning.

To disguise the odor of onions in the breath, crunch a few coffee berries or nibble parsley.

Avoid "onion weeps" when pickling by leaving peeled onions one night in brine before chopping or slicing.

To moderate the fierceness of the oven when baking beans, replace the lid of the bean pot with a saucerful of water till the fire is gentled to the proper point. This is an adaptation of the ancient method of cooling an oven for cake by introducing a dish of water.

To cut fresh bread without crushing it into sogginess. Heat the bread knife.

To warm rolls without moistening, screw them up tight in a paper bag so they can't part with their moisture in the oven. Unless stale when bought, they should come out crisp and tender.

To rejuvenate stale bread, sprinkle the slices lightly, wetting the crust more than the crumb, and brown quickly in the oven. Butter before serving. Or freshen a whole leaf by moistening all over in cold water and set in the oven till the crust is dry and the crumb heated through.

To prevent baked custards from sticking to the cups, the usual rule is to wet the cups with cold water before the custard is poured in. Done so, custard cups sometimes are hard to wash. Try buttering them instead.

To squeeze a lemon without a reamer, roll the fruit till it is soft. Jab it with a silver fork and squeeze out the juice, leaving the seeds inside. This is an economical way to extract a few drops of juice for a mayonnaise, as the stabbed lemond doesn't dry up like a cut one.

To open a cocoanut, warm it in the oven. The shell shatters afterward with a light blow and the meat comes free from the shell.

To clear candied honey, melt in a sealed jar set in hot water. The wax forms a film on top.

To reheat cooked food from the delicatessen, don't put fish cakes or croquettes into a mild oven and slowly raise the temperature. They may sour. Heat quickly.

To hurry a slow oven, heat one or more stovelids on the top of the range or over a gas flame and set them under dishes baking in the oven. Hurry a gas oven by opening the door after the burners have been lighted to let moisture escape.

To clear fat used for frying, buy a penny sheet of filter paper at the druggist's. Force a square of it into the throat of a funnel, pour in the fat, set the funnel in a jam jar, and leave it to drain through at leisure. Cheesecloth will remove large particles of burned food from fat, but will not clear it so perfectly as the paper.

To cut butter with an even surface, wrap a scrap of oiled paper over the knife. To spread butter on thin bread, keep dipping the knife in hot water.

To drain doughnuts, string them on long wooden knitting needles laid across the top of a broad dish. They do not crush each other while hot.

LEARN A LITTLE AND SAVE A LITTLE EVERY DAY

By Elizabeth O. Hiller

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup [one-half pint]. The half pint measuring cups are the standard measuring cups used in modern cooking.

TIMELY AND VARIED RECIPES.

THE fresh green vegetables now offered in the market are especially fine in flavor. This is particularly true of the Texas onions and the new beets. I am sure they will be found most pleasing if prepared as directed below:

Texas Onion Relish.

Peel and thinly slice the round, flat white Texas onions that are now plentiful in the markets. Cover with cold water; let stand until crisp. Separate the rings, drain as dry as possible. Pile moundlike on a shallow serving dish (chop platter), and for four large onions allow one-fourth cup of sugar, one teaspoon of salt, one-eighth teaspoon of black pepper, and one-fourth teaspoon of paprika. Sift these ingredients together twice. Pour over the onions one-fourth cup of tarragon vinegar, then sprinkle seasonings over the top of mound. These onions are almost as sweet and crisp as the Bermuda onions and make an appetizer that is worthy the attention of those of most epicurean taste.

Tuna Salad.

Mix two cups of tuna with one cup of celery hearts cut in small pieces, one canned pimento drained, rinsed with cold water, dried, and cut in small pieces, or one green pepper finely chopped. Marinate with French dressing and set in a cold place one or more hours. Drain, then mix well with two chopped hard cooked eggs and mayonnaise, pile in a pyramid in the center of a nest of well bleached chicory or lettuce leaves. Sprinkle with one-quarter cup of finely chopper deviled olives.

Cheese and Smoked Whitefish Sandwiches.

Work one cream cheese and one teaspoon of beef extract and one-half teaspoon of worcestershire sauce to a smooth consistency. Remove the skin from one smoked whitefish, lift the meat from the backbone, and finely mince it. Spread thin slices of brown or rye bread with cheese mixture and sprinkle over the minced fish. Press together in pairs. Spread bread thinly with cooked salad dressing before spreading with cheese mixture.

Bean and Mashed Potato Croquettes.

One cup of red kidney beans, two-thirds cup of mashed potato, ½ teaspoon of salt, ⅛ teaspoon of pepper, 1⅓ teaspoons of Worcestershire sauce, 1 tablespoon of grated or finely chopped onion, 1 tablespoon of white of egg, buttered crumbs. Wash, pick over beans, cover with cold water. Cover and let soak over night. Cook in the water in which they soaked until soft, add more water as needed. Drain and reserve liquor. Rub beans through a puree strainer. There should be one cup of pulp packed solidly. Add beans and hulls remaining in strainer to reserved liquor and use in the preparation of bean soup. To the pulp add mashed potato and remaining ingredients in the order given. Mix thoroughly. Shape in cork shaped croquettes, roll in crumbs, egg and crumbs, and fry a golden brown in deep hot fat or shape in cutlets, dip in flour, and saute in butter or drippings. Serve with brown sauce as a substitute for meat.

These croquettes are dainty and yet wholesome. They may be served as the chief dish at luncheon or supper. This recipe makes eight croquettes.

New Cabbage Hollandaise.

Remove the outside coarse leaves from a head of new cabbage; cut in quarters and remove the hard core. Cover with cold water and let stand until crisp. Drain, cut in rather coarse shreds. Cover wth boiling water and cook until tender, drain in colander, return to saucepan, and add (for one quart of cabbage) one cup of cream; heat to boiling point, then add one teaspoon of salt, one-half teaspoon of paprika, one tablespoon of butter or substitute, and two-thirds cup of grated cheese. Let simmer until the cheese is milted, then moisten with white sauce, mixing the sauce well with the cabbage. Let heat throughout over hot water and serve immediately.

New Beets in Drawn Butter.

Scrub and wash with care the young, tender beets, to avoid breaking the skins. Those now found in the market are sweet, containing a large percentage of sugar or carbohydrates, about 44 per cent per pound. This should be retained while cooking. If the skins are broken and the beets "bleed," this nutrient passes into the water and only the cellulose is left for serving. Cook them slowly in plenty of water and when soft drain and plunge into cold water. With the hands, slip off the skins. Slice or cut them into half-inch cubes and reheat them in drawn butter made pleasantly acid by the addition of Tarragon vinegar.

Peanut Soap.

Pass two cups of shelled and hulled peanuts through the food chopper. Cook prepared nuts, one-quarter cup each of chopped onion and celery in two cups of white stock or chicken broth 20 minutes. Melt one-quarter cup of butter or substitute, add two tablespoons of rice flour and gradually two cups of scalded milk. Season with salt, pepper, and a few grains cayenne. Combine with peanut mixture, cook 5 minutes, and rub through a puree strainer. Serve with cheese straws.

Rye Meal Rolls.

Scald one cup of milk in a double boiler. When lukewarm add one-half compressed yeast cake softened in one-fourth cup of lukewarm milk. Add three-fourths cup of white flour and three-fourths cup of potato flour. Beat thoroughly, cover, and set to rise in a warm place [70 degrees Fahrenheit]. When light, add three and one-half tablespoons of shortening, one-fourth cup of sugar or molasses, one-half teaspoon of salt and rye meal [not flour] to form a soft dough [about one and one-quarter cups]. Beat the mixture two or three minutes, cover, and set to rise. When light, butter the fingers and shape into fifteen or sixteen oval rolls. Set them close together in a well oiled shallow pan; cover and again set to rise. When light and puffy, bake twenty-five minutes in a hot oven. A few minutes before removing from the oven brush over with the white of one egg slightly beaten. Repeat until tops of rolls are well glazed.

New String Beans With Bacon.

Cut four thin slices of bacon in tiny cubes and cook in an iron frying pan until brown (not burned) and crisp. Remove scraps and keep warm. To the fat in pan, add four cups of cooked and drained green string beans cut in diamond shapes and a tablespoon of grated onion. Shake the pan until the beans are thoroughly mixed with the fat. Season with salt and pepper; turn into a hot serving dish and sprinkle bacon scraps over top. Serve while hot.

Hotch-Potch.

Two pounds of cold cooked mutton, 6 medium sized potatoes, 2 large white onions, 1 tablespoon of finely chopped parsley, 1 quart of beef broth or "quick made brown stock," salt and pepper. Cut the meat into one inch cubes. Pare and cut four of the potatoes into one-half inch dice; peel and chop the onions moderately. Put a layer of meat in the bottom of a well greased baking dish or casserole, then a layer of potato, a thin layer of onion, a sprinkle of parsley, salt, and pepper. Continue alternate layers until all ingredients are used. Cover top of stew with remaining potatoes cut in slices. Pour over broth and bake in a moderate oven two hours. Cover the first hour of cooking.

To prepare "quick made brown stock" dissolve one teaspoon of beef extract in two cups of boiling water. Use in place of water. The meat used for this stew should be cut from neck or shoulder, in other words, a cheap cut of mutton, lamb, or veal.

Camp Logan Sandwiches.

Peel and thinly slice two large white Texas onions. Marinate with French dressing and set aside in a cool place. Cut rye or war bread in thin slices (do not remove the crust). Spread half the slices with prepared French mustard, cover them with a thin slice of American Swiss cheese. Spread remaining slice with cooked salad dressing and cover with slices of onion, well drained from the marinade. Put together in pairs, press edges to keep them in place. Serve with iced coffee.

Iced Coffee.

Mix one cup of freshly ground coffee with the white of one egg and one-half cup of cold water. Turn the mixture into a scalded coffee pot. Add six cups of boiling water, bring to boiling point, and let boil five minutes. Remove to back of range; pour off one cup to clear the spout of grounds, return to pot, add one-half cup of cold water, stir down, and let stand ten minutes, then strain. When cool chill on ice. Serve in cold glasses or earthen mugs with whipped cream sweetened and delicately flavored with vanilla. Pile cream rounding above glasses. Pass powdered sugar.

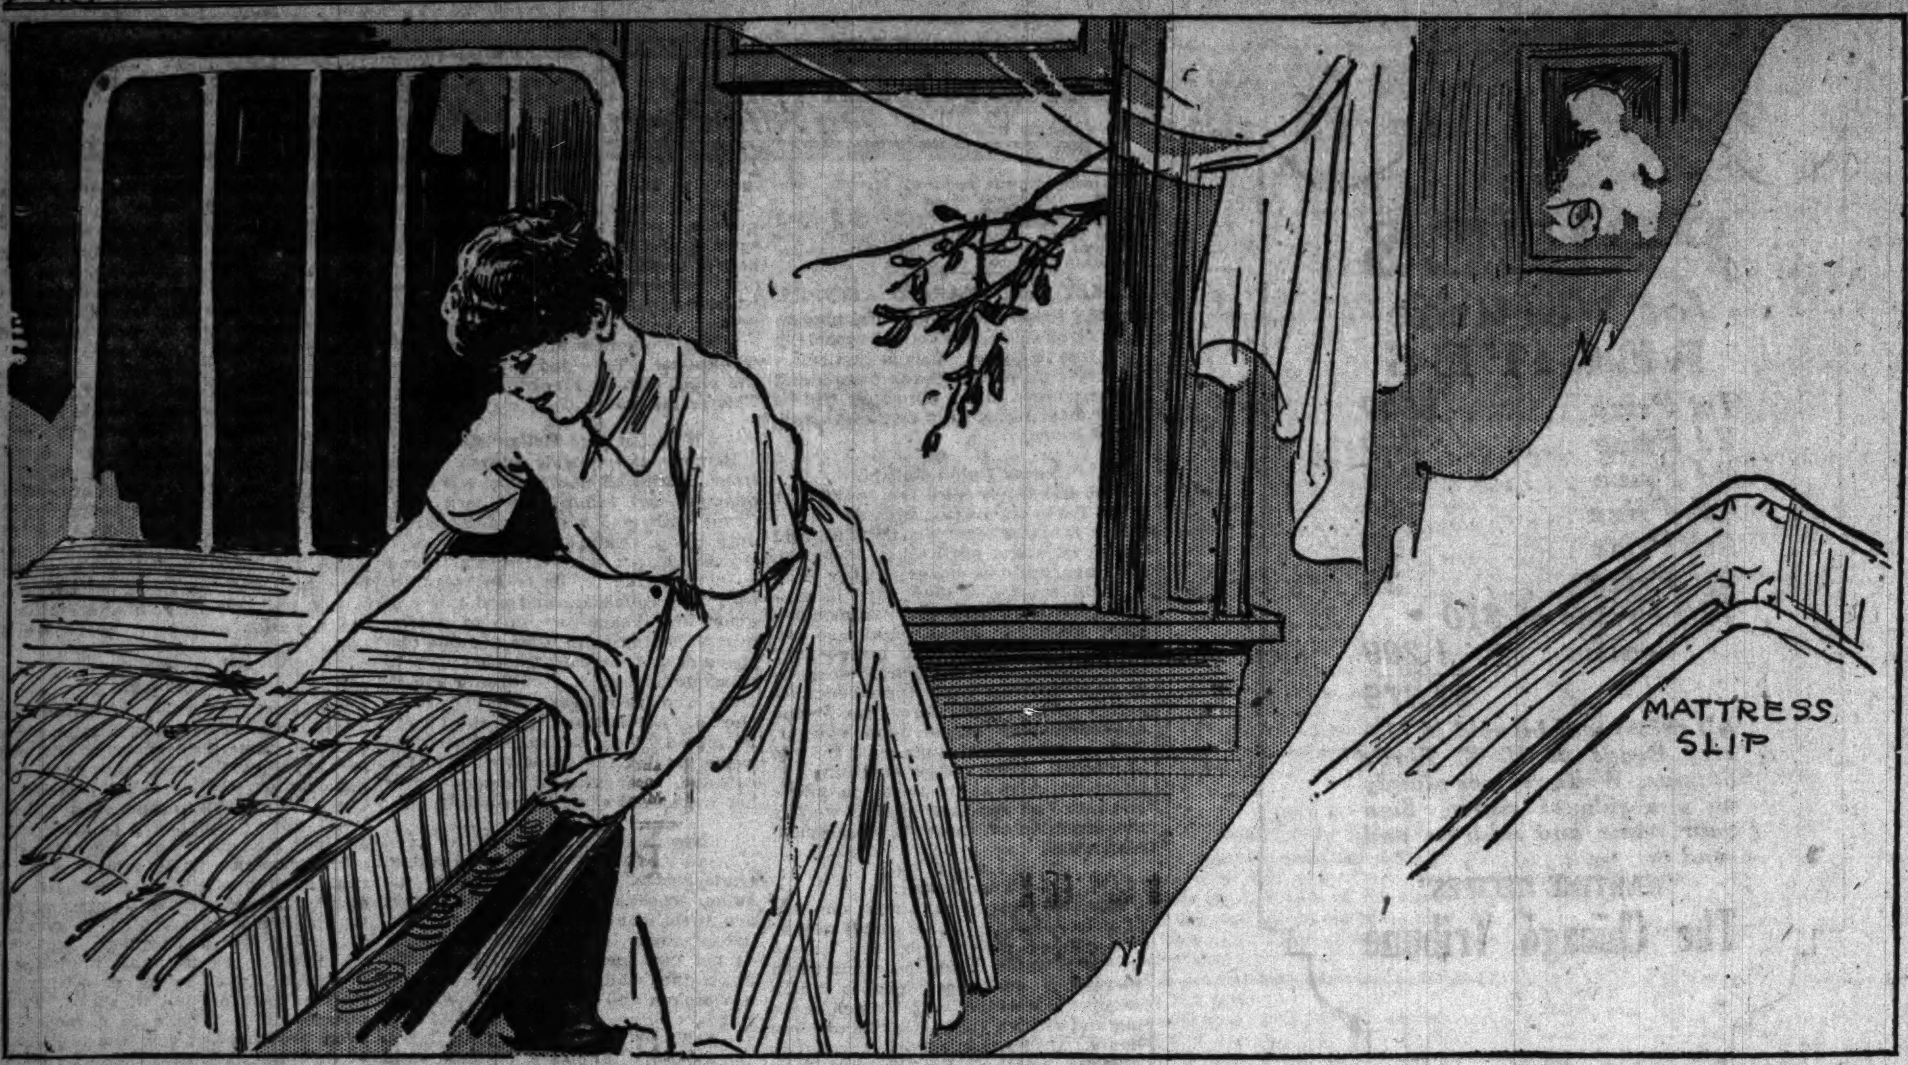
PATRIOTIC and PRACTICAL NEEDLEWORK by Clotilde



MATTRESS AND QUILT COVERS.

Have you ever thought how germ laden your mattress may become because of its exposed ends? The center portion is protected by bedding, but the foot and head are reversed each week, or should be with a well conducted mattress, and the head is rarely covered with more than a lightly thrown spread.

Both ends should be better protected against dust and dirt and the consequent germs. A convenient, practical, and attractive cover that can be washed easily is shown in the picture.

After the mattress is taken care of we should think next of the comforter or quilt. This, on cold nights, is snuggled closely under the chin. It should be kept, too, in spotless condition and free from dust. The best and simplest way is to use a protecting slip much like the one that covers the mattress.

Directions for the covers: Any strong wash material may be used; the same as the mattress is covered with is good. Cut three pieces for the mattress cover. The center piece should be the width and length of the mattress it is to protect plus 9 inches at each end. The two sides measure 9 inches deep. Sew the cover securely together, using the French seam. The selvedge of the material may be used for the outside edge of the top and bottom, thus doing away with superfluous hemming. Fasten the cover to the mattress with snappers put on at regular intervals—three or four are sufficient.

The slip for the quilt is merely a piece of muslin or some light cloth the width of the quilt; fold it over the top of the quilt and let it run back 9 or 10 inches. Snap or buttonhole on.

ETIQUETTE

By Elizabeth Van Rensselaer

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

AT A WEDDING.

THERE are so many small customs and duties connected with weddings that are puzzling to the uninitiated that a few guides and suggestions on this subject will doubtless prove valuable.

The wedding proper is given by the parents of the bride [or her nearest relatives if she is an orphan]. The invitations are sent out, in their name, about three weeks before the appointed day. All expenses save five are borne by the bride's father and mother. These five fall to the bridegroom and are: The cost of the wedding ring, the bouquets for the bride and her attendants, the minister's fee, as well as his conveyance to and from the church, and the gifts to the ushers and best man [small personal remembrances].

Announcements [also in the parents' name and at their expense] are not sent out before the ceremony, but on the first mail afterward. It is not correct to send announcements to friends asked to the wedding, but to those acquaintances whom the bride and her family wish to remember.

"At home" cards are usually sent with both invitations and announcements, so that all those who know the bride or her parents may be informed of her new address and calling day [or days].

Cards to the reception [if there be one] need not be inclosed in all the invitations, if it is a large church affair, but only in those for older and closer friends whose presence is especially desired.

Wedding gifts are sent to a bride at her parents' home. It is a pretty custom that on the day of the great event they be arranged in one of the rooms for the guests to see and admire.

In acknowledgment of a marriage announcement it is courteous to call upon the bride, or, if that is not possible, to write her a cordial note. Wedding presents in this case—a quite suitable means of response, by the way—are sent to a bride at her new home and under her new name.

I shall be happy to clear up any other points about which readers are still uncertain upon receipt of a personal request.

MRS. M. M. G.: It is proper for women to use their own names [without any prefix] in signing notes, checks, and letters; that is, "Mary Smith Brown." The "Mrs." may be inclosed in a parenthesis before the name, if preferred. In giving an address, however, the case is different, and "Mrs. John Brown" is quite correct.

L. B.: Your fiancé may attend to inserting the announcement of your engagement in his city newspaper, but it should be worded exactly as in the newspaper of your town; that is, in your parents' name. In such a case it is correct for your fiancé's rank to be given, since it is above that of a second lieutenant.

* *

C. G.: It is customary for a young woman to wear her engagement ring upon the third finger of her left hand. During the marriage ceremony this ring is not worn at all, but afterward it is placed on her finger again above the wedding ring.

* *

H. K.: Dancing, cards, and "contest games" are always entertaining for a large group of young people. Are there not some who can sing or do "stunts" to amuse the others? Such impromptu informality works miracles in breaking the ice. Spring greenery and flowers make effective decorations and cost but little if you gather them yourselves.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Artistic.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope.

THOSE whose birthdays fall during the week beginning today will partake of the influence of two signs, Gemini and Cancer, so that, while your nature may be dual and changeable, at the same time these traits may be well hidden by the natural determination so typical of Cancer.

If you were born between June 16 and June 21 you are still a Gemini person and as such you are loving, kind, and generous at times. You have a quiet, generally happy disposition, and enjoy luxury and ease if you find them coming your way. You are inclined to be impractical in a business way. You will save yourself much worriment if you can convince yourself that this is not a world of idealistic realization.

You have warm and devoted friends, but they do not always find themselves able to help you out of moods, as it is difficult for them to do so on account of your own attitude of mind when in these spells, and so you sit practically alone. Still, personally, you are a valued friend, and thought more of than you suspect sometimes. Remember this and learn to appreciate your friends.

You are artistic in tastes to a remarkable degree and like to engage in occupations which give this instinct full play. With this sort of temperament it's only natural that you are also strongly affected by music and poetry. In the working out of artistic designs for home decoration you are a wonder.

As a clerk, salesman, lawyer, accountant, literary editor, or bookkeeper you will be successful, though you will have to, in every case, overcome that natural tendency to change from one occupation to another. But, given a responsible position, which is congenial and progressive, you will settle down in dead earnest.

You will find true, helpful friends in Virgo, Aug. 24-Sept. 23, and Aries, March 22-April 20, but marriage with one born in Aquarius, Jan. 21-Feb. 19, or your own sign will probably prove happiest. Your colors are red, green, blue, and white; birthstones, beryl and sapphire; fortunate weeks, those beginning April 26 and Nov. 14.

June 21 ushers in Cancer, although the full force of the sign is not felt until after the 25th. Governed as you people are, by the "gentle but changeful moon," it's no wonder that stability of purpose is difficult for you; but innate in you is also a streak of determination underlying your unstableness, which, nine times out of ten, is only a surface trait. You are loving, kind, generous, imaginative, having a vein of sarcasm that amuses your friends, for it is good natured, witty, and refined. You are apt to have deep religious convictions, but are not given to parading them.

A devotee of art, poetry, and music, it rather seems to follow that you would have an impractical streak, and so you do, for if you are fortunate enough to accumulate any wealth, the chances are that some one will get it away from you.

You will succeed as a teacher, salesman, or an artist. Your colors are orange, green, and russet; your birthstones, emerald and black onyx.

A marriage with your opposite pole, Pisces, Feb. 20-March 21, is likely to prove most harmonious, for Pisces will have a natural sympathy with your contradictory nature that will be of great help to you. A marriage with Taurus, April 21-May 21, may also prove a happy one, as well as one with Virgo, Aug. 24-Sept. 24.

Consider It Seriously.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am engaged to an enlisted man four years my senior who is at present in Texas. In his letters he asks me to come to Texas and marry him, as he expects to be transferred "over there" in the near future. I am very lonesome and life seems worthless to me here. Would you advise me to give up my position here and go to him? Would it be proper for him to send the money for my expenses? ANNABELLE."

I hesitate to advise for or against these pre-war marriages. I think it is a problem that only the two concerned can decide. But it is one that should have your serious consideration. I am afraid a lot of girls are rushing into matrimony from an hysterical emotion which they mistake for love, and for the future of these marriages I shudder! I would not advise you to give up your position permanently, however, unless the man is well able to take care of you. A man could, under the circumstances, send you the railroad ticket if you could not afford it. But if you can, it would be much wiser to pay your own expenses.

Doesn't Come on Sunday.

"Dear Miss Blake: For the last six months I have been keeping steady company with a young man. He comes quite regularly to see me—but never on Sunday nights. Do you think he has another girl? Now, Miss Blake, I like this young man and often feel like telling him so, but am not sure if it is my place to do it. What do you think of this case? "BERTHA."

Why don't you invite him over some Sunday evening, just to see if he has a reason for not calling Sunday evenings? It is rather curious, when he comes so regularly. I would ask him if he has another girl whom he calls on Sunday evening. You have a right to do this. You do not have to tell a man outright that you like him, but you can convey the idea to him in a hundred different ways. The fact that you allow him to come once a week would indicate that he understands you do like him.

MAKING WORK EASY.

TWO offices can rarely be run on the same plan and under the same conditions, even though the line of business and number of employés be identical. Therefore, it is possible that the plan so well outlined in the letter that follows, while working beautifully in this case, may not be applicable in another. But even if the method is impracticable in some offices, the spirit which prompted it and which made it a success is the thing that counts. When the business girl learns to coöperate with her fellow employés she has made a great stride toward success:

"Dear Miss King: One of the girls of our office and I have worked out such a satisfactory method of procedure in our work that we think other girls may be interested to learn about it.

"We are employed as stenographers in a large advertising concern. Our work is irregular. For several days one has nothing to do, and then for several days one is so rushed that nervous exhaustion seems inevitable. This is the way we have met our problem:

"We have come to realize that without utter, unselfish coöperation success in our work would be impossible. Either of us, without the assistance of the other, would be helpless. Therefore, we made a solemn agreement that we would 'stand pat,' no matter what came up.

"First, we divided the work carefully into equal parts. The correspondence is usually dictated, while the advertisements are roughly typed. The advertisements, due to numerous corrections and the poor typing, are difficult to do, while the letters are simple. For this reason, we were quick to recognize the injustice of allowing one stenographer to do the advertisements while the other did the letters exclusively, and so we made it a point to even up the work fairly.

"Then we soon observed that one of us seemed to enjoy the work involving a technical knowledge of machinery and agriculture, while the other seemed to derive more enjoyment from the flowery ads pertaining to toilet articles, women's garments, and so on. For this reason, by tacit agreement we each avoid the ads which the other enjoys, thus making our work as pleasant as possible for each other.

"Fancy spending hours writing long, tedious, farm machinery advertisements when the 'girl at the adjacent desk' loves modern agriculture and is wild to be up to date on all the latest inventions in implements, etc. On the other hand, think of spending whole days writing about perfumes and lacy underwear and chocolate creams when such things send thrills of delight up and down the spine of your neighbor!

"One girl says, 'O, I love the advertising business. It keeps one posted on all the latest styles, and, believe me, no bargain sale escapes me.' The other says, 'The advertising business is wonderful. I have learned more about civil government, agriculture, and commerce during the three years I have been in an advertising office than I could possibly have learned in a university. We receive first hand information from reliable sources.'

"This also enables us to specialize highly in our work, thus becoming more proficient. Each of the different accounts is written in a different style, so it is not necessary for both of us to learn all of the different 'quirks' of the accounts written by the other stenographer.

"Another point is overtime work. This cannot be avoided in many cases, but 'turn about is fair play,' here as well as in other places. If one works one Saturday afternoon the other works the next. If I stay until 8 o'clock tonight, Hazel will stay the next time, and so on. How could any disagreement arise under circumstances like these? Are we not fortunate to coöperate so perfectly? "E. S."

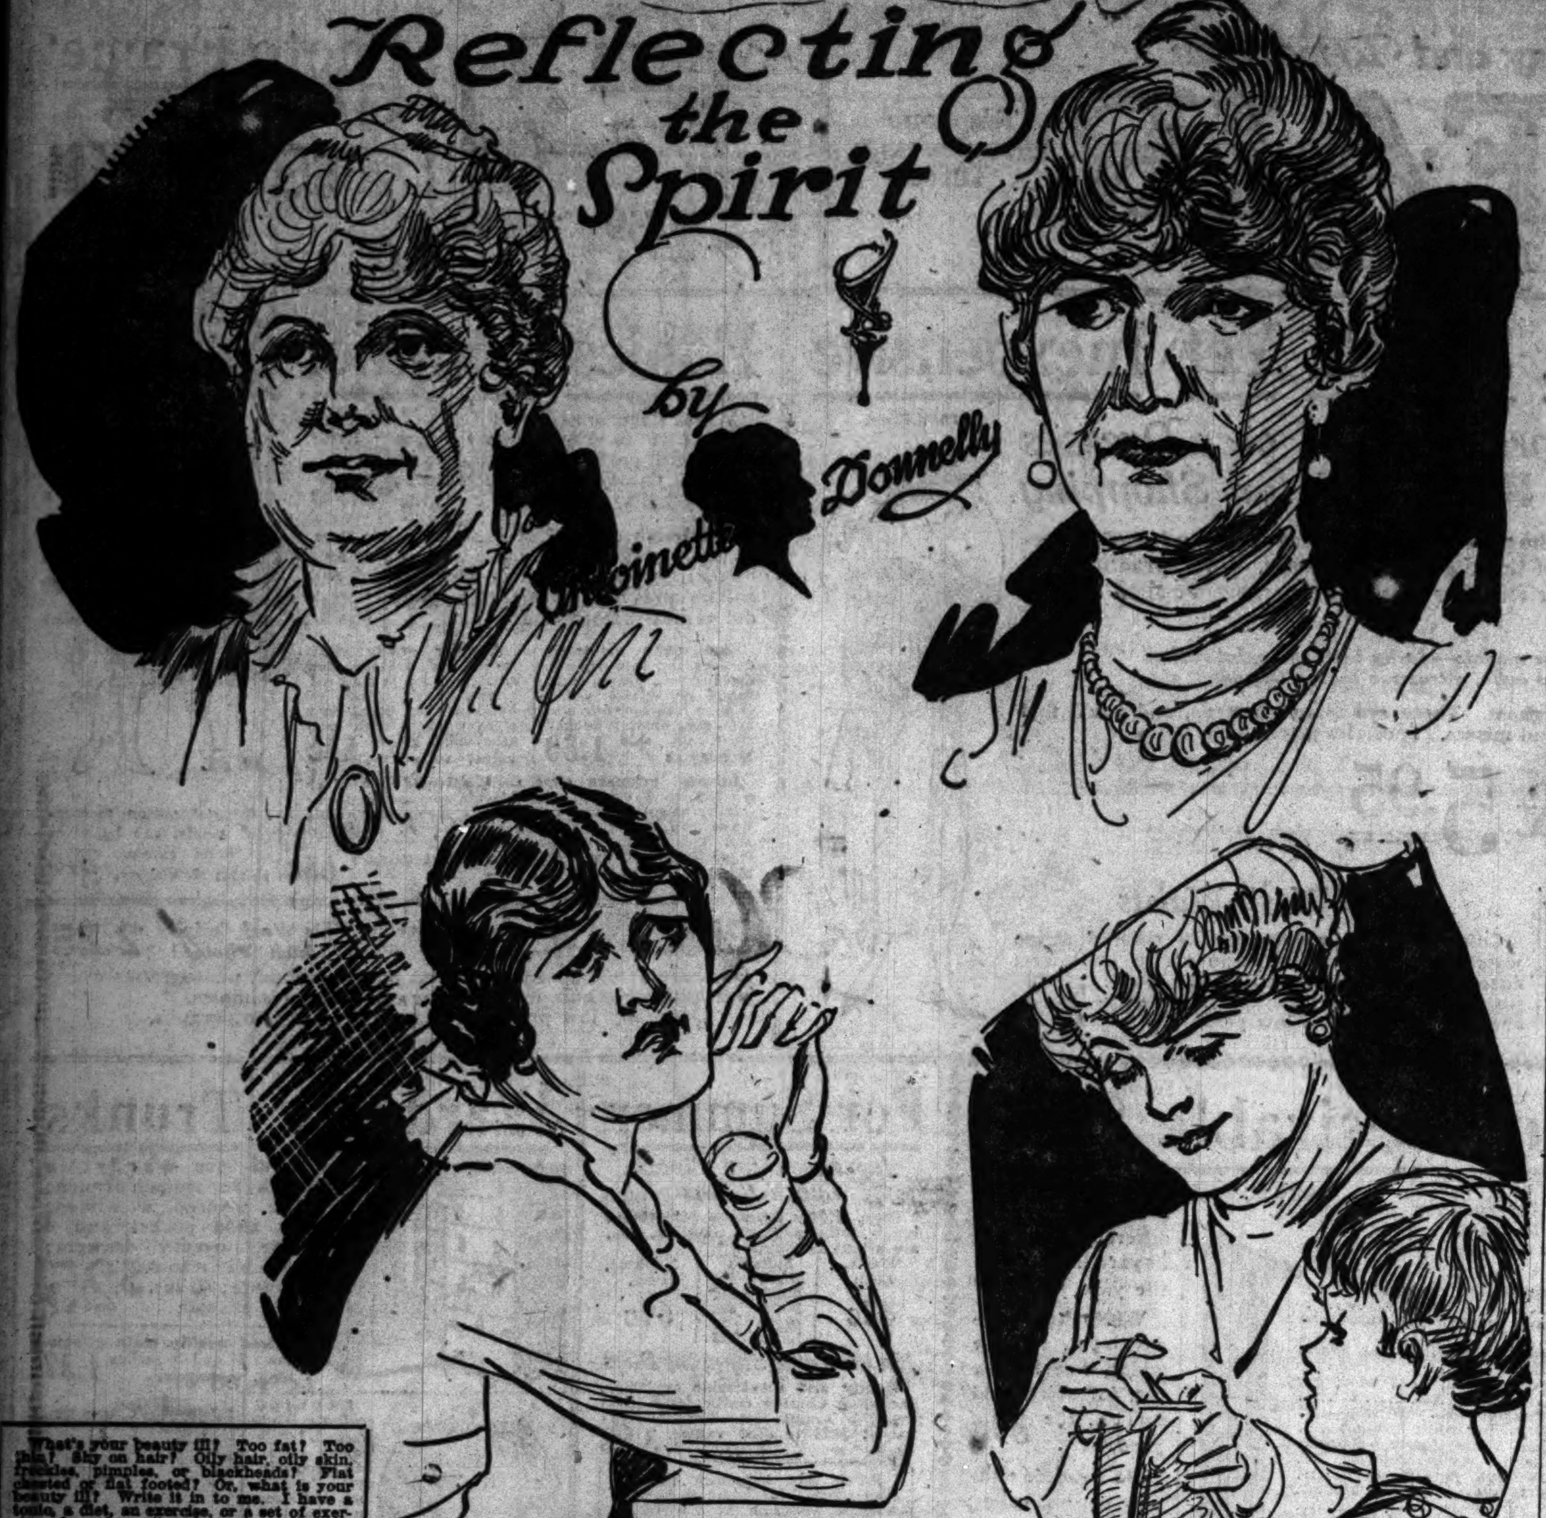
Reflecting the Spirit

by Antoinette Donnelly



What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Or, what is your beauty ill? Write it in to me. I have a tonic, a diet, an exercise, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, Chicago Tribune.

In the upper left is Mrs. B., mother of three sons in the service, with a smile in her eyes and on her lips, reflecting the spirit that made it possible for her to offer three sons to her country in its hour of need. Does she feel downcast? Not when any one is looking at her! Maybe in the dark hours of the night the spirit wavers and the eyes are red with weeping. But she's far too good a soldier to put up anything but a brave face in the eyes of the world.

On her right we have Mrs. X., selfish and unhappy in expression. She loaned some money on Liberty bonds; gave up a personal maid and an extra man servant around the house, subscribing their salary to the Red Cross; boasts of two brothers having served in the Philippine war, and she's consequently done her bit; wishes 'twere all over so that the even tenor of her life might be resumed more openly.

"Poor Jack," moans the moany fiancee in the lower left picture. "If I could only do something to make him know that I think of him. But I haven't the heart to when I think of him suffering such loneliness and misery over there. O, dear, isn't it terrible? I can't knit or anything for thinking of his misery."

"Yes, daddy will be home soon, dear," cheers the young mother. "And he'll be a great, big, strong and happy daddy, too. And she goes on with her knitting and her schemes of managing on a small income, wearing in her heart a feeling that all will be right in the end, lending courage to other young wives of soldiers and their sisters and mothers, and by her spirit making a better soldier of the one "over there."

Not long ago word came of a young chap arriving at a hospital in the city from an aviation camp down south with his leg amputated and his arm fractured. Along with several other women who knew the boy I went to visit him.

Having known him well, this casualty brought war closer than it had yet touched any of us. And the thought of the poor lovable youngster—for that was all he was—with an amputated leg was pretty bad. We were a bleary eyed looking party, I will admit, when we arrived at the hospital.

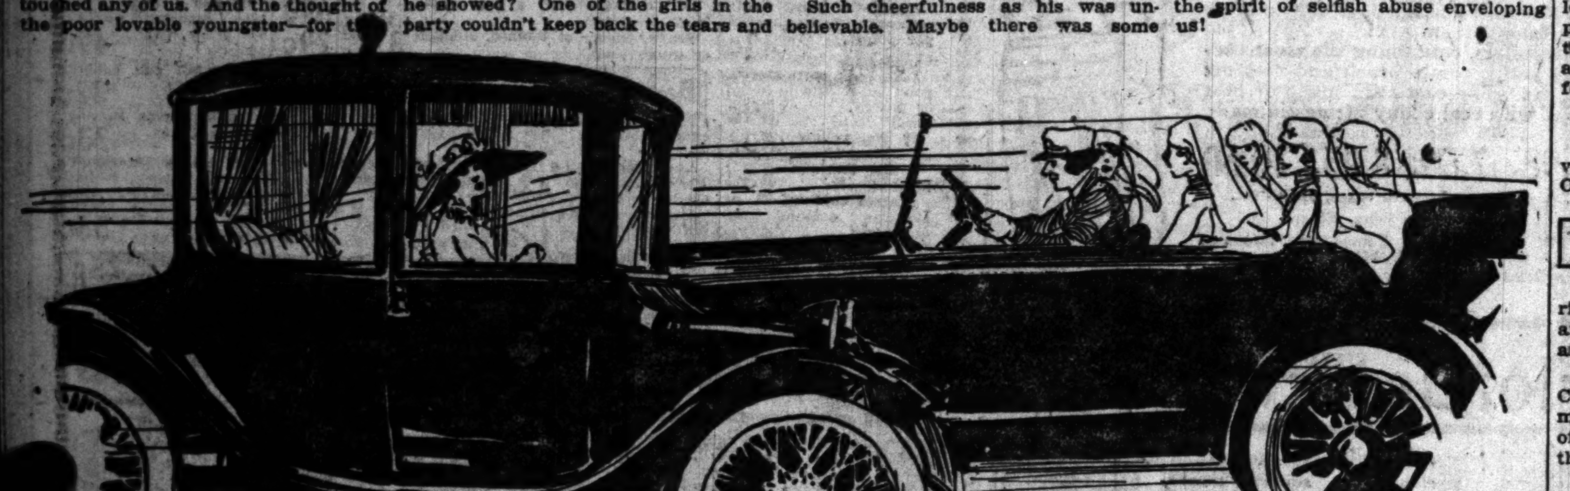
He was in bed and his arm and hand lay lifeless and swollen away out of proportion; that, in addition to an amputated leg.

And what kind of spirit do you think he showed? One of the girls in the party couldn't keep back the tears and the brave boy said to her as sympathetically as if she were the sufferer instead of him: "Please don't do that. Why, there's nothing to feel badly about. My arm is going to be better and I can still be a flyer even though my leg is gone. Why, I have my life and that's what a lot of fellows haven't got."

Such cheerfulness as his was unbelievable. Maybe there was some bravura about it, but if it were, so much more wonderful was the spirit!

The war brings repeated observation of the truth of the fact that "she or he who gives most gives most bravely."

Which is an excellent thought to ponder over when we are feeling the corners of the mouth going down and the spirit of selfish abuse enveloping us!



"No place to go and no boys to go with, anyway," whines a survivor of the old type of useless maid, from her lazy electric. "I'm sick to death of it all. I wish there'd be peace so the boys would come back." Thank heaven she's a species not rampant. But there are a few of them still floating about.

"Not on your life," cries the uniformed driver in the other car. "Not until we've given the Huns what's coming to them would we let a man of them come back. And we'll let them know we're with them and with them as many hours of our day as they are fighting for us over there." And with courage in her heart and a smile on her face she starts off on her errands of mercy, thinking, mayhap, of the bright day ahead when Captain Bill will come marching home to claim her.

ETHEL: A GENERAL BUILDING up of the whole system will often remove the dark circles from under your eyes. You can also carefully massage under your eyes with a good skin food of oil of sweet almonds. First bathe the skin with hot water, then with the tip of the finger gently smear a little skin food or oil of sweet almonds over it. Allow the skin to absorb the oil or cream for a few minutes, then wipe off the superfluous grease and leave for the night. This prevents any possibility of stretching the skin. Get lots of sleep and rest, drink plenty of water, be careful of your diet, and don't worry.

MARY: THE ERUPTIONS THAT you describe are commonly known as "whiteheads." They are hard, cheesy deposits, usually found just under the surface of the horny skin and occur more frequently on the upper part of the cheeks around the eyes. Despite their color, they are really a kind of imprisoned blackhead, protected from the surface dirt. To remove them, first soften the skin by applying hot cloths until the skin is faintly pink, then prick with a sterilized needle and press out contents. Wipe the spot with peroxide and follow with a gentle massage with skin food. They do not recur as often as blackheads. I have a treatment for blackheads and pimples which you may have for a stamped, addressed envelope.

MARIE: A WOMAN OF YOUR height and years should weigh 135 pounds. You can gain weight by plenty of rest and nourishing food. Sleep nine or ten hours every night. Eat nourishing, fat producing foods. Drink lots of water and guard against constipation. On receipt of a stamped, addressed envelope I shall gladly send you complete instructions for gaining weight.

FIFI: YELLOW IS BECOMING TO many blondes, and of course they may always wear greens, rose, blue, and black.

MARY A.: I AM SORRY I CANNOT give you the information for which you ask, as I do not approve of dyes or bleaches of any sort. I should not think of changing the color of my hair if I were you. Dyes make the hair coarse and brittle and in time ruin it. And another thing, the color you had thought of making it might not be in keeping with your complexion and would give your face a coarse, hardened look. Just take the best of care of your hair as it is, shampooing it regularly and brushing it carefully every day, and I am sure you will never regret not having dyed it. Yes, I have a formula for skin food and facial massage and I shall be happy to mail it to you on receipt of a stamped, addressed envelope.

WHY SOCIETY WOMEN WASH THEIR OWN HAIR

They do, not because it is a fad, but because they wish to obtain the greatest possible hair beauty and be sure they are not using anything harmful. They have found that in washing the hair it is never wise to use a makeshift, but is always advisable to use a preparation made for shampooing only. Many of our friends say they get the best results from a simple home-made Canthrox mixture. You can use this at a cost of about 3 cents a shampoo by getting some Canthrox from your druggist and dissolving a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes enough shampoo liquid to apply to all the hair instead of just the top of the head, as with most preparations. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear in the rinsing water. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you.—Advertisement.

SUMMER CARE OF THE LAWN.

A LAWN can be made only during the cooler part of the growing season, preferably in spring, in our latitude. But there is more to maintaining a rich carpet of green than a correct start. It requires constant care, and the treatment during different parts of the growing season is not the same.

In early summer, when heavy, warm rains alternate with warm sun, grass grows rapidly and if left too long will shade the lower portion and prevent its becoming hardened to the elements. If then cut a hot sun will surely burn it out, at least in spots where the growth was most profuse.

It is necessary, therefore, to keep it trimmed down to about one and one-half inches at this time, mowing at intervals of about five days. Later on, during dry, hot weather, conditions are different and grass grows slowly and less dense. It is then best to keep it somewhat longer by cutting less frequently, say at intervals of ten to fourteen days.

When dry or burned spots do appear water well in the evening, repeating every second or third day till green. Grass that dries out during periods of hot drought, apparently dead, is only dormant and will revive in cooler or rainy weather. Therefore if an adequate supply of water is not available to drench the ground to a depth of two to four inches it is better not to water at all than to draw the roots to the surface by inadequate watering and so expose them to a killing sun. If so mistreated the dried spots will be actually dead.

When there is rain at intervals of a week to ten days there is no need of watering unless the temperature rises above 90 degrees F. To add water to a sufficient natural supply will only tend to acidify the soil, leech out the fertility, and wash up the roots.

During periods of drought below 90 degrees the frequency of watering need be no more than the frequency of rains would be normally. Above 90 degrees, after a period of five to seven days' drought, either rain or thorough watering is necessary every three to four days on heavy soil and every two days on light or sandy soil.

In thin, old lawns, particularly if no winter mulch was spread and no fertilizer was added in spring, spread, on a rainy day about this time, steamed bone meal at the rate of one and one-half tons per acre, or eighteen and one-half pounds per square rod (sixteen and one-half feet each way)—a coating about one-eighth inch thick. If hardwood ashes are available they may be used instead at about the same rate.

Weeds, particularly dandelion and plantain, are now sufficiently developed to be readily seen, and weeding can be most economically done at this time. Quack grass should be grubbed out now before it spreads beyond control. The earlier growth of crab grass, which ordinarily appears in August, is promoted by unnecessary watering in spring.

The topic of killing dandelions inspired Mrs. E. G. W. to submit the following recipe for making dandelion wine, said to resemble a good sherry wine. As only the blossoms are used, the gathering, especially in spring, presents no difficulties while at the same time preventing the spread of the seed. Here it is:

To one quart of dandelion flowers use three pounds of sugar and five quarts of water. Boil for fifteen minutes and strain. Then cut up three lemons and three oranges, both unpeeled, and boil about eight minutes in the dandelion juice. Let it cool, then add yeast about an inch square, let it ferment seven weeks, and bottle.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

"1. What preparation do you advise for worms on currant bushes? 2. Only two branches of our lilac bush have leaves and a half dozen blossoms. The leaves look small and delicate. We were told it is a Chinese lilac. 3. The leaves of our weeping mulberry tree turned yellow and fell off in the middle of last summer and had many dead branches. It is hardly even leafing this year, while another, on the opposite side of a five foot walk, is beautiful. Can we save it now?—Mrs. A. M. D."

1. Currant worms should be poisoned with white hellebore spray, if possible when they are still at the lower foliage. It is prepared as follows: White hellebore, thirteen level teaspoons; water, one gallon; thin flour paste, three level teaspoons. Prompt work on this first brood will lessen the damage from the second. 2. Probably a Rouen lilac suffering from lack of soil fertility and cultivation or infested with oyster shell scale. 3. May be due to gas pipe leakage, lack of drainage, or lack of fertility. It should have received heavy dormant pruning after last year's sickness. Cut out only the dead wood at this time and such of the branches as throw it out of balance. Under the outer spread of the foliage work into the soil a ring of decomposed manure, about a four inch layer. Cultivate the soil from that to the stem.

"1. Do you consider the neighborhood of Chicago a good fruit country? 2. If a man were to specialize in one or two kinds which would you recommend? 3. What kind of ground would be most suitable?—E. D. A."

1. As a whole, no; but there are favorable spots. 2. Apples and plums. 3. A deep, loamy soil on gently rolling ground or on a gentle slope to south or southeast. Good drainage, cultivation, correct pruning, and spraying will make for success here as elsewhere.

"Our large wild grape vine was covered with worms last summer, which ate almost every leaf off of it. Late in the summer new leaves came out. Please tell us what to spray it with and when.—A. T. B."

Without description, our guess is that it was the grape vine sphinx, a green larva two inches long when full grown, though there are other caterpillars to watch for. Put on an old glove and hand pick them, crushing every one under foot. Arsenate of lead spray, whenever their presence is indicated, will do the work better.

If it is the grape slug or saw fly, a green larva about one-half inch long, arsenate of lead is the remedy.

If it is the rose chafer, a grayish beetle with ungainly long legs, which often destroys all grape blossoms and foliage, in sandy districts, spray with arsenate of lead at the first appearance of the beetles.

If it is the grape vine flea beetle, about one-fourth inch long, of metallic blue color, which feeds on buds and tender leaves about this time, spray with arsenate of lead in May and June to kill the grubs. The beetles can be caught and fed to poultry if a sheet is spread under the vine on bright days and the vine is jarred sharply.

The formula for arsenate of lead spray for grape vines is: Arsenate of lead paste, four pounds; water to make fifty gallons. For the rose chafer, add two quarts of molasses to the above. The arsenate of lead may be added to the regular 4-4-50 Bordeaux mixture spray, in the same proportion as if only water, and used on cultivated grapes as a combined fungicide and insecticide.

"My crab apple tree is in full bloom. What would you advise me to do to prevent about 75 per cent of the apples from becoming wormy?—I. B."

You will need a spraying outfit with extension pipe to reach the topmost blossoms. The first application should have been made when the blossoms showed pink, but before they opened. The second is due when most of the petals have fallen and before the calyxes have closed. Three additional sprays are applied, respectively, ten days, three weeks, and ten weeks after the fall of the flower petals. The same spray is used in all five cases at the rate of the following: Commercial lime-sulphur, one and one-fourth gallone; arsenate of lead paste, two pounds; water to make fifty gallons. If this is faithfully and thoroughly done there should not be a wormy apple and disease, too, will be largely eliminated.

Varied Activities of Women

An organized campaign is being carried on in Wisconsin to rout out all girl and women slackers who are not doing anything to help the country.

The needlework shop of the Y. W. C. A. in New York has made arrangements for mothers, wives, and sisters of soldiers to earn money to support themselves by knitting at home.

The war department wants women as reconstruction workers among American troops injured during the war. The women's camps and colleges are giving the courses of training necessary for these workers.

Dr. Bertha Stuart of Read college, Portland, Ore., has gone to France to study the rehabilitation of wounded men, and will probably assume charge of the women aids appointed by the war department to give remedial exercises to wounded men.

On the Floor.

One day while shopping I entered the leading store of the town. It was crowded and I had to wait. A stool on one side of the counter was worked by a spring. When one sat on it it had to be pulled out and upon getting up it would slam back. I had a new dress on and after I sat down I decided to smooth it out. I stood up, smoothed it out, and sat down, and to my amazement I was on the floor. I had a whole audience laughing because the stool slammed back. I left immediately. N. C.

Seeing the Sights.

Some time ago my mother came to visit me. My husband and I took her to see Lincoln park. We also took our first baby along in one of those collapsible go-carts. My husband wheeled the cart while we both pointed out different sights to mother.

After a while we met an old friend of my husband's. He suddenly laughed and said, "What's the object of wheeling an empty cart around?"

We looked in the cart and sure enough, there was no baby in it. With rapidly beating hearts we ran back the way we came and there was baby lying on his pillow on the top of one of those cement steps that lead above the animal cages. He had slipped out unhurt while we were interested in the scenery.

My husband's friend looked at me and said, "Some mother!" B. G.

A Funny Tragedy.

It was at a theatrical amateur performance in my home town. The villain in the play was to overtake me on a lonely road and shoot me. He pointed the revolver at me and I fell, but the blank cartridge failed to explode. I believe the audience got more fun out of that little incident than all the rest of the show. R. I.

Curious to Know.

One evening last winter I was accompanied home from the office by a young man who had never met my mother and upon reaching my home we decided to have a little chat in the hall. My mother curious to know who the stranger was, got down on her knees in the reception hall and with her hand to her ear was listening to our conversation. You can imagine how embarrassed I was when my friend saw the shadow of my mother on the glass of the hall door and you can further imagine how embarrassed my mother was when I said: "Mother, we can see you." Found Rather Fresh.

I was once visiting a girl friend whose father was a traveling salesman. She had just returned from a summer resort where she had met a young man of the same profession whom she had found rather "fresh," and one evening she was telling me of her experience with him and how she had turned him down. Forgetting completely that her father was of the same calling as the man whom she was discussing, I said to her, "I don't blame you a bit. I think traveling salesmen are the worst class of people on the face of the earth anyhow." E. W.

Trying On Coats.

I was out purchasing a spring coat. My winter one was in quite a dilapidated state. I laid it down on a chair and commenced trying on coats. After making my selection the saleswoman picked up a coat from another chair and asked me if it was my winter one. Before I had time to think, I blurted out: "Goodness, no; my own is bad enough!" A woman standing a few feet away from me gave me an icy look. Later I saw her with the despised coat on. Maybe I don't keep my remarks to myself now! M. S.

He Kept the Flowers.

Several regiments of soldiers passed through a nearby town en route from Camp Grant to Sparta. As usual, crowds turned out to see them on the march. I happened to be standing close, and to my surprise one soldier handed a bouquet of lilacs to me. Impulsively I reached out for it, but instead of lilacs I had only a bunch of leaves. The bouquet was fastened to his saddle with a rope. It seems I can still hear the shouts of laughter that arose from the crowd. It may have seemed humorous to them, but it was and ever shall be my most embarrassing moment. B. B.

Graceful Dancer at Home.

We were at a summer resort and were sitting watching the dancers. One large, awkward girl persisted in dancing on her partner's feet.

I turned to my companion and said, "She's about as graceful as an elephant, isn't she?"

I had no more than made the remark when the woman sitting in front of me turned and said, "That's my daughter, and she's considered a very good dancer where she came from."

I was so embarrassed I felt it was time to leave. C. T.

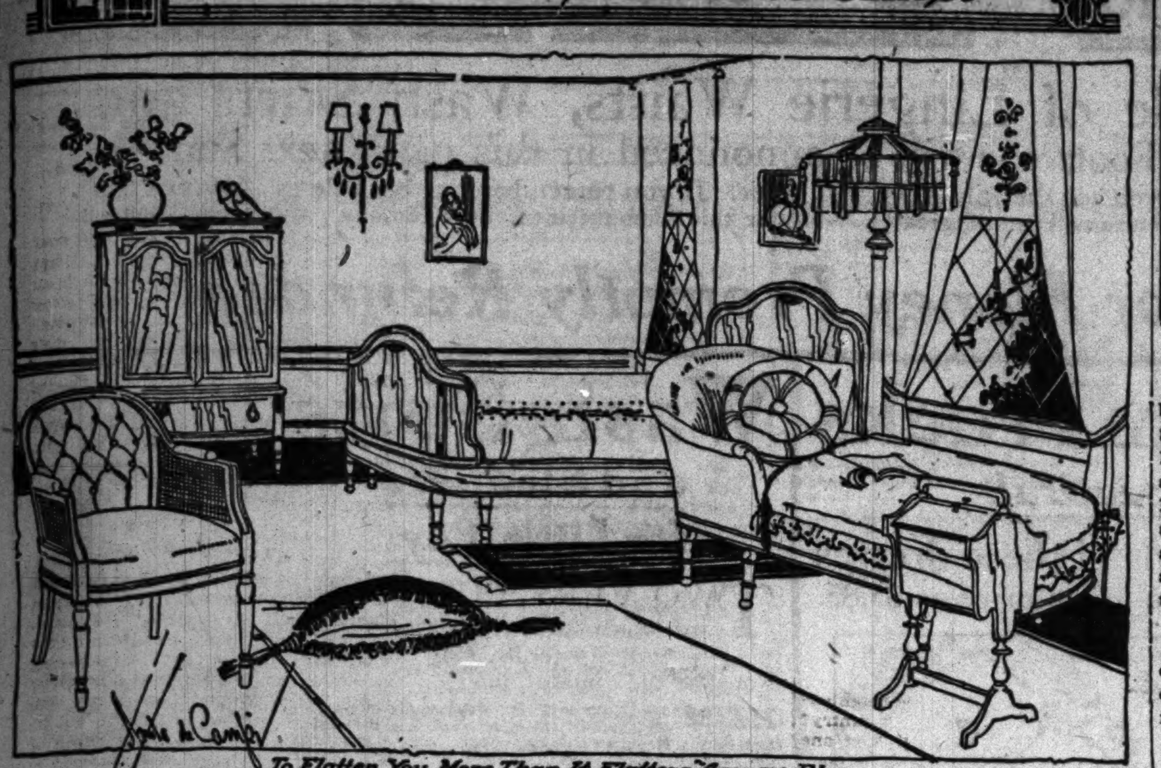
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By Anita de Campi



To Flatter You More Than It Flatters Anyone Else.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

PERSONALITY in home furnishing is an element that is frequently overlooked to the distinct disadvantage of the occupant. It is an element that stands paramount in the eyes of the trained decorator.

To my thinking it is almost an act of disloyalty for a professional decorater to arrange for his or her client a scheme however beautiful that does not include the client herself as the central feature. The whole blending of colors, the scale and style, should be determined according to the person for whom it is conceived. Then it will have her personality plus the personality of the artist, and not merely the personality of the artist minus that of the client.

Choose your interior decorations as you would your articles of clothing, because they are becoming to you. How many women have not yet awakened to the personal element in their surroundings. They see some bit of drapery, a chair or piece of furniture, and decide to buy it because it is beautiful. But is its conceded beauty enough to warrant its purchase? Why, they might as well buy a size 36 evening gown because it is beautiful and try to adjust it to a 40 form to go shopping in.

A successful color scheme for any one woman is one that will flatter her more than it will flatter any other woman who comes into her home. It takes the eye of a discriminating artist to be sure to select the absolutely right graduations of color to produce this result.

And so it is in other things. Study your type. Nothing could be more ridiculous than a stout woman bulging out over the sides of a slim little Adam chair. The same woman would have a sense of ease and even admirably generous amplitude in a comfortable wicker, a goodly comb backed Windsor, or a substantially upholstered chair.

Finishing touches often speak more vividly of the home owner than any other part of the furnishing. Many of the season's pretty novelties need only to be suggested to be promptly adopted and adjusted to indivual needs for that last touch that is so telling.

One of the new rather expensive trifles that hardly knows whether to class itself among wearing apparel or boudoir furnishing is the summer chaise longue cover. It is made of silk matching the wearer's negligee. It is not padded like the winter cover.

This is how it is made: A piece of silk is cut the shape of the chaise longue top, only a little larger, and a ruffle of silk or lace is put around it. Now to keep it in place over the "wearer" a pocket is made across the lower end, underneath the width of the cover, and the feet slip into this pocket, while the top has a good weight concealed under a heavy silk tassel at both corners. This is a dainty trifle which, after all, is not so extravagant, as it requires less silk in the making than an ordinary silk petticoat. The pillows are made to match.

Pillows of all sorts continue to be made in abundance. Tassels make the most popular trimming. Sometimes a bit of fascinating color is allowed to be all but hidden away in the new double covered pillows. The idea is shown in the illustration. A melon shaped pillow is first covered with flame colored satin, then it is thrust into an open outer envelope of golden taupe brocade, trimmed with marabou.

The other furnishings of the room are attractive. The little walnut bed with its eight legs and the six legged chaise longue are noticeable. Both have ecru armure covering. The day cover of the chaise longue is flame pink taffeta shot with gold, which tints are repeated in some of the flowers painted on the cream roller shades. The inside curtains are doubled, dull jade green silk gauze of the sheerest quality over pale Wedgwood blue, and the walls are light French gray. The vase is of flame enameled porcelain, and the porcelain birds are palest flame, blue-gray, and cream.

The wall bracket in silver has crystal drops, and candle shades of light Wedgwood blue, while the standard lamp shade is of straw colored silk trimmed with embroidery, repeating the other colors in the room. The tassels are flame colored.

These are all tints becoming to the type of beauty known as "strawberry blond." In choosing the red she must be careful that it be several degrees less intense in tone than the actual color of her hair. A touch of turquoise and sage green might add enhancement, and the carpet could be best described as eggplant color.

A novelty in lamp shades that may be readily carried out at home is made on a perfectly flat round wire frame—a regular pancake shape. The frame is set to the lamp in the usual way and then the cover is laid over it quite unattached and easily lifted off for cleaning.

The cover is simply a circular piece of lace such as is used for table center pieces. The cover and its lining must be at least one-third larger in diameter than the wire frame. When laid upon the frame the surplus width falls over the wire edge in a ripply circular ruffle.

Nothing could be plainer and prettier than this for bedroom use. The model I have seen was made of crocheted lace, but I fancy that a piece of sheer Philippine embroidery would be even nicer. Candle shades could be made to match by laying circular pieces over the little silk shades, weighting the edges to hold them in place.

Sash windows are appearing in a new dressing that primly "follows the lines" of the window. This new style of curtaining does not fly loose at any point. It is really more like a shirred lining than anything else—a lining that lies close against the glass. Each window must have four rods, two for the upper and two for the lower sash.

The secret of the arrangement lies in these novelty rods. They are made of solid brass, extending almost but not quite the width of the glass. Each rod has a cap that slips over each end. This cap, which fits on like a metal pencil top, has a spring inside of it and a rubber tip outside. The inside spring when the rod is inserted presses the outside rubber against the wood that frames the glass, and the rod is held in place without the need of a single nail. It is, in the language of a classic friend, "as cute as a bug's ear."

The curtaining for each sash measures the exact length (when hemmed) of the glass. The rods pass through the upper and lower hems and the windows thus curtain lined go up and down without hindrance. Where window frames are good this fixture is to be commended. The scheme may be used without inside draperies of any sort.

Answers to Inquiries.

MRS. H. B. P.: Use sand color for your side wall and straw color silk gauze for the curtains. Yes, the maid's room and kitchen would be nice in old blue and cream white. Have some cushions in yellow, bronze, and dull green. A touch of brilliant turquoise blue would respond to your coloring.

* *

MRS. F. C. B.: In your daughter's room have a small, conventional pattern all over, flowered on a white ground. Paint the furniture old ivory. Have curtains of silk gauze matching the predominating color of the flowers.

* *

MRS. L. P.: Lace roller shades, made of all over net, are used with inside draperies of silk, such as you describe. These are particularly good at court windows where it is agreeable to shut out the view. They are kept drawn excepting when the windows are being washed, and the inside draperies are made on slender rods and rings so that they may be pulled together at night in lieu of an opaque roller shade.

* *

L. P.: Any neutral light tone will do for your living room, with a lighter tone of the same for the ceiling; repeat in the bedroom, use the same color for the ground work of paper in the dining room. The latter may be figured if you like. If your furniture, carpets, etc., are figured use unfigured draperies and vice versa. Yes, figured cretonnes are proper in a girl's room.

* *

MRS. A. R.: For your other chair get flowered brocade in silk and wool fabric. Use old ivory for your wall tint. A few good pictures, of course, are always permissible in the living room. Use cotton rep for your curtains, with glass curtains, if you like, of transparent fabric.

* *

M. W.: Delicate French gray would be nice for your room. Use a striped Du Barry and French gray striped brocade sunfast for your draperies. These may be placed over pale ecru voile curtains. If you get a warm mulberry it will go well with the rug you describe. I believe it would be nice to upholster the extra chair in the rose and French gray stripe like the draperies. Use the dark blue velvet for your pillow. You say in this room everything is tinged with blue, even the rose color. This is quite correct. Why don't you send the magazines to the soldiers? Let your pictures correspond with the others you have. Dress your sideboard formally with a bowl and a pair of vases, or center piece of some sort and candlesticks—that is quite enough. Repeat your window material on the French doors, hanging the goods on slender rods and rings so that they may be drawn back if you wish. Weight them well at the bottom. Unless the oil lamp is really good looking I would not use it.

Lost Both Legs.

"I am a young man and have lost both of my legs near this place on the Southern Pacific railroad. I am about helpless and cannot move around at all on account of the loss of my limbs. I am a stranger here, without friends and without a dollar in the world. I am trying to get help to get a pair of artificial limbs, so that I may be able to get out into the world again. "G. L."

I do so hope that this letter may come to the attention of some one who can give to this poor man the start he needs.

Home for Lonely Woman.

"I wonder if among your readers there is some woman alone who would like to share my comfortable four room flat? I have a room that I will give to a woman for company. I am alone myself. I lost my mother one years ago. I am employed downtown. I am an American. I do not like to be alone at night, and I thought if I could find the right party it would be nice. I would like a Protestant woman, under 50 and employed. "C. C."

Need More Yarn.

"A club of high school girls to which I belong is making blankets for the babies of Belgium. These blankets are made from many squares of knitting sewed together. I have made fourteen of these squares from yarn which we happened to have in the house, but now, having no more resources, I am appealing to you. I would be glad to get any that any one happens to have and I would see that it was made up and reached its destination. A. S."

Have you any yarn to spare for these busy workers? I will be more than glad to send their address to you.

Wants Quilt Pieces.

"An old friend confined to her room for many years passes some of her time in making quilts—patchwork ones—but her swollen fingers do not permit her to use silk or velvet of late. All of her friends have contributed soft woolen pieces until they haven't a scrap left. I would be so glad if volunteers would furnish me some for her. "A. A. D."

A request from a shut-in almost always meets with quick response. If you have any soft woolen pieces won't you please send to me for the address of A. A. D.?

Invalid's Chair for Child.

After reading through your column in THE TRIBUNE today I became aware of the fact that possibly I may help some one along who is in need of an invalid's chair for a child. The child has outgrown it, and, although the chair is not in first class condition, it may be of service to some one who is in great need of one. M. L. B."

You may be assured, Mrs. M. L. B., that your gift of the wheel chair is greatly appreciated and I am holding your name to give to the first applicant.

For Some Small Boy.

"I have left in my care to give away to a little boy 3 or 4 years of age the almost new bicycle of my little grandson who had to go east to live. His mother wanted it to go to a little boy whose mother could not give him one. Will you kindly find such a boy for me? A. G. A."

Some little boy is going to be made happy and will think you a real fairy godmother.

How to Make Rose Beads.

"I see a woman asks how to make rose beads. Gather rose petals, the most fragrant, if you desire fragrant beads. Put through a chopper, using the fine knife, three times a day for a week, keeping them in a rusty iron receptacle. They will ferment and the perfume will be strong. When the paste is fine and black it is ready to make into beads. Measure each lot of paste accurately, so the beads will be even. If they are to be smooth roll in the palms of the hands until perfectly round and put a hat pin through the center of each bead, then set them out in the sun to dry. After they are perfectly dry soak them in glycerine twenty-four hours and dry again. Rub each one separately in the bowl of a spoon. These are as black and glossy as ebony and look handsome strung with gold beads. W. N. W."

Music and Magazines.

"I have accumulated quantities of sheet music popular eight years ago up to the present time; also two or three years of photoplay magazines. I will gladly send these to any one willing to pay postage on them or call for them. C. C. P."

Back Pershing's Heroes Enlist in the Regulars

News and Comment of the Theater

MR. HARDY of the Playhouse tells the good news that in September his theater will open with a musical comedy called "Changing Partners," by Frederic Arnold Kummer and Victor Herbert. Mr. Kummer is a writer of distinction and is the husband of Miss Claire Kummer, the brightest of the American dramatists. Mr. Herbert was so much pleased with the libretto that he took it with him to his home in the Adirondacks last month and straightway wrote the music for it. "Changing Partners" is of the "intimate" type that have been so popular at the Princess in New York and the La Salle in Chicago.

After the first performances of the "Follies" in Atlantic City Bert Williams withdrew because his part in the extravaganza was too small for his reputation. "Frisco," a product of the south side honk-a-tonks, now a blazing figure in New York amusements, was one of the successes of the cast, which included Will Rogers, Marilyn Miller, Lillian Lorraine, Eddie Cantor, Anne Pennington, and Allyn King.

Mr. Williams' indifference to the demand for "new stuff" is said to have been the cause of his eclipse by the other members of the Follies. Now he proposes a season in vaudeville, playing Simon Legree and Uncle Tom in a one act travesty of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

The "Out There" Red Cross crusaders did not finish their pilgrimage, it seems, without dissension. Personal differences between one of the leading actresses and one of the prominent actors grew to such proportions that withdrawal was threatened soon after the Chicago engagement. William Courtenay was dispatched from New York to take the place of the indignant member, but when other members of the cast threatened also to withdraw the offended player consented to remain. The receipts of the tour were $[illegible], a quarter of a million dollars in excess of expectation at the outset. Chicago's contribution of $92,000 was second in size to that of Pittsburgh's $[illegible].

Local well-doers who keep the army and navy pure while in Chicago might be discouraged if they were to see what befalls their charges after they reach New York City. Singing and dancing is permitted in the restaurants there, right in front of the soldiers and sailors, and in one or two places the nefarious practice of ice skating is tolerated—in full view of the military. There seems also to be an abundance of liquor and ladies at hand for such of our armed forces as may desire them—an evil condition which suggests that something should be done about it by the Chicago aldermen. Why save a jackie in Chicago to have him ruint in New York?

The Misses Dolly, now performing in the exhibition upon the roof of the Century theater, New York, will be prominent in the cast of "Oh, Look," when it comes to the La Salle in August, under the Elliott, Comstock, and Gest banner. Harry Fox also will be in it. "Oh, Look" is music, dancing and girls added to the comedy, "Ready Money."

"One of Us," the new play by Jack Lait and Jo Swerling of THE TRIBUNE staff, is described in a telegram from Los Angeles as "a screaming hit," with twenty-four curtain calls at the first performance. Miss Bertha Mann has the leading rôle, which is that of a naughty cabaret girl. After four weeks in Los Angeles "One of Us" will fare to New York under the Morosco auspices.

In the course of the play Miss Mann utters these philosophical observations:

"It isn't where you come from that counts—it's where you're going!"

"Good getters should be good forgetters."

"I find a lot of men who want to be entertained—but not with song!"

"Honor among thieves? Nix. They're no better than square guys."

Mr. Morosco still insists that he will build a new theater in Chicago if he can find a site within the loop.

Miss Bates and Holbrook Blinn, who were neglected here in "Getting Together," have returned to New York and are even more successful there than they were during their first engagement.

The Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph, recounting the success of the all-star "Out There" troupe in that city, has it that "George M. Cohan sang a new lyric to the tune of Lieut. Gitz Rice's 'Keep Your Head Down, Fritzie Boy,'" sung in "Getting Together." The facts are, however, that Lieut. Rice is really singing a new lyric to the melody of "Hold Your Hand Out, Naughty Boy," a song seven or eight years old.

Otis Skinner suspects he will have a new comedy next year—"Humpty Dumpty," by Horace Annesley Vachell, now playing in London. Mr. Skinner has just completed an unusually prosperous two years in "Mister Antonio," which was a failure in New York.

Max Marcin, author of "Cheating Cheaters" and an industrious tinkerer of other men's plays, has completed "The Accomplice" for the starring purposes of Miss Josephine Victor.

Actors are rehearsing "Double Exposure," by Avery Hopwood, a sassy farceur, with the gift of "knowing what not to say and how to say it." The Selwyns will produce it in Washington.

Managers declare that the high cost of traveling by rail will put an end to the out-of-town theatrical business next year. A committee of them is going to see Mr. McAdoo about it.

A. H. Woods professes extravagant admiration for Montague Glass' new play, "Why Worry?" Miss Fannie Brice will be the star of it.

The two musical comedies to be produced by John Cort next season will be "Gloriana," by Catherine Chisolm Cushing, and "Fiddlers Three." Eleanor Painter will be the star of "Gloriana."

"Rock-a-Bye Baby," which is a musical version of the farce "Baby Mine," is due in Chicago in August, to be played by a special company. The original cast is expected to remain in New York indefinitely.

Baltimore newspapers say that "Pack Up Your Troubles" isn't much of a drama but that Sergt. Guy Empey acts better than many professional players. Miss Rose Stahl, the co-star, has so small a rôle, they say, that she is almost invisible.

"The Winning of Ma" has been put on the ways of the Cohan-Harris establishment with Miss Zelda Sears as chief player. It is a dramatization of the series of stories about the Flickinger family by Bessie Hoover.

The local Hippodrome will begin to experiment tomorrow with a combination of vaudeville and stock company drama, giving two performances of each daily. Miss Edith Ellis, author of "Mary Jane's Pa,' 'etc., is in charge of the venture, which is said to be the pioneer of its kind. This week a condensed version of Clyde Fitch's "The Truth" will be given by the Great Northern Players, in addition to a variety program. The stock company has two leading women, Miss Cecil Kern and Miss Peggy Boland, and two leading men, Lark Taylor and Allen Murnane. Performances will begin at 1:30 and at 7:30 o'clock, and the tariff will range from a thin dime to 30 cents. The change in policy at the Hippodrome is made necessary by the decrease in vaudeville "acts" and the increase in railroad fares.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Some day the threatening boche may drop a bomb into the center of Broadway and help complete the subway, but until he does no one hereabouts seems likely to pay much attention to his threats.

The order for the city to submerge itself in darkness last week, first by turning off the big electric lights and then by putting dimmers on the window lights and diamonds, had not the least apparent effect on the morale of the crowds. They were much less serious than they were last winter, when the lightless nights were ordered to save coal. A coal shortage is a real problem—but a boche in an aeroplane is still a good deal of a joke. And will continue to be until he appears.

For which attitude there are explanations. For one thing, this is the dear old summer time. For another the added hour of daylight tacked onto the long June evenings gets the theater crowds indoors shortly after sundown and before the street lamps are lighted.

The shore resorts, however, did really suffer. The crowds at Coney Island and Long Beach were noticeably small and they refused to be cheered. The barking of the hot dog men took on a mournful sound in the dark, and Luna Park, with a blanket thrown over it isn't so deucedly joyful. Furthermore, the public can more easily sense the possibility of a U-boat standing off shore and taking a shot or two at the glass roof of Steeplechase park than it can the appearance overhead of a bomber who has assembled his hydroaeroplane on the bosom of the briny deep and risen to a height of a mile or two without being seen and brought down by the gunners at Sandy Hook or one of the patrolling destroyers.

In the city, in other words, the people are willing, even just a little bit eager, to take their chances. There is the thrill of adventure in that. But they are not so anxious to seek deliberately the spot where the shooting will probably begin.

On Ellis island, where the immigrants were assembled in the old peaceful days, and where the first of the alien enemies were held, prior to being shipped inland to the internment camps, the government has established a receiving station for the reserve officers and men ready to be assigned to ships.

At times there are from 1,500 to 1,800 of them there, and it has been something of a problem to keep them entertained and in good spirits. Brought to the attention of Mrs. George Gould of the local women's committee on national defense, she promptly built them a theater, and called for volunteers to provide a weekly bill of vaudeville.

This, of course, is being done at all the camps, and contains no items of news or feature of novelty, excepting in this respect: The men never know just when they are to be called. Their ships ar ready to sail at various times of the day and night, and they have to be ready to move at a moment's notice. So it happens frequently that in the midst of an entertainment a bugler appears in the hall and blows assembly. The audience comes to attention; the song and dance artists retire wonderingly to the wings; an officer calls the name of the ship that is ready for its complement of men, and the jackies assigned to her—sometimes seventy-five, sometimes twice that number—rise from their places and file out.

As they march out the eight hundred or a thousand men left break into the wildest sort of applause, and from applause into the lilting, defiant swing of "Where do we go from here, boys, where do we go from here?" Then they settle back into their seats and the show goes on.

The call to the officers stationed in Brussels on the eve of Waterloo broke up a grand ball and may have furnished a more dramatic moment in the world's war history, but it could have offered no more inspiring incident than this of the sailor lads marching out of their little theater to their ships to convoy another string of transports across the sea.

Raymond Hitchcok would have been a rich man as a result of his first venture as a manager with last year's "Hitchy-koo" if he had been content to take his profits and put them into Liberty bonds instead of theater leases and other productions. As it stands, he came back to Broadway a month ago, so I'm told, several thousand dollars in debt. Not one of his side ventures, neither the production of "Words and Music" or the lease of the Fulton theater, or his arrangement with the Shuberts to take over the Forty-fourth street theater, returned him anything but a stack of bills.

Now, however, he is home again and happy at the Globe theater with a second edition of "Hitchy-koo," and in a fair way to make up his losses and something over by the time the summer ends, barring, of course, the interference of those boche bombs of which we were speaking.

The new entertainment is much like the other in form. The comedian still serves as his own chorus, invading the auditorium at the close of the overture, greeting the late comers as they venture down the aisle, introducing them to each other, or to the orchestra leader or chiding them gently for being late.

Then he rushes back stage to play one of the comedy roles in the opening skit, a mildly amusing burlesque of the old style comic opera called "The Miller's Daughter." This is not much more than begun, however, before Hitchy decides that it is much too ancient to please a modern crowd and orders it stopped. Why spend a whole evening getting the soprano married to the tenor? Why wait until the last act to outwit the stern parents and fool the rich villain? Do it all in the first act and have it over with.

Which they do. After that there is a series of burlesque bits, most of them rough and tumble affairs, and several of them hugely comic. In one Hitchcock, as the wickedest man in Flatbush, the comedy suburb of Brooklyn, tries unsuccessfully to renew his acquaintance with a certain village vampire. Being constantly interrupted by his infant child, she being the incorrigible Ray Dooley, he is forced to employ a combination rattle and stuffer club to keep her quiet. A primitive skit, but one that starts the familiar gale of laughter in the audience.

Another rough bit is given to that most skillful of the comic inebriates, Leon Errol. As a highly illuminated chef he begins operations in a kitchen that is immaculate at his entrance and very messy at his exit. During his stay he succeeds in smashing three or four windows, a cabinet filled with china and a water pipe that floods the floor, the scenery and himself. Again the audience sways joyfully, as prehistoric audiences probably swayed on the ark, if Noah allowed the crew to give similar entertainments.

There is another wild tumbler in Roy Cummings, evidently called in from the varieties, whose particular specialty is diving headlong into the orchestra pit from where he is carefully rescued by

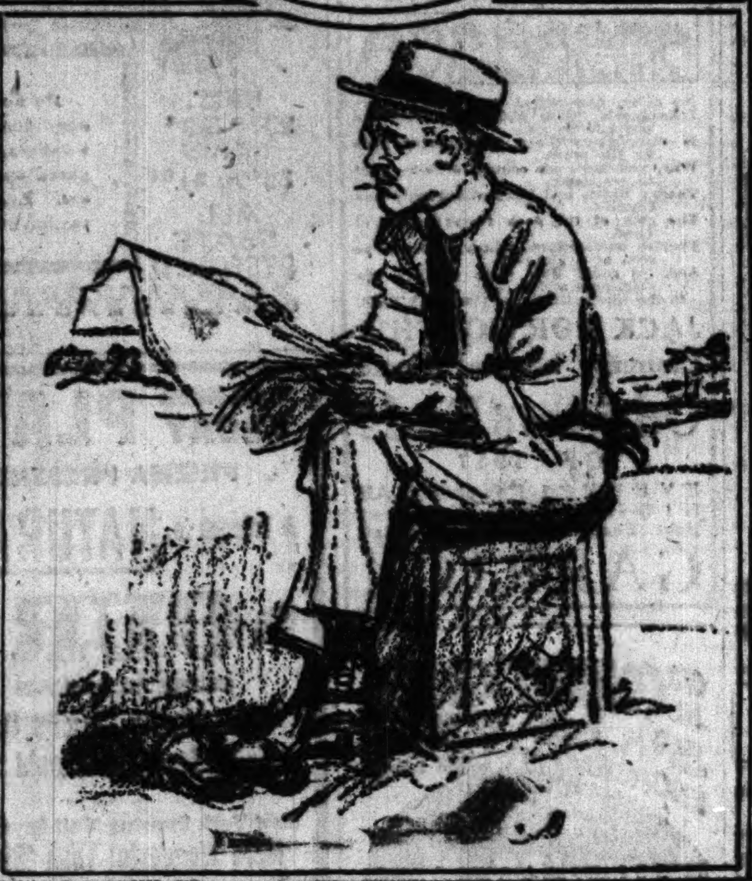
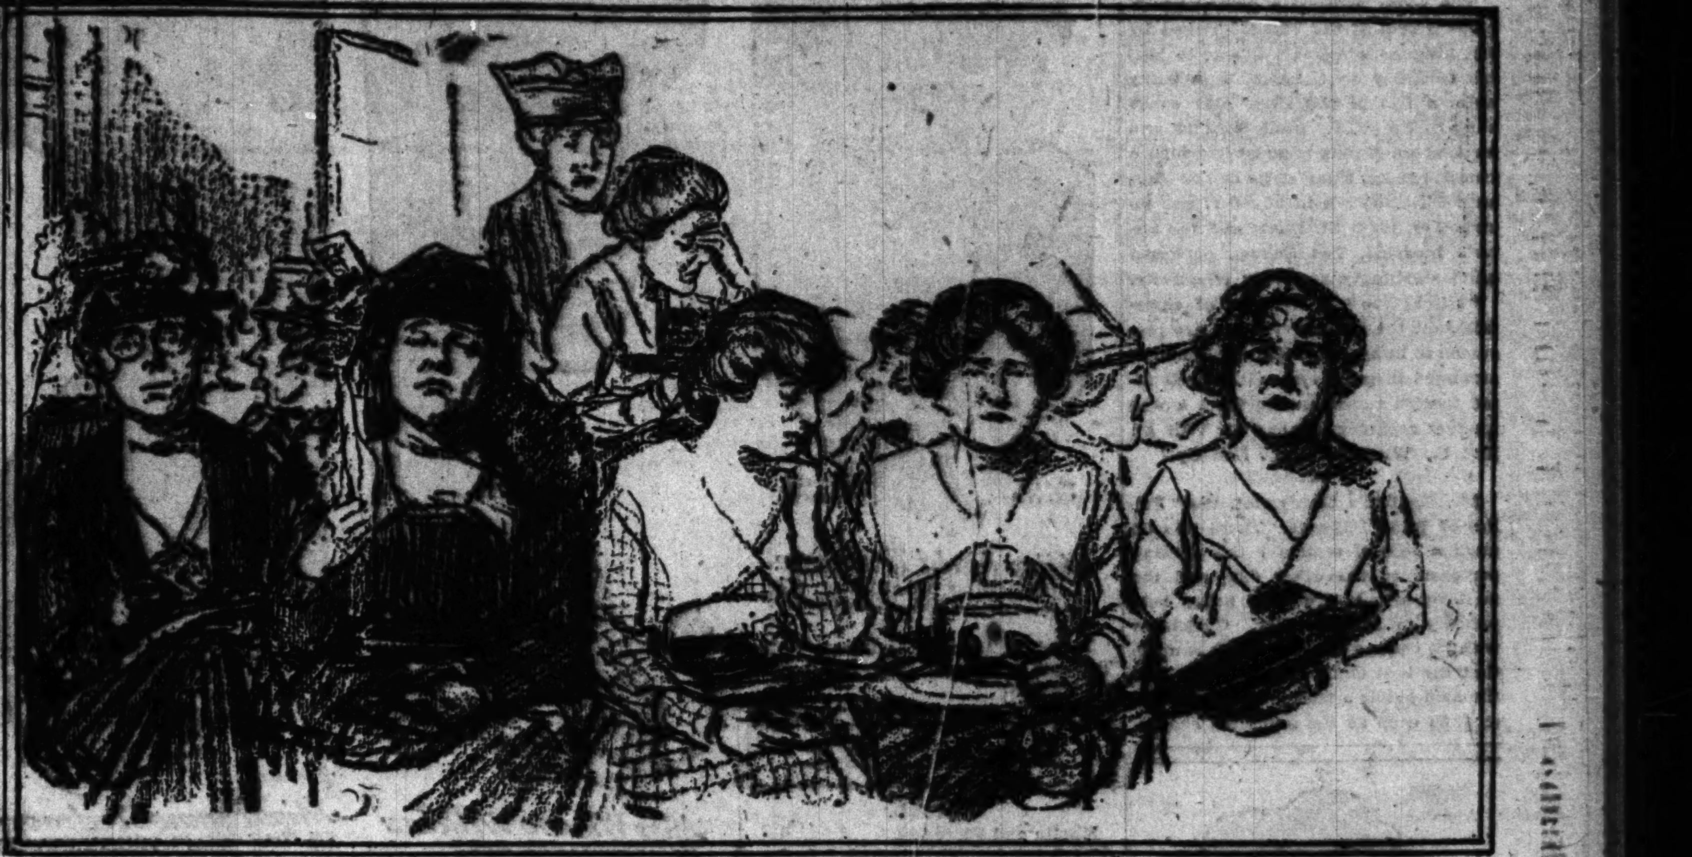
AMONG US MORTALS

By W. E. HILL





Members of the Y M. C. A. class in surgical dressing attend their first illustrated lecture on the treatment of wounds. Several ladies down front on the verge of fainting for the last ten minutes have about decided to switch to a cooking class.

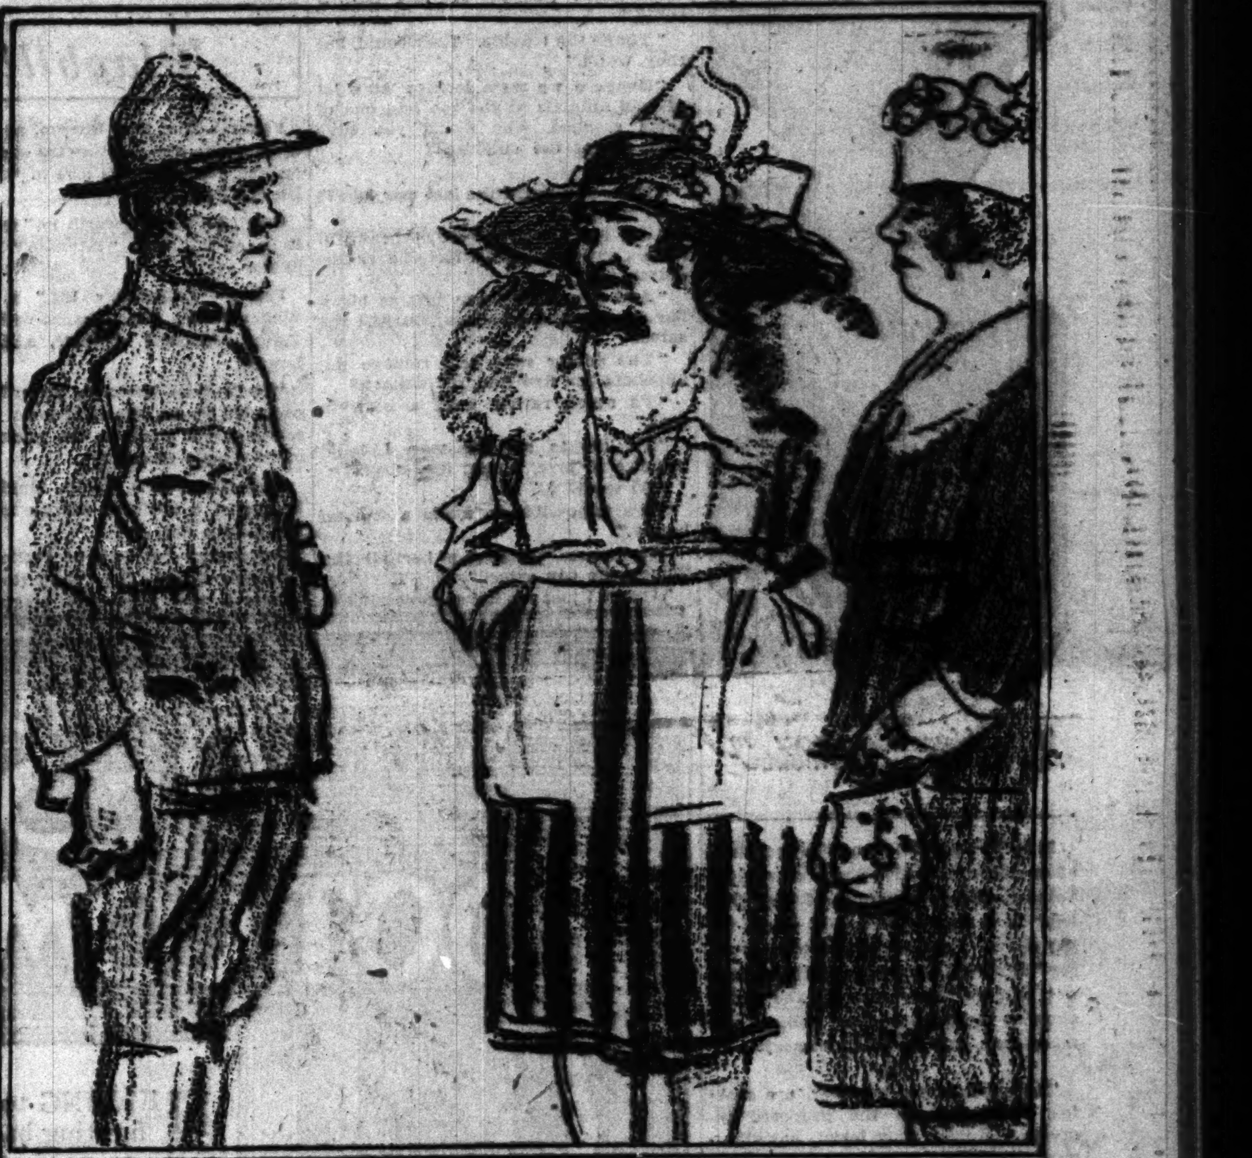
"I don't want to get drafted on a farm with all them hicks; I'd rather go over'n join Pershing." The bunch around the Palace Hotel bar talking over the chances of being put on a war job.



Private Welch has suggested a boat ride in the park. Sadie is agreeable, only he'll have to get some one for her friend May, and May insists on having an officer.

the musicians upon whom he lands. Mr. Errol's previous efforts take a bit of the edge off Mr. Cummings' floppings, but he, too, is popular.

The more legitimate diversions include a drill of the village firemen by Mr. Hitchcock and his efforts to lead his company to a fire with a balky auto; a trio of the allies' war songs sung in French by Irene Bordoni, and an Arabian Nights incident in which a graceful young thing stage named Florence O'Denishawn in honor of her instructors, Ruth St. Denis and the latter's husband, Ted Shawn, performs quite startlingly and very effectively.

"Hitchy-koo" is the sort of entertainment the summer visitors are presumed to hunger for. Glen McDonough arranged it and Raymond Hubbell fitted it with tunes, among them a war number assuring us that "It Will All End Up With the Right End Up."

Mr. Ziegfeld's fleshly riot, the "Follies of 1918," impends. There was an auction sale of seats for the opening performance the other day, and the final rehearsals are now being held publicly in Atlantic City. Coincident with its coming announcement is made that the best stalls will this year cost the avid public a matter of either $3.30 or $3.85 each as the minimum charge.

BUSHNELL PHOTO

Miss May Robson in "A LITTLE BIT OLD FASHIONED" POWERS

It is Mr. Ziegfeld's contention that, after eleven or twelve years' service devoted to the development of the "Follies," he is entitled to ask $3 a seat for his show. Fred Stone got that much for "Jack o' Lantern," and there were not half so many girls in the Stone show as there are in the "Follies," nor more than half so much scenery.

The speculators, however, are seeking to discourage the proposed increase. Money, they insist, has tightened up since the various drives have attacked the public's savings, and $2.50 is all the minimum charge should be. This, with the 50 cents premium paid the speculator and the 25 cents war tax, would bring the cost up to $3.30, whereas, working from a $3 base, it would amount to $3.85, or practically $4. Even perfectly solvent brokers and quite reckless expense account boys are said to think twice or three times these days before buying theater seats at these prices. What with dinner and supper and everything, it does make theatergoing a bit expensive.

"Of Ballads, Songs, and Snatches"

Lucy Gates

Miss Gates, a coloratura soprano, is in the roster of singers engaged for the summer in Ravinia Park, where the season will start a week from Saturday night with "Aida." She is known better in the east than in Chicago, although she has sung in this city: she was the soloist in March of last year in the first concert given by the Philharmonic Choral Society, in Orchestra hall. Miss Gates, some months ago, took the place of Galli-Curci when the latter, by reason of illness, was unable to sing.

CAMPANINI, in his prospectus for next season, intimates "Don Giovanni" with a starry cast. He may put at least two parts into the care of singers better than the opera has had within memory—Galli-Curci and Raisa. The latter told me that she is up in all three women of the opera—Zerlina, Anna, and Elvira. Anna Fitziu would nicely fill out the casting. A great opera it is, and with an American record, I believe, of not paying out. Nobody goes when the cast is not a staggering pay-roll; and, when it is, not enough go to meet the costs. Campanini put "Don Giovanni" on three seasons ago, with John McCormack to do the drawing; and he didn't, although he sings Mozart better than any other living tenor. Alice Nielsen and Scotti were billed to take part, but did not come. A "production" for the work is among the impedimenta Campanini has bought from the defunct Boston Opera.

Another of Mozart's which might be well done with the present personnel of the Chicago Opera is "The Marriage of Figaro." The Metropolitan keeps the piece alive in its répertoire, although, save in the case of Scotti, unable to cast it as well as Campanini might do. The Chicago organization has lacked an Italian baritone of Scotti's general style. Stracciari proves to be something else; and Rimini is not yet schooled for the work. "The Marriage," like "Don Giovanni," is, in Campanini's American experience, no good at the box-office. But any opera is effective there when Galli-Curci is involved. No other singer on earth could have made "Dinorah" a go.

One of the new conductors for the Chicago Opera is Louis Hasselmans, who has been with the Paris Opéra-Comique. The other is an Italian: Campanini withholds his name. Charlier and Sturani will return.

Marcel Journet, the French basso, who was with the Opera in 1915-'16, and the season after, is to come back, and without, it seems, replacing Huberdeau.

Campanini tells the New York City papers that he will, when the war ends, give ten weeks a year there as well as here. He again assures the Metropolitan Opera that he does not go to New York to put it out of business. The attrition does good to both organizations. Thus, the Metropolitan, last winter, provided a standard whereby Campanini's bad settings and slovenly stage management were shown up; while Galli-Curci, Raisa, Muratore, and three or four others of the Chicago company made clear that the Metropolitan was not so well off in the item of great individual talents.

The Metropolitan has engaged Margaret Romaine, a soprano who was in Campanini's roster of last season, and did not sing. She was definitely billed for a "Faust" matinée with Muratore, and was replaced by Fitziu. Campanini had meanwhile twittered a lot about Miss Romaine's worth, suggesting that he expected her to be a triumph at least as considerable as Galli-Curci. This was amazing optimism to those who recalled her in two musical comedies in Chicago, "The Midnight Girl" and "Her Soldier Boy." She is a sister of Hazel Dawn, a soubrette and film-girl.

Mary Garden is at Monte Carlo. She was so successful in the Chicago Opera's four weeks in New York that Campanini now lists her name with Galli-Curci's and Muratore's when he tells of the roster for next season.

Muratore has rejoined Cavalieri in the movies: they are vis-à-vis in a film called "A Woman of Implse," which involves some scenes from "Carmen." The manufacturers rented the Century opera-house, in New York, and filled the seats with guests and supers for the photographing of some scenes.

Carrie Jacobs Bond has been to law in England to prevent a publisher there from advertising one of her old songs as new. The song is called "Write to Me Often"; and her plea expresses the fear that her present reputation as a composer is imperiled if the public be led to think that the ditty is an example of what she is now able to do.

Crimi, the best Italian tenor the Chicago Opera has yet had, has given his infant son the name of Amerigo. Galli-Curci and her husband stood as godparents at the baptism.

London's musicians today are celebrating the centenary of Gounod: he was born June 18, 1818.

The same London is getting and patronizing opera. The Carl Rosa and the Beecham companies are singing there.

Another of Great Britain's enduring ventures with opera, the Moody-Manners company, is for sale. The impresario is able to boast that in twenty-one years' existence the organization has never had a loss. The reason for selling is given as the increased cost and lessened facilities of transportation. American managers are apprehensive about next season for like reason.

The Paris Opéra-Comique has kept going without interruption for forty months. The singers there recently contributed to a gala for the Somme refugees the second act of "The Tales of Hoffmann," amplified with selections from some of Offenbach's lighter pieces. The duet in "La Belle Hélène" on this occasion revived so well that the Paris correspondent of the Musical Courier predicts, as a result, the restoration of that opéra-bouffe, which most musicians with a knowledge of Offenbach regard as his masterpiece.

Mr. Eckstein's schedule for the new season in Ravinia park makes for five nights of opera week: Monday and Friday will be concert-nights by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, with a singing soloist when the casting of the operas permits. Among the alterations is the removal of all the posts and columns in the pavilion. The special drive for the sale of tickets for the use of the recruits at Great Lakes and Fort Sheridan has so far been highly successful. It is still on; and it is among the best of wartime efforts at home.

Sousa may come to Chicago to give two concerts next month, in the Auditorium, with his own band. He is to have a furlough of twelve weeks from Great Lakes. The venture is, of course, private and personal; but it is just fair that he should be provided with opportunity to keep alive, for his rights after the war, the trade-mark and enterprise that combine to make his vocation. He has done so much for the wonderful war-work carried on at Great Lakes, and so much for the stimulation of pro-patria enthusiasm and morale wherever he has led the jackies' bands in the last year, that Chicagoans ought to make his proposed "professional" visit an entire success.

The Columbia School of Music will hold its commencement tomorrow night, in the Auditorium. The Bush Conservatory's will, in its musical aspect, be spread through tomorrow, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday night's Tuesday morning, and Saturday afternoon: the pupils in acting had theirs on Friday night, and the children did their dancing last night. Tuesday night will be devoted to a reception of the class of 1918 in the new building of the conservatory, 839 Dearborn avenue.

A WALLACE REID PICTURE.

By Mae Tinée.

YOU say there are so many pictures to be reviewed that you wish you might have criticisms on Sunday as well as weekdays. I don't always oblige you, but this week and on this day a Wallace Reid picture is being released which I think I'll tell you about. It is especially worthy of mention because it is so different from most of his photoplays.

"Believe Me, Xantippe," is the play, produced by Famous Players-Lasky, and directed by Donald Crisp.

The cast:

George MacFarland	Wallace Reid
Thornton Brown	Ernest Joy
Dolly Kamman	Ann Little
Arthur Sole	Henry Woodward
Detective Thorne	James Farley
Sheriff Kamman	Noah Beery
Wrenn Wrigley	Charles Ogle
Simp Calloway	James Cruze
Violette	Winifred Greenwood
Williams	Clarence Geldert

Believe me, Mae Tinée, "Believe Me. Xantippa," is a mighty refreshing little comedy!

We always knew Mr. Reid could make love, and we always knew he was good to look upon, but we never realized before that he was a born comedian. The truth, however, always will out, won't it? [Ten chances to one, Wally's infant son will turn out to be a clown.]

The picture is based upon the play of the same name, written by Frederick Ballard. It was first produced as a Harvard prize play in Boston, and then in 1917 was put on at the Thirty-ninth Street theater, New York. The story is of a wealthy young club man, who makes a bet of $20,000 with a couple of equally opulent friends that he can commit a crime and elude police drag nets for a year. The bet is inspired by the discovery that his apartment has been robbed during his absence one evening.

The victim replies: "Believe me, Xantippe, anybody who goes about it right can avoid capture."

So he forges one of the friends' names on a check, obtains the money from the friend, the agreement being that the friend will turn the check into the bank within a certain number of hours, widely advertise his loss, and paste bulletins bearing the picture of the fleeing made to order crook over the country. All arrangements having been made, out goes this young rich man into a world that suddenly seems peopled with most appalling personages, from the most innocent of which he flees indiscriminately.

What finally gives him away is not his face, nor his manner, nor his style, nor his smile—but his slang! The thoughtful two left behind had remembered his favorite expression, "Believe me, Xantippe," and had advertised it.

The picture is excellent fun and there is a lot of good work in it. I have a great fondness for Ann Little. She's so buoyant and boyish and clean cut and outdoorsy! The other parts are most excellently taken, with Charles Ogle, James Cruze, and Winifred Greenwood in the lead.

Beautiful scenery and good photography help to make "Believe Me, Xantippe," the kind of a picture to look up if the day's been trying and you need an antidote.

LAUGH ON, WALLY--FOR THIS TIME THE WORLD'S LAUGHING WITH YOU

The Y. M. C. A., on the alert to do anything it can for wounded or otherwise disabled soldiers who are unable to sit up, has stationed at the base hospitals in the camps portable motion picture machines. These are arranged so that the projection apppears on the ceiling. All the patient lying on his back needs to do is to look up.

"L'Occident" will be the name of Nazimova's next production released by Metro. Charles Bryant, her husband, will be her leading man as in her other productions. The other principal roles will be taken by Sally Crute, Richard Barthelmess, and E. L. Fernandez.

Don't forget that Monday, June 24, "Hearts of the World," will move from the Olympic to the Colonial.

Helen Eddy, the delightful girl who has supported George Beban in most of his successes, has been engaged to play with Monroe Salisbury in his picture based on the novel by D. W. Ogden, "The Rustler of Wind River."

Mabel Normand is barely five feet tall. One of those "little but O my's!"

Two letters were brought into my office recently by a masculine movie fan who corresponds with William S. Hart and Wallace Reid. I quote excerps from both letters. Mr. Reid in his epistle says:

"About my being at Camp Lewis, will say that I have not entered the service and the man claiming to be myself at Camp Lewis was an impostor. As soon as the news arrived that this man was asking for money and smokes, etc., from various sources, investigation was made, but we were unable to locate him, as the word came that he had been sent to another camp in the east. He must have cleaned up considerable money and various other articles from all accounts I have of him.

"I have never been to Camp Lewis but have been kept busy here at the studio working on 'Believe Me, Xantippe,' 'The Firefly of France,' 'Less Than King,' and now working on 'The Source.' We have a splendid home guard connected with the studio and I am a sergeant. The Lasky studio has sent about seventy-seven men to the service to date."

Mr. Hart writes tersely on the matter of his engagement—"they" have it he is to marry: "I'm not so lucky—yet!"

ASK ME! ASK ME!

A. L. B.: Yes, glad to! Why don't you send your suggestions to the scenario editor of some one of the film companies, a list of which I will mail you if you care to send me a stamped, addressed envelope. The companies are selecting many more novels now than formerly for the purpose of picturization. Good ideas, too! That was a mighty funny clipping you sent me. Not that I remember of.

PEGGY MAC: Welcome to the corner. Kind? You bet! Bobby Harron is working for Griffith. Haven't heard of him? My dear Peggy, and he's the hero in "Hearts of the World," too! What sort of Ripvanwinklian sleep have you been indulging in? Mae Marsh was born in 1897. Marguerite Marsh is 26 years old. Apply to the Great Lakes Naval Training station. Applications are received there. Thanks for your letter, Peggy Mac. Write again.

UNKNOWN: Your letter was forwarded to Miss Burke. Glad to do it for you.

C. S. E.: Little Mary McAllister, I understand, is not in pictures just at present.

X. Y. Z.: The only way for a youngster of your age to get into motion pictures would be to have your parents or your guardian take you to a studio and present you to the studio manager. If children were needed in any production being filmed you might be taken on. I am glad you enjoy reading the column. It's fun writing it for people who like it.

GLADYS: Following is the cast of "Love's Conquest": Gismonda, Lina Cavalieri; Almerio, Courtenay Foote; Prince Zaccaria, Fred Radcliffe; Gregoras, Frank Lee; Francesco, Fredi Verdi; bishop, J. H. Gilmore; nurse, Isabelle Berwind. Not a bit of trouble. Glad to be of service to you.

X. Y. Z.: Yes, I'll be glad to. Jack Pickford has enlisted in the navy. Louise Huff is with World Film company, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York; Vivian Martin, Famous Players-Lasky, 130 West Fifty-sixth street, New York; and Antonio Moreno, Pathe, 1 Congress street, Jersey City Heights, N. J.

A BACHELOR: I've no definite information regarding Louise Glaum's cooking prowess. Why?

SUBURBANITE: Yes, I know considerable about Nazimova. She is married to Charles Bryant, who is leading man in most of her pictures. She was born in Talta, Crimea, Russia. Her principal stage productions were "A Doll's House," "The Master Builder," and "War Brides." She played "War Brides" in pictures, also.

Jackies in Review Present Inspiring Sight to Visitors

By Mme. X.

UNDER a dazzling blue sky, with pine scented breeze from Michigan woods across the lake, war's most brilliant and exhilarating aspect was presented to those members of the military medical convention who visited the Great Lakes Naval Training station last Wednesday afternoon. Of the 35,000 jackies now there, 10,000 lads—bronzed, vigorous, eager—passed before Capt. Moffett and his guests on the little reviewing stand in front of the administration building. Each regiment was headed by its melodiously blaring band and its color bearers.

The rows of seated visitors stood up every time the Stars and Stripes hove on the horizon and remained standing until the national emblem was well past. The spectators, of whom there were thousands, applauded a good deal, but gave their greatest enthusiasm to a small band of khaki clad marines, just back from the Philippines. Cantigny was in mind and the record made there by our fighting sailors in that section of the French line.

From the upper ether the droning hum of the station's pet hydro-aeroplane occasionally distracted the onlookers, as the big tin bird slowly whirled and dipped overhead. The same sort of misguided, egotistical mortal who thinks each flash of lightning in a thunderstorm is searching for him (or her) thought that hydroaeroplane was going to fall on his (or her) head—and nowhere else. A dose of war would be the wholesomest medicine for such as these. In the airplane with the pilot, Lieut. Lee Hammond, was Lieut. Ogden McClurg, though his extremely pretty wife, seated among the earthbound gazers, didn't know it.

Foreigners See Review.

On the reviewing stand with Capt. Moffett were M. Justin Godart, the great French authority on camp sanitation. He is also the member from Lyons in the chamber of deputies. Nearby was his aid, Maj. Locard, in civilian life a well known French criminologist, but now wearing the horizon blue uniform and serving in the French army medical corps.

The most picturesque foreigner in the group was Lieut. Violini of Italy's famous Alpine chasseurs, who, with his peaked hat and its cocky little quill, his natty gray green uniform, and his fine, classic profile, looked as if he had stepped from one of Benozzo Gozzoli's fifteenth century frescoes.

Others standing with Capt. Moffett were William R. Wrigley (Yes, he's that same Wrigley to whom the chewing world is so deeply indebted) and Julius Rosenwald, just returned with his family from Washington.

All the visitors, especially the foreigners, were profoundly impressed with the spectacle of those marching men and what it represented. Every day the finished product, the perfect jackie, is being sent into active service from 600 to 800 at a time, while the vacancies thus made are more than filled by the daily quota of new enlistments. One day last week brought in 1,800 raw recruits.

Drafted.

An amusing incident was that of the man who, not a recruit, got off the train at the naval station with a batch of volunteers. The officer in charge said to him:

"You're out of line. Step in!"

"But I've not enlisted," he protested.

"Hurry up! Get in with the rest!" was the sole response, and before he knew it the luckless outsider was hustled into the detention camp, where he spent forty-eight miserable hours before he managed to convince any authority that he was not a candidate for life on the briny. Finally the doctor who was giving typhoid injections gave ear to his tale of woe and secured his freedom.

The last seen of him was his hasty departure on foot in the direction of Waukegan, as he was afraid to wait for any train, for fear of being again enmeshed in another band of singing, shouting recruits

Somehow those singing, shouting bands of newly enlisted men in their civilian clothes, each carrying his little valise, that one encounters on so many trains bound north from the Northwestern station, make the heart sad They lean out of the car windows and the sound of their incoherent cheers and greetings spreads through the train and out over the station platforms, and knocks on the door of your consciousness They seem to be saying:

"We are going for you. We're just ordinary, everyday human beings and don't know you from Adam, and yet we're going for you, and you're not looking at us, or thinking about us."

They're still individuals, but when next you see them the pathos has departed. They are no longer separate entities; they are a glorious composite of youth, health, vigor, training—the finest product of our democracy.

Answer Every Call.

For them, and for the men in khaki from Fort Sheridan and Camp Grant the women of Chicago are daily enlarging the field of their endeavors to help and cheer. The canteen in Grant park, under Mrs. George McKinlock, is doing increasingly valuable work for our men. There is never a call to meet a train load of soldiers that is not promptly answered, no matter at what hour of the day or night such a call comes.

Miss Cornelia Conger arrived at home at half past 10 o'clock one evening after a long hard day at the canteen and found a summons for her to have her squad of young women on hand the next morning at 6 to meet a large detachment of troops on the way to France. This meant telephoning her eighteen co-workers before going to bed that night, and it further meant their assembling at the canteen at 5 a. m. the following dawn to prepare coffee and sandwiches to be taken to a distant railway yard. Some of her squad live in the suburbs, which necessitated an even earlier start for them. But not one of her eighteen was either absent or late.

It's hard to overestimate what it meant for those soldiers, hurrying into God knows what, to find this band of gay, friendly young women at the station offering them hot coffee, good sandwiches, comforting cigarets, pencils, and postcards.

Mrs. McKinlock, who is untiring in her work for the army and navy boys, has now arranged with the park boards of the city so that men being shipped through Chicago can get a swim or a plunge at some one or other of the bathing beaches or municipal swimming pools—a most welcome treat after a long, hot, dusty car ride!

Club for Men on Leave.

One of the finest enterprises ever undertaken for the benefit of our men in uniform is that being set on foot by Mrs. James Keeley and the members of the Chicago recreation board. It is a project to build in Grant park, east of the railway tracks and of Mrs. McKinlock's canteen, a big pavilion, where our soldiers and jackies who come on furlough to Chicago can make their headquarters. It will have rest rooms, shower baths, a canteen, and a great dance platform in the open air.

The south park board has granted this women's committee this privilege, and John Richards, head of the south park recreation parks committee, is throwing himself heart and soul into this undertaking. Mrs. John Carpenter and Arthur Heun are helping the south park board's architect in perfecting the plans, and it promises to be one of the most attractive of the many schemes to entertain and take care of the holiday lads from our nearby training camps.

You see lots of these boys come to town with practically no money except their return fare. But for such places as this pavilion, the Soldiers and Sailors' club in West Washington street, and the Woman's club supper in the public library many of them would walk the streets hungry and friendless. And there are literally thousands of them pouring into Chicago Saturdays and Sundays, so that it would be impossible to oversupply them with places for rest and recreation. [This last is to answer the many who say, "Aren't we doing too much for them?"]

Ball Game to Raise Funds.

To provide the sinews of war, Mr. Comiskey, that noblest Roman of them all, is giving Comiskey park and its receipts for the Chicago-Cleveland game next Thursday afternoon (barring 10 per cent for the Red Cross, which he always reserves out of every game).

Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman is head of a committee of men and women to sell the boxes for this great sporting event. Assisting her are Mesdames R. T. Crane, William Odell, Joseph M. Pattersen, Jacob Baur, John Borden, Samuel Insull, Heaton Owsley, William J. Chalmers, James Witkowsky, and Joseph Long, and the Messrs. Henry Patten, Robert Dunham, and Howard Gillette.

In line with the war recreation board work is the soldiers' athletic carnival being planned for the Fourth of July at Camp Grant. Mrs. Samuel T. Chase is chairman of the women's committee. There will be a baseball game, bronco busting, and field meet, while a boxing exhibition will end the program.

A mammoth open air arena is being built for the event, which is planned both as a farewell to the men now at Camp Grant (who probably will sail for France in July) and to raise money to buy overseas athletic equipment for the soldiers of the Eighty-sixth division, which is Gen. Martin's contingent.

Satin Tops for Socks.

The latest dodge in knitting socks is to put a band of satin around the inside top, the reason being that the "cooties" can't abide satin and won't traverse any district protected by it. So, if you want to finish your sock with the latest "scream," add that little strip of satin around the ribbed tops of your next pair.

While the Red Cross and other bandage making enterprises are stopping for the moment the making of such hospital supplies, the call for socks continues without cessation. And when one thinks where the feet that shall wear those socks are marching, how they are treading out the vineyards where the grapes of wrath are stored, and that a large part of a soldier's comfort and usefulness depends upon the condition of his feet, no patriotic knitter will stay her hand or rest her needles.

If the genus "masher" is not yet extinct—and you'd think these stern times would accomplish his extermination—he is destined to an early annihilation if left to the tender mercies of the modern woman. One of the prettiest of north side young matrons was walking across the State street viaduct on a bright June morning lately. To be sure, she did look particularly chic and attractive, but that's no excuse nowadays. A youth, in rather exuberant attire, whistled softly as she passed him and made a sotto voce observation to no one in particular, but of unmistakable intent.

Turning, she stepped toward him and said: "Aren't you of draft age?" and then walked on, wondering how she had ever had the courage to do it.

A similar question to every creature of this ilk would soon drive them to their holes—or better still, to the purifying discipline of a training camp.

A notable visitor from overseas who is coming to Chicago this week is Lord Dunmore, a Britisher, who has been in the war, was wounded, and is now serving his country in a civilian capacity. He will be the guest of the Joseph Colemans for a few days and then will vist the Samuel Insulls at Libertyville.

Appeals for Nurses.

Letters from "over there" are increasingly absorbing in their interest. One from Miss Mary Hoyt Wiborg, formerly one of New York's gayest, smartest young women, makes an especial appeal for nurses for French military hospitals.

She herself is assisting in the operating room of the same hospital where Miss Suzette Ryerson is stationed—a hospital where they receive the wounded right from the trenches, and which is frequently bombed by the Germans. She writes:

> At first I didn't think I could stand the sights. They give no anesthetics and the men's screams keep me awake nights. But I can now stand that somewhat, but not the pity of it—it's so like some medieval sacrifice to torture, the way the men give themselves up. And they all die so simply as if it was all they could do to help—Christlike. . . .
> It's a rough life. We live in big stone barracks like soldiers and hear the cannons' heavy barrage fire, day and night, and are bombed by Boches avians whenever it's a clear night. . . . We had a terrific bombbombed by the Boches' avions over our heads night before last. They dropped sixty bombs near—three within 200 yards. You couldn't see me for the dust beating it out into the open.
>
> The noise was terrific. The glamour of the Fourth of July is forever ruined—but what a wonderful sight! Bright moonlight night—shrapnel and star shells bursting in the sky, and the put-put of the machine guns of the French avions and the crash of the bombs falling, which makes the whole town tremble.

What an experience for a gently reared American girl!

Move Farther North.

One of the changes of location which mark the northward flow of the residents in the district between Ohio street and Lincoln Park is the purchase by James B. Waller of Mrs. Marion Stevens' house on the southeast corner of Astor and Schiller streets. The Wallers have for so many years lived in the old Winston house in East Superior street that their going leaves quite a hole in that neighborhood.

Mrs. Chauncey McCormick has already left the old William McCormick house in Rush street and moved to what was Mrs. Luther Bodman's house in North State street.

It is not out of place here to call attention to the progress in the building of one of the most beautiful examples of ecclesiastical architecture to be found not only in Chicago but anywhere in the country, the James Quigley memorial, in Rush street, a preparatory school for priests. It is fast nearing completion as to its exterior, which is a fine example of Flemish Gothic.

If we are demolishing landmarks on the west side of what was Lincoln parkway (it's hard to call it North Michigan avenue) we are putting up a new one which dominates Rush street as you look up it from the bridge, and which will be a joy forever. It is with great satisfaction that we note the statues already placed in some of the niches. The empty niches in the nearby Gothic Fourth Presbyterian church always distress the observant observer. One wonders what graven images could be placed in those recepacles by the followers of John Knox.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Mrs. William S. Monroe

Mrs. William S. Monroe is president of the Illinois Society for Mental Hygiene under whose auspices women are being trained for mental reconstruction work with handicapped soldiers. Working with the woman's committee, Council of National Defense, the society is planning a campaign for the work in every center.

Miss Josephine Palmer is vice chairman of the war savings campaign for Chicago. President Wilson has set aside June 28 for the drive, but the women of Chicago have decided to work for one week preceding that date. They will begin their campaign on Thursday.

Illinois Leading in Plans to Help Crippled Soldiers

ILLINOIS was the first state to realize the need of extensive preparation for the return of the handicapped soldier. The problem of making life pleasant to the crippled, to the nervous, to the mentally deficient has, for the last four years, been met by the Illinois Society for Mental Hygiene, and it was this society that realized its opportunity. Harvard university, Columbia university, and Seattle have since followed the example of Illinois.

"Our first war work class was started last November," said Mrs. William S. Monroe, president of the Society for Mental Hygiene, "and we have graduated over forty splendidly equipped women. The course means steady, intensive work for six weeks, with original study at home, and three months' practice work either in the state hospital for the insane or in various other hospitals. Of these graduates the majority are doing work in hospitals, two are doing practice work in the military convalescent hospital in Canada, six are at the Chicago State hospital and six are at Elgin."

Much as women are needed to take these courses and although applications have come in from all over the country, only the well qualified applicants can be considered. A college education or the equivalent, a knowledge of psychology, an imagination, personality, and tact are all insisted upon. "In fact I would say that a woman must have two-thirds imagination and personality to one-third technical knowledge," said Mrs. Monroe.

The technical knowledge—the art of being able to judge and teach the right kind of work to stimulate the sick body or mind—is taught by lectures and demonstration work, the demonstration work being done at the Henry B. Favill school under Mrs. Eleanor Slagle. Thus a graduate would be able to tell the means by which a soldier could get the greatest amount of usefulness from his crippled arm or leg and would teach him weaving, carpentering, basketry, or whatever would make the sick muscle or nerve function normally.

The great benefit that the handicapped soldiers will obtain from this teaching is proved by the remarkable effect it has had upon the patients at home. Reports have come from Elgin that the patients are now much interested in weaving, basketry, and bandaging.

Working with courses of instruction of the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense, the Society for Mental Hygiene has recently sent through the state a prospectus of work to be accomplished and the training offered, in response to which six counties have appointed committees to prepare for the return of the physically and nervously handicapped men. Stereopticon lectures are being arranged with these different committees.

Mrs. Monroe, emphasizing the necessity of the undertaking, said: "There is a big work to be done in finding out all the resources that can be counted on in each vicinity, in preparing public opinion in each community as to the best way to treat the returned handicapped men, and in helping to strengthen the social and curative agencies already existing so that no time will be lost when these men come home."

WOMEN IN WARTIME.

Cook county holds fifty-sixth place from the top in the war savings stamp sale record and the women have decided to take the entire week of June 20 to 28 for their campaign. Banks, theaters, hotels, street booths, etc., will each furnish solicitors and the women have arranged to make the buying of the stamps as convenient as possible by arranging that one may charge his pledge to hotel, department store account, club, or bank. Mrs. A. Hamilton Lamm is chairman of the booths, Mrs. Edward J. Fleming of the ward leaders, Mrs. M. K. Armstrong of the federated club committee and Mrs. Clarke Bennett of the theaters. Illinois had its war savings pledge week May 11 to 18, and the full quota of $125,000,000 was not raised. It is to meet this deficit that the present drive is to made.

Mrs. Robert S. Hotz has followed the example of Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick and has opened a neighborhood center at her residence at 3032 Sheridan road where Twenty-third ward children under 6 years of age may be brought to be weighed and measured for the government records. This is part of the work of the United States children's year, under the direction of the child welfare department of the woman's committee of the State Council of Defense. Miss W. M. Childs and Mrs. Claire More are other workers in this ward, and have opened weighing and measuring stations in the schools, using the equipment, including scales and clerical material which was used by the members of the exemption board of the locality.

Mrs. H. G. Phillips of the Rogers Park Woman's club, who is child welfare chairman for her district, has done some extensive work in installing weighing and measuring stations in the Twenty-fifth ward, and helping her are Mrs. Samuel Horner and Mrs. P. H. Munson. Another banner ward in the child welfare work is the Twenty-seventh, where Mrs. E. J. Stewart has opened a station at 4045 Milwaukee avenue, in which there will be clinics to which mothers may bring their children for examination and consultation and, where later there will be a series of pre-natal clinics for expectant mothers. The Rev. Francis Cikowski of Our Lady of Victory Roman Catholic church has opened a weighing and measuring center in the school hall. Mrs. Ernest Ingram has charge of the work in the Ninth ward.

Mrs. Samuel Hardy, who is at the head of the ward organization work for the child welfare campaign now going on in the city in connection with children's year, has charge of the opening of stations throughout the city, and now has 150 stations. The station at 69 East Monroe street will be opened for the coming week at least, and mothers may bring their children below 6 years there to be weighed and measured for the government.

Information booths have been installed by the food for France fund committee in the general headquarters, 434 First National Bank building. Tomorrow at 2:30 Mrs. Louis M. Stumer, who has charge of the special sales daily in the shop at 76 East Madison street, will hold a meeting at the headquarters to complete plans for the summer campaign at the shop. Various women will be assigned special days for service with their respective committees. Mrs. James Clarke Jeffery, Chicago deputy, with Miss Anne Parker Miner, is planning a summer full of ways and means for earning money for the cause.

Mrs. Harrison Parker and her daughter, Miss Mary Parker, will head the children's auxiliary and endeavor to make a large sum of money while away in the northern woods where they will spend their vacation. Mrs. Harry E. Byram and Mrs. Edward L. Middleton will work for the fund in Evanston during the warm weather. The information booths will be open daily from 10 until 5 beginning tomorrow.

A "summer festival of song and dance" will be given by the ladies' auxiliary of the Town and Country club at the club house, 2841 Washington boulevard, on Friday evennig, for the benefit of the war relief fund.

◆

A simple band of black three inches wide, upon which shall be placed a gold star for each member of a family lost in the service of the country, is the only form of mourning approved for the women of America, who may have to see their sons go away never to return. The woman's committee, Council of National Defense, has adopted and the president of the United States approved of the above form of memorial for the sons of America. The band is to be worn on the left arm, near the heart.

The supplemental registration of women teachers and high school girls for summer war work has been slightly delayed on account of the pressfeeders' strike, according to Mrs. Robert De Golyer of the registration department of the woman's committee. The charts giving the synopsis of the different kinds of work to be done will not be at the schools until Tuesday.

◆

The lawyers of the Chicago bar are becoming enthusiastically interested in the plan proposed some time ago that during the summer vacation they assist food production by going to the farms where labor is needed and doing farm work.

The Ravinia club has announced the following advisory board for its war recreation work at Ravinia: Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, Mrs. C. T. Boynton, Mrs. Hermon Butler, Mrs. Reuben H. Donnelly, Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. Cyrus McCormick, Mrs. Andrew McLeish, and Mrs. Julius Rosenwald. The executive committee, which is composed of women who are responsible for the work of the entire organization, expects to entertain about 25,000 men in uniform during the ten weeks' season. The committee includes Mrs. Bruce McLeish, chairman; Mrs. Leeds Mitchell, vice chairman; Mrs. W. A. Alexander, Mrs. Ford R. Carter, Mrs. Noble Crandall, Mrs. J. Allen Haines, and Mrs. T. W. Robinson.

Mrs. J. Gordon Wilson, vice chairman of the allied relief committee of the woman's committee, Council of National Defense, and a leading worker in the Red Cross, will leave in a few days for France to do rehabilitation work and to supervise all the French sections of the allied relief committee. Need for the additional relief work comes as the result of the recent German drive, and was brought home to Chicago women by a cable from Mrs. Benjamin Lathrop, head of the Paris depot of the American fund for French wounded. Money, hospital supplies, and surgical dressings are greatly needed also, it is stated. With Mrs. Wilson will go two trained nurses—Mrs. Anastasia Linehan of Petoskey, Mich., and Miss Blanche Palmer of Evanston. Miss Bessie Howe of Los Angeles, Miss Mary Hughes of Columbus, O., and Miss Clark and Miss Elizabeth McGregor of St. Paul also will be in the party.

In less than one month's time the Ninth ward has enrolled 690 girls in the Patriotic Service league. There will be a girls' rally today at West Pullman Field house.

Miss Caroline Harris, director of the refugee clothing department of the Chicago chapter, American Red Cross, says that boys' blouses are needed badly. The official pattern for them can be had at room 409, Garland building, 53 East Washington street.

The employment department of the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense is placing seventy-five women a day, according to Miss Florence Schee, the director. The call has come into the employment bureau for girl helpers at Waukesha. The pay will be $1.75 per day to beginners, who can, as soon as they wish, go on piece work and get from $3 to $4 a day. The R. L. Kenyon company runs a home where the girls are taken care of for $5 a week. Apply to Miss Florence Schee, employment bureau, 120 West Adams street.

Tinkle, tinkle, little dime,
Come into this bank of mine.
Every cent you leave by chance
Helps to purchase food for France.

This jingle will adorn every little bank that the food for France fund committee sends out to automobile owners for the refugees "over there." A number of the committee members have moved to their country places, and from now on when motoring into the city will ask their friends to drive in with them, at the same time calling attention to the little bank, which no doubt will receive the equivalent of carfare and commutation tickets.

"The House the Sox Built." That is one alluring name which has been suggested for the new recreation pavilion in Grant park for the soldiers and sailors, which is to be helped along through the proceeds of the Chicago-Cleveland ball game to be played at the Sox park on Thursday.

Mrs. James Keeley, chairman of the hostess committee of the war recreation board in Chicago and Great Lakes, wanted to raise at least $25,000 for the new pavilion, and she thought that the best way to get money out at this season of the year was to arrange a baseball game in exchange. So she saw Mr. Comiskey. Mr. Comiskey saw the point, and all Chicago will see the game, which is to be in the nature of a big rollicking party.

Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman is chairman of the committee on boxes and associated with her are Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. John A. Carpenter, Mrs. Richard T. Crane Jr., Mrs. Samuel Insull, Mrs. Cyrus Hall McCormick, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mrs. Charles Frankenthal, and a number of other women.

The Daughters of 1918 will assist in the plans for the day, and the Woodlawn Woman's club is also coöperating to make it a success.

Unregistered nurses who are graduated from first class hospitals will no longer be refused by the Red Cross, so great is the necessity for nurses to care for the soldiers overseas and in the cantonments in this country. The bars have been let down to this extent and the 13,500 nurses in this country who are not registered and who at present occupy positions in hospitals, public health organizations, and in private practice can sign up with the Red Cross.

Miss Mary Wood Hinman, state representative of the hostess activities of the war recreation board, is asking for contributions of second hand typewriters for the use of army and navy men in camp. Address all communications and typewriters to the war recreation board, 120 West Adams street.

The Elks' Red Cross unit 49 will remain open all summer with the exception of three weeks in July, when the club forming this Red Cross goes to Atlantic City to meet other Elks' clubs from all over the country and enlist them in women's war work. Mrs. Louis M. Cohn, chairman of the unit, will go as a delegate to Atlantic City.

Asks Church to Give to Mission on Anniversary

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE REV. NORMAN HUTTON, rector of St. Chrysostom's Protestant Episcopal church, 1424 Dearborn parkway, is asking his church to celebrate the tenth year of his rectorship by giving $2,000 to missions. Dr. Hutton completed his ninth year as rector on May 1. The church in 1909 gave $87 for missions. Last year it gave $1,500. In making the announcement of his desire to signalize his tenth year in this unique way he said: "This year I am ambitious to reach $2,000 as a thanksgiving for my ten years of happy rectorship. I want to mark the anniversary in no other way than by a splendid offering to general and diocesan missions. I suggest the plan of giving one day's income as a method of accomplishing this. I have constantly reiterated an emphasis on missions and ardently worked to make the larger offerings an accomplished fact. Year by year the parish has accepted a larger missionary budget. This latest gift we hope will be a real expression of our gratefulness for blessings given us."

The Hyde Park Presbyterian church service flag contained thirty-three stars six months ago. It now has ninety stars.

The men's Bible class of the Normal Park Presbyterian church, Seventy-first street and Normal avenue, is seeking a membership of 100 by June 30. John D. Shoop, superintendent of Chicago schools, is teacher of the class. The present membership is divided into squads presided over by lieutenants, and each squad is seeking new members. The pastor, the Rev. O. M. Caward, is serving as a chaplain in the army, and the church membership is determined to keep the home fires burning.

The Rev. Smith T. Ford, pastor of the Englewood Baptist church, who has been absent from his church for three months because of illness, has been granted a vacation until September. In a communication to the church he said he was steadily returning to health.

The Rev. J. H. Littell, pastor of the Third United Presbyterian church, has been granted a release for Y. M. C. A. work for the period of the war.

The school of missions under interdenominational auspices will begin next Thursday at Winona Lake, Ind., continuing one week. Mrs. C. E. Vickers, Oak Park, is chairman of the committee. There are seventeen denominations united in the administration of the school.

A service flag containing 174 stars, representing the present enrollment of the members of the church who have entered the military service, will be raised in St. Gertrude's Roman Catholic church, Glenwood and Granville avenues, today. The Rev. P. F. Shewbridge is pastor. A patriotic address will be delivered by the Right Rev. F. X. McCabe, president of De Paul university.

The newly dedicated Sheridan Road Methodist Episcopal church, corner Hazel and Sunnyside avenues, will hold a unique service today when the pastor, the Rev. J. L. Anderson, will preach his first sermon in the new auditorium. All contractors and workmen who had a part in the erection of the building will be the guests of the church and will be told how their work is appreciated.

The Rev. Carl D. Case

The Rev. Carl D. Case is the pastor of the First Baptist church, Oak Park, which has recently purchased for $33,000 a site on which a new church will be built. Dr. Case, who received the degree of doctor of philosophy from the University of Chicago, after graduating also from the divinity school of the university, came to the Oak Park church in March. His previous pastorate, of more than ten years in length, was of the Delaware Avenue Baptist church, Buffalo, N. Y., where he led in the raising of $50,000 to pay off a church debt and greatly increased the church membership. The new church site is in Oak Park avenue, Grove avenue, and Ontario street. Dr. Case succeeded as pastor the Rev. Dr. D. T. Denman.

The Rev. Joseph Armand Taillon, who was ordained on May 18 at San Antonio, Tex., by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Shaw, will celebrate today his first solemn mass at St. John the Baptist [French] church, Fiftieth place and Peoria street. Father Taillon was educated in Chicago at the Cathedral College of the Sacred Heart. He then entered the Theological seminary of the Oblate Fathers, about eight years ago, and will belong to the missionary band of the Oblate Fathers.

The Rev. Frank D. Burhans has resigned the pastorate of the Park Manor Congregational church, South Park avenue and Seventieth street. His resignation was accepted, the resignation taking effect in September. He has been pastor for more than three and a half years. Resolutions of commendation were passed expressing regret at his resignation.

Dr. C. F. Wishart, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, Michigan avenue and Twentieth street, will leave tomorrow for service in Camp Lewis and Camp Karney on the western coast. The church has given Dr. Wishart over two months' leave of absence that he may devote all of his time to war work. Dr. Wishart spent the month of December in these western camps and the Y. M. C. A. has requested his return. He will preach his farewell sermons today and will not be in the pulpit again until September. The subject of the morning sermon will be "Valediction," the evening theme will be "Wild Doubts of Doubt."

News and Gossip of Social Doings at the Capital

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special Correspondence.]—This week was an old fashioned June wedding week with weddings galore, true to the spirit of June. Many of them were conspicuous weddings, too, even for a part of the country where its prominent residents are often men and women of international reputation.

There was Margaret McChord's marriage on Saturday at St. John's, to Lieut. George Leroy Boyle of the aviation corps. It was Lieut. Boyle who carried the first aero mail from Washington to Philadelphia. Practically all announcement of the wedding party was kept from the public even up to the last moment. Indeed, Miss McChord kept insisting that she did not know their names herself or expect to until she saw them at church, for you see orders issue here so fast and furiously that every tie under the sun is broken up and not even the wedding day obligations are immune from disruption.

Pretty Amy Bennett was married at home on the same day to Lieut. Claude Langlais with only a few intimate friends and no attendants. The reason for this extreme quiet was apparently that none of the lieutenant's family were able to be here, as they are all in deep mourning for a brother of the lieutenant who was killed in action a short time ago. The lieutenant will stay on in America for some time, it is said, and during the summer they will live at the Bennett residence here. In the fall they will take an apartment for the winter.

Another Wedding at Elkins Home.

Miss Frances Wilkinson of Evanston is to be one of the bridesmaids in the wedding party attending Miss Hallie Elkins Davis, who will be married to Lieut. George Percy, U. S. M. C., on June 22.

The wedding will take place in the home of Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins. Only recently several delightful weddings have taken place in her home. You remember when Miss Rebekah Collier became the bride of Capt. Pitt Scott, U. S. N., the wedding was in Mrs. Elkins' home.

Miss Davis, who is Mrs. Elkins' namesake as well as her niece, is to have a large and interesting party, all well known Washingtonians.

It is a sure enough wedding this, no war wedding at all. According to Mrs. Armstead Davis, it was to have been deferred until after the war—yes! But this was a case of mother proposing and the lovers disposing. Lately it developed, too, that Lieut. Percy would not be sent abroad for several months, which fact helped in convincing Mrs. Davis as to the wisdom and desirability of the wedding.

Most Weddings Quiet.

Nor should Elsie Calder's wedding be omitted simply because she was married in Brooklyn instead of Washington. Miss Calder and Miss McChord have been great friends for the last two years, both of them residing at the Willard and moving in the same set. Miss Calder was married to Lieut. Robert Corwin Lee, U. S. N.

And, of course, there was the wedding at Lenox of Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and Raymond T. Baker, director of the mint. The couple will settle in Washington for the winter, it is said. Mr. Baker is prominently identified here with the administration and is of the White House inner circles.

It is noticeable in the majority of weddings taking place these days that they are quiet, with a decided absence of pomp and ceremony. The brides, too, are more serious and indulging in no wealth of festivities beforehand. Just hurried preparations, a few announcements, informal bridal parties, if any at all, and either just a few intimate friends invited to the home or to a simple church wedding.

Nurse Home from France.

Any aspiring young girl who dreams romantic dreams of romantic nurses and romantic patients meeting together for ecstatic moments under moonlit skies of France should listen for a few minutes to Miss Alice Harvey talk.

Miss Harvey is Gen. W. E. Harvey's sister and is just back from the war zone, having been one of the first nurses sent over there. She has been right in the thick of it all, in the unforgettable Toul sector, and what she has to say does not sound in the least colored by any mauve tinted sentiment. Just hard, heavy, laborious work she has known, of all sorts and varieties, too—washing dishes, scrubbing kitchen floors, slaving as laboriously and desperately as any poverty stricken peasant of Russia, putting up with every kind of material inconvenience, and keeping cheerful through it all.

Now Miss Harvey has applied for transport duty, hoping and believing that soon nurses will be employed as part of the regular staff on transport ships.

Estates Offered Red Cross.

While I am mentioning active service workers I'll speak of the comment that is being caused by the offer of Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt of their mansion, "Idle Hour," and the accompanying estate of thousands of acres on Long Island as a home for convalescent soldiers under the direction of the Red Cross. Ensign Vincent Astor and Clarence H. Mackay have offered their estates, too, for the same purpose.

The Vanderbilt home will accommodate some 1,500 men and several hundred acres on the place are already under cultivation for vegetables so that considerable food will go along with the estate. Since the beginning of the war Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt have been in France doing active war work there and two of their French estates have been turned over to the government for the same purpose.

Vincent Astor was the first to offer his residence. He wanted the Red Cross to take Ferncliffe on the Hudson. It has not been accepted by the Red Cross, nor has Mr. Mackay's offer of his Harbor hill estate at Roslyn, L. I., nor has Mr. Vanderbilt's offer been formally accepted.

Hurt in Fall From Horse.

Felicia Gizycka is recovering from her fall a few days ago when her horse slipped and she fell with it. As soon as she is quite recovered the Countess Eleanor Gizycka and her daughter will go to their ranch in Wyoming, where they spent last summer and where Felicia spends most of her time horseback riding.

Miss Mabel Boardman, fresh and enthusiastic on her return from France, where she made a tour of inspection doing Red Cross work, spoke this week at the formal opening of the Red Cross convalescent house at Walter Reed hospital. She described vividly her visit abroad, and told of the need of convalescent homes. It was a brilliant audience which any midwinter production of grand opera might be proud of that attended the presentation of the war film Monday night of "Hearts of the World" at Poli's. Secretary McAdoo and Mrs. McAdoo returned from White Sulphur Springs for the occasion and were with the president and Mrs. Wilson, and so were Miss Margaret Wilson and Miss Helen Woodrow Bones.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Ruth V. Forschler of New Orleans, La., to Allen Coman Wood, formerly of Evanston. Mr. Wood is stationed at Camp Pike, Ark.

The engagement is announced of Miss Katherine Kingsley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer H. Kingsley of Evanston, to Lieut. Thomas Henry Boyd, son of Dr. John H. Boyd. Lieut. Boyd is assigned to Camp Lewis, Wash.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Tisley Ward of 1357 Farwell avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Mae Agnes, to Lieut. De Witt C. Frisbee, son of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Frisbee. Lieut. Frisbee is at Camp Pike, Ark.

FUTURE EVENTS.

Plans for the great farewell carnival to be held on July 4 at Camp Grant for the benefit of the overseas athletic fund are rapidly being completed and every one connected with the management of the affair is working to make it the greatest success possible. Especially busy is the women's committee, of which Mrs. Samuel T. Chase is chairman.

The carnival will open with a parade, which will start at 7 o'clock in the morning. The Eighty-sixth division, including approximately 40,000 men, will parade from Camp Grant to Rockford and return, finishing at the camp about noon. The parade will be reviewed in Rockford by Maj. Gen. Charles H. Martin, the staff, and many distinguished visitors. After luncheon at 1:30 o'clock there will be an exciting exhibition of bronco busting at Five Points, opposite the division headquarters. At 2 o'clock there will be a baseball game between Camp Grant and Fort Dodge, which will be played on the Five Points parade ground.

At 4 o'clock the boxing matches will take place and also the dedication of the mammoth open air arena, which will seat 10,000 and is overlooked by a hill upon which 20,000 soldiers will be grouped. At 6 o'clock there will be the Illinois centennial pageant on the hillside near the boxing arena. Seven hundred children of Rockford will take part in this. At 9 o'clock there will be a great display of fireworks and military aerial activities. The display will be centered at Five Points, in the heart of the camp, where it can be viewed comfortably by 100,000 people. Under the direction of the commanding general, all the deserving men of the division will be at liberty after the parade to spend the afternoon and evening with the folks from home.

On Monday and Tuesday evenings the block in Ninth street, between Michigan and Wabash avenues, will be gay as a Normandy fête and street carnival. The street will be lighted and decorated and there will be dancing, strolling players, a Punch and Judy show, and numerous other attractions. There will also be a musical and a group of plays given in the Paulist choir hall, which is in Ninth street. The proceeds of the fête will go to the Chaplain's Aid association, which provides chaplains' outfits for religious services in the trenches. The Rev. William N. Foley of St. Ambrose's church is vicar general for the western district.

The graduating exercises of the training school for nurses of St. Luke's hospital will be held tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in Trinity church, Twenty-sixth street and Michigan avenue. There will be a reception at 9:30 o'clock at Stickney house, 1416 Indiana avenue.

A dinner for three brides of this month whose husbands are in the service will be given on Wednesday night at the Hotel La Salle by the Alpha chapter of the Phi Alpha Tau sorority. The brides are Mrs. John Weiland, whose husband is at the Great Lakes Naval Training station; Mrs. Harold H. King, whose husband is a lieutenant in the One Hundred and Thirty-first regiment, now in France, and Mrs. A. W. Lewis, whose husband is also in service in France.

The annual summer outing of the Wisconsin society will be a trip to the Great Lakes next Wednesday afternoon. At 1:30 o'clock Commandant Moffett and his staff will receive the members and guests in front of the administration building, and at 2 o'clock 25,000 jackies and the Great Lakes band of 400 musicians will give an exhibition drill on the parade ground. At 3 o'clock an interesting program of athletic exercises will commence. Boxing and wrestling matches will take place in the natural open air amphitheater, which is situated in one of the beautiful grass carpeted ravines. A special train will leave the Chicago and Northwestern station at 12:20 o'clock. Judge John P. McGoorty is president of the society, Lynn A. Williams the secretary, and George H. Lamberton the chairman of the entertainment committee.

Mrs. Archibald Freer, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Schweitzer, Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Horstmann, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Kandull, Mrs. J. W. Ford, Mrs. Lulu Jones Downing, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Utley, O. G. Forrer, J. S. Chalmarson, Frank J. Bishop Fallows will speak upon "Music in War" and others on the program will be Mme. Ferne Gramling, dramatic soprano, and Elsie Edgar Bennett, reader. Mrs. Emma Clark-Mottl is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

When Your Baby Can't Sleep

IT'S in the long, peaceful hours of sleep that your baby grows. When he can't sleep something is wrong. Probably his food is wrong.

Perhaps his little system is desperately struggling with the heavy curd of raw cows' milk. No wonder he can't sleep!

Nurse him if you can. If you can't, give him the nearest thing in the world to mother's milk—Nestlé's Food.

Because it has fresh cows' milk as a basis, it contains all the good that cows' milk contains.

Because all the dangers are removed, the tough curd made easy to digest, and all baby needs added, it is just what your baby requires to build a healthy body.

Because it is purified and carefully watched in process — and reduced to a powder—and it comes to you in an airtight can — it is as free from germs as mother's milk itself.

It is a complete food for your baby—you add only water and boil.

Remember, it is raw cows' milk that so often brings germs of diphtheria, scarlet fever and summer complaint to your baby. Keep those deadly germs away from him. Keep him safe on Nestlé's Food.

Send the coupon or a postcard for a free trial package of 12 feedings and the 96-page book about babies by specialists. Do it today for your baby's sake.

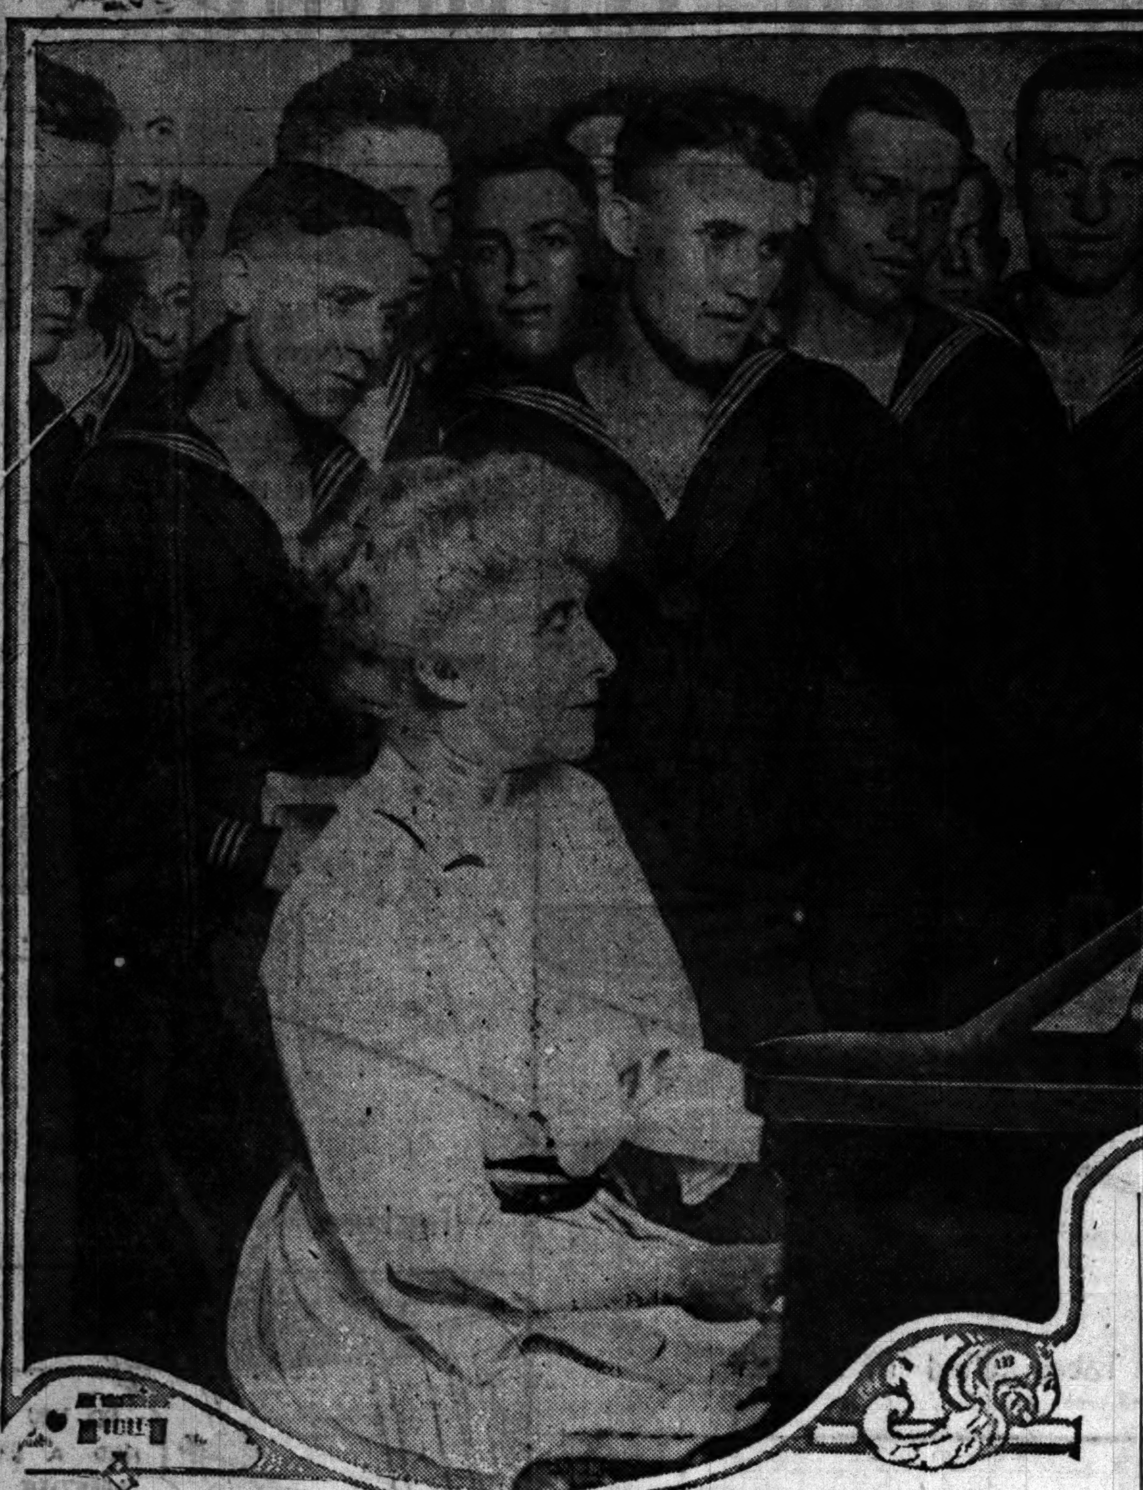
Clubhouse for Soldiers to Be Built on the Lake Front.



Mrs. John Marshall Clark and Jackies at the Arts Club

CHARLES COMISKEY'S generosity assures a pavilion in Grant park to the soldiers and sailors. It assures to Chicago a big recreation center in the heart of the loop. Just as soon as ground can be broken construction will be begun.

The club is to be built in two units. First, there will be an assembly room, 60x40, open on one side, overlooking Lake Michigan. There will be two wings, extending from this toward the east. One of these will be devoted to the comfort of the men. There will be a lounge, writing desks, comfortable chairs, showers, and toilet facilities. The other will be devoted to offices and a rest room for women. There will be at the back of this big room a small stage, and on either side of the stage an arrangement for canteen service.

Extending from the first unit there will be a dancing platform as large as necessary to meet increasing demands of men on leave. There will be dances on Wednesday and Saturday nights during the summer and on Saturday afternoons and evenings. There will be small tables and chairs so that the men may gather in groups, be served with soft drinks if they desire, and listen to the music. Also they may bring their girls.

On week days it is proposed to gather into this club groups of drafted men who are still awaiting call. The war department is anxious to make these boys feel that they are a part of the community and to have them go out from their home city well equipped and with a sense that Chicago is behind them.

And Mr. Comiskey's White Sox are making all this possible. The great game is to be played next Thursday. Special features are being arranged. There will, of course, be a military band. There will be a special trained corps of auctioneers, who will auction the balls signed by celebrities.

A campaign will start tomorrow for the sale of tickets. The board of trade is to have a soldier and sailor on guard at its booth, and a great box of tickets has already been promised to eager fans. Tickets will also be on sale in the department stores, hotels, and clubs.

There is a strong committee behind all this activity. Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman is chairman of the committee on boxes and special stunts. Helping her are men and women who have given Chicago so many of its big successful public parties, among them Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. John Carpenter, Mrs. Cyrus Hall McCormick, Mrs. Richard T. Crane Jr., Mrs. Joseph M. Patterson, Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. William Odell, Mrs. Samuel Insull, Mrs. William J. Chalmers, Mrs. Jacob Bauer, Mrs. Charles Frankenthal, Henry M. Patten, Howard Gillett, Robert Dunham, Percy Hammond, and John A. Richards.

The plan originated in the hostess' committee of the war recreation board. It took shape when the women forming that committee began to discuss the summer needs of the men on leave. The various entertainments that had been going on all winter were coming to an end, and there was little to take their place.

The Casino ended its delightful Saturday night dinners in May, the Arts club entertainments will run only through June, and Mrs. Samuel Insull's gay dancing parties in the Commonwealth Edison building will be given up for the summer at about the same time. The Woman's Athletic club and the Standard club, both of which have given dinners and dances for the men during the winter, have given them up for the summer with the intention of resuming in the autumn.

Meanwhile the flood of boys continues to pour into Chicago—35,000 at Great Lakes station, 5,000 at Fort Sheridan, 800 on the pier, and 47,000 at Camp Grant. The need for something on a larger scale than anything Chicago has is quite obvious.

Of course the Chicago's Woman's club is "carrying on." Boys continue and will continue all summer to pour into its canteen, in charge of Miss Grace Temple, in the public library on Saturdays and Sundays. There were 1,400 last week. The dance in the clubrooms is just as popular as ever. Mrs. George W. Plummer is hostess in chief in the absence of Mrs. John Buckingham and her daughter.

The Art institute is crowded with young people on Sunday afternoons, where the Chicago Woman's Aid gives its party; and more and more boys are finding their way to the Chicago Historical society, the Cordon, the Insurance Exchange dance, Sinai temple, and the roof of the Young Women's Christian association.

But the demand is greater than the supply, and Miss Mabel Dodson, who is in the Soldiers' and Sailors' club, giving out tickets and information to boys from all over the United States who are in a big city for the first time, realizes better than any one else in Chicago how great the need for wholesome recreation is.

The hostess' committee was established by Miss Mary Wood Hinman, who has now been given the task of organizing recreation work in Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, and Minnesota. Mrs. James Keeley is now chairman of the committee, and Mrs. Carroll Sudler vice chairman.

It is a large and strong committee, drawn from all the various women's organizations of the city. Mrs. Samuel Insull is a member of it, as are Mrs. Frances Farwell, representing the One Hundred and Forty-ninth; Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss, Miss Grace Dixon, Miss Grace Temple, Mrs. George W. Plummer, Mrs. George McKinlock, Mrs. Heaton Owsley, Mrs. Charles Hamill, Mrs. Samuel Chase, Mrs. Edward Leight, Mrs. Joseph Weissenbach, Mrs. Jacob Witkowsky, Mrs. Robert Harvey, Mrs. George Dixon, Mrs. Eugene Prussing, Mrs. William Monroe, Mrs. Robert Linden Bates, Mrs. A. Proctor Smith, Mrs. William Kelly, Mrs. William A. Pusey, Mrs. John Weaver, Mrs. Charles Hille, Mrs. C. I. Kohl, and Miss Caronline McIlvaine.

SLAMS OF LIFE

By J. P. McEvoy

A WORD TO CHICAGO WIVES.

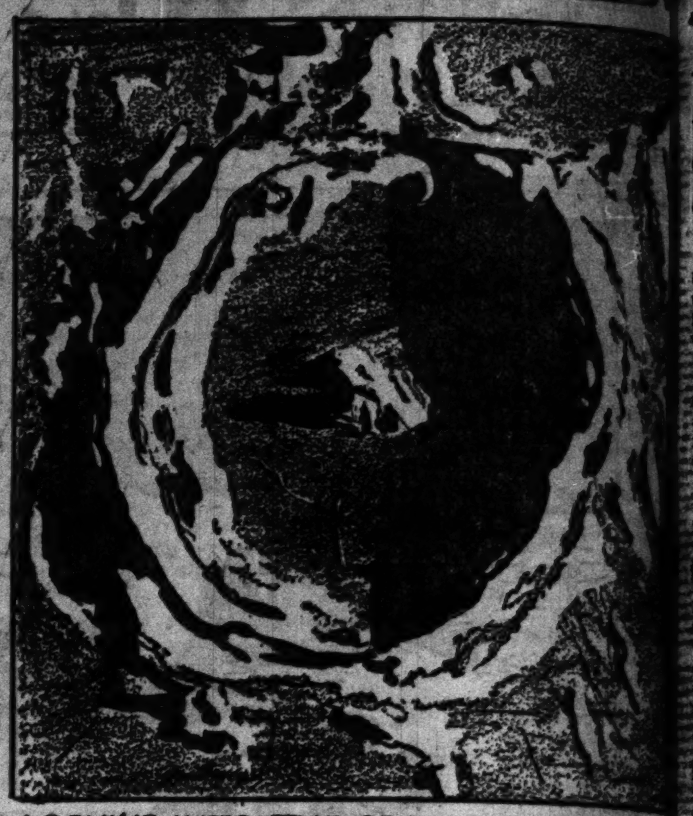
A husband of the local sort
  Is not a handsome guy—
He is an injury and a tort
  To almost any eye;
But though the poor benighted pup
  Has neither charm nor vim,
He begs you not to shoot him up,
  For life is sweet to him.

We all agree the husband clan,
  If taken by and large
(And they are "taken" to the man),
  Are graceful like a barge,
And haven't half the mental weight
  That any wife has got;
But still they firmly deprecate
  This thing of being shot—

This casual, offhand sorter way
  Chicago wives have found
Of winding up a perfect day
  By chasing hubby 'round
With forty-fours that tear a hole
  At least two feet across
And leave a husband, rest his soul,
  A sad and total loss.

An open season once a year,
  When husbands could be shot,
As in the case of game and deer,
  Would be a happier lot.
But, wives, we beg you hesitate!
  Your deadly shooting cease!
We'd dearly love to moult and mate
  And raise our young in peace.

ASTRONOMY



LOOKING INTO THE CRATER OF THEOPHYLI
DRAWN BY S. F. MAXWELL

MOUNTAINS ON THE MOON.

THE surface of the moon is exceedingly rugged. Most of the great mountain ranges on earth lie in chains and plateaus, but on the moon almost all the mountains are ring shaped, and are the result of eruptions from volcanos.

The effect of volcanism on earth is largely destroyed by the constant work of the weather. No sooner is a pile of volcanic cinders ejected than the wind and rain begin to wear it down and deposit the material in low places elsewhere. Only those volcanic mountains which are still active, or are in a desert locality where there is no rain, can exist for many centuries.

The moon was once a molten globe. As it grew cool its crust shrank, and in shrinking, cracked. Many volcanos burst up when the faults in the rock relieve the pressure on the gases below. When the imprisoned steam had blown its way to freedom, the activity of the volcanos died down, and finally ceased, leaving the moon a dead and desert world.

There was no air or water on the moon, and consequently no erosion. The piles of ashes heaped up by each volcano lay where they fell, and when the final moonquakes were over there was no more change. Today the moon is a world upon which nothing ever happens.

The mountains on the moon are all high and steep. The highest peak on earth is Mount Everest. It stands on the great plateau of the Himalayas, rearing its bulk 29,000 feet into the air. There are many mountains on the moon almost as large as Mount Everest. One, an extinct crater called Theophylis, is sixty-four miles across, and has ramparts which rise 19,000 feet above the plain on which it stands. There is a lake of frozen lava inside 3,000 feet below the outside level, with a group of peaks in the center, each one as high and sharp as the Matterhorn.

If one could be transported to the moon and set down inside the crater of Theophylis, he would better realize the truly gigantic proportions of this lunar volcano. The floor, which appears level from the earth, w crossed with cracks and cha strewn with sharp rocks. The the lava itself is a dark slate and the white powdery ashes cover everything would glist snow in the sunshine.

The great terraced mount would everywhere tower far above. Where the sun stri ramparts squarely the rocks w flect a blinding white glare, w shadows of objects would be as ink.

Battery repairs may be a necessity,

But they're not an excuse for letting your car lie idle.

Because as soon as the battery comes out of your car a Willard Rental Battery can go in, to continue the starting, lighting and ignition service that your own battery provided.

So Willard Rental Battery Service means more than just so much wood and lead and acid. It means ability to go into the city, or out to the country. It means ability to tour—to make the fullest possible use of your car.

Come in and talk batteries with us. We'll tell you how to take care of your battery, and why your next one should be a Still Better Willard with Threaded Rubber Insulation. The long life more than balances the slight increase in cost over the ordinary battery. It's the only battery with the "Bone Dry" principle that is your absolute assurance of getting a battery as new as the day it left the factory.

GOODRICH SAFETY TREAD

BEST IN THE LONG RUN

The World's First Torpedo Failed

ITS inventor, David Bushnell, an American, in 1776 attempted to sink the British warship, Eagle.

Bushnell towing his torpedo, an oak piece charged with powder, by means of a hand-power semi-submersible, planned to fasten it to the hull of the attacked ship with a steel plunger; then explode it by clock work.

His torpedo failed. It was too much of an experiment.

Safeguarding the user against failure, Goodrich never markets an experiment, tires or any other product.

Goodrich Tires, though built with the experience and skill of the oldest and largest rubber factory, are nevertheless tried out far and wide by the practical road travel of Goodrich Test Car Fleets to make them in word and deed—

GOODRICH SERVICE VALUE TIRES

For Goodrich has but one measure of its tires—their service for the user on his car and on the road; one tire standard TESTED SERVICE; one tire value—SERVICE VALUE.

After all there is no other value in tires.

Whatever pounds of rubber and other material go in them; whatever hours of work and skill, their VALUE to the motorist is their SERVICE, rendered in actual usage comfort, dependability and durability.

And you are sure to get it if your tires are GOODRICH SILVERTOWN CORDS, or BLACK SAFETY TREADS.

Built to give SERVICE VALUE, road testing under closest scrutiny proves they render full SERVICE VALUE in mileage and freedom from tire trouble.

ART by Eleanor Jewett

Independents Show Pictures of Merit at the Arts Club

"WHAT'S in a name?" might with great justice be asked by the curious in viewing for the first time the exhibit of the independents hung recently at the Arts club. Neither in style nor subject do the pictures take advantage of the opportunity the artists have given them to be lawfully "outré." The paintings are, many of them, beautiful, and are most attractively installed, for which much praise should be given the hanging committee.

Delicate in color, tender, lovely with the loveliness of the woods in June is the canvas "Lovers' Road," by Edmund S. Campbell. The hush and beauty of late afternoon lies over it. Almost can the last note from the lark that sprang so gloriously singing into heaven be heard. Almost can the wings of peace sweeping the gray blue of the sky tht bends low over the tree tops be felt. A perfect trysting place is this for the silver moon and the gold of the evening star.

Dusk of the same afternoon is given in "Fire Flies," by E. Martin Hennings. Two figures are seen in the silence, lit only by the dim glow from a fire and the lamps of the watchmen of the swamp that swing through the trees, cajoling and beckoning mortals to follow into the deeper recesses of the wood. Will o' the wisps they are, and wary must be he who heeds their invitation.

The "Portrait of Mrs. W.," by Walter Ufer, is a striking piece of work. The background is a wonderfully figured tapestry and against it the commanding presence of the sitter is all the more impressive. Beautifully composed she is and filled with the gentle dignity of one who would have graced a court in the days before democracy. Another portrait, that by Norman Tolson, is excellent, and here, too, the background has been worked out with great care.

"Youth," by Pauline Palmer, shows a young girl idling a moment by the window, bathed in sunlight, and as she dreams letting her robe slip from her as though even its light weight were too confining a restriction for the gossamer wings of vision upon which her spirit travels. This painting, rare fact enough in most exhibits, was sold before placed on exhibit.

Paul Bartlett has an attractive village scene, "The Drinking Fountain," where an old horse is plunging his head deep into the wooden trough to quench the thirst incidental to the weekly trip to town made by his young masters. "The Carpet Weaver," by James E. Dean, is rather in the style of the Flemish school. A quaint old woman busily plies her shuttle back and forth through the loom in the dim light of a low ceilinged room. "Sunlight," by Laura Van Poppelendum, gives the heart of a sunny little town—perhaps the same town where the old horse drank a bit before.

An excellent character sketch is found in the painting of the old tippler on the verge of reform, called "The Old Tragedian." Louis A. Neebe, the painter, vouches for the truth of the likeness. There really is such a head, wild haired and crimson set, topping the body of an actor who now, though 65 years old, is going back to the stage to do his bit to help win the war. By Mrs. Neebe is "Autumn," the painting of a day in Indian summer when the trees have just been touched by frost and are gay in their suits of red and yellow, dancing with joy a moment longer in the brisk breeze before night comes and they fall asleep till spring.

A study in timid, pale tones is "Spirits of the Woodland," by Albert H. Krehbiel. Pale sun nymphs dance under the paler blossoms of the flowering almond trees in May. Decorative it is in a way and unusual. Decorative, too, are "A Spring Idyll," by Jessie Arms Botke; a "Panel," by Fay Barnes Powel, and "Salambo" and "Hell, a Stage Setting," by Robert Eskridge. A beautiful port of sunshine is "The Harbour," by Elizabeth Taylor.

Among the other interesting paintings are "Sunshine and Shadow," by George D. Otis; "Melting Snows," by Cornelius Botke; "A Modern Leda," by W. J. Reynolds; "Girls Knitting," by Eda Sterchi; "The Circus Parade," by Anthony Angarola; "Castellated Walls," by Grace R. Dean, and "The War Garden," by Jonas Sileika.

At Æolian hall last Tuesday there opened a formal exhibit of the paintings of Bela Ormo, a Hungarian artist. The paintings are a series of five, depicting the curse of German kultur. They are hung in the long, deep hall of the gallery against walls that are covered with some soft green stuff that lends in the dim light an added accent of impressiveness.

At the further end of the hall, opposite the entrance, the canvas which to some minds is the strongest of the series stands out. "Declaration of War" it is called. Death is there, costumed in scarlet. His long red robe flies out into the reds and orange of a stormy sky. On his head he wears the helmet of Germany. He rides a white horse. And the horse gives the keynote to the picture. A powerful animal it is, loose coupled and unguided, swinging over the rough ground, relentless as the war machine that it epitomizes.

Then the next four pictures, "Breaking Up the Home," "On the Road to Conquest," "Conquest," and "The Result": Step by step the eye is taken from the scene of parting in Germany, called forth by the word of the kaiser, to the barren ground over which men have fought and died to stem the flood of barbarity; then to the little captured town, a town no more, but a place of ruin.

Bela Ormo has caught the horror of kultur at the pitch and given it out with no lack of power nor loss of meaning in its transposition. The paintings are powerfully conceived and powerfully executed. The action and color are excellent. There is a lesson here that Chicago may well read; it will but emphasize the more the truth of terrorism we all now know.

In room 47 of the Art institute is hung an extraordinarily beautiful collection of Chinese paintings from the year 1850 to the present. Rather remarkable is it to compare the impressionistic tendency of these works with the impressionistic painting produced in Europe during a contemporary period. The more remarkable is it as there was apparently no communication between the two schools of art.

Scarcely less lovely than the paintings are the verses that accompany two of the pictures. And to carry a comparison farther the lilt and beauty of these lines is mindful of the "vers libre" toward which modern versifiers have been tending. "Wild Duck in the Reeds" is the painting by Pien Shou-Mien, and the verse runs:

The frontier steppes spread wide,
The frontier moon shines on a scene of desolation,
Cold congeals the border river,
The road stretches afar in solitude.
They say that to the south of the river
The mists rise on scenes of beauty:
The birds will follow the sun
And guzzle the wild rice among the spreading reeds,
They will drink, and croon, fly and disport themselves;
Against the blue sky they will fly in a phalanx
As if writing the word heaven—
Thus will they fly in the autumn light.

The other painting, which is described equally beautifully in words, is hung in the hall just outside the gallery, and is a long panel of blossoms against the circle of the moon half hidden in a bank of clouds. The painter is Fang Hsueh-Po.

The east wind last night brought cold in its train.
I draw the plum blossom in its marvelous beauty.
The tree, too, is exquisite, shining with glittering frost
While the tips of the branches
Are outlined across the circle of the lovely moon.

Filled with the sweetness of young life and sunshine are the pictures in the gallery. Here is "Young Squirrels Playing" by Hsu-Ku; there "Partridges and Bamboo" by Jen Po-Nien. This last is of two downy birds cuddled close together against a cliff, and above them into the blue strike the steel blades of the bamboo leaves. Exquisitely tender are the colors in "A Temple Pool" by Hsu-Ku.

In contrast to the universal note of brooding tenderness and joy in the vigor of living is the portrait of, without a doubt, Blue Beard. Not that his beard is blue, but it is long and thick, parted just a trifle at the mouth so that the glint of cruel teeth and the tip of a viperous tongue protrude, his hands wrap around each other with evil intent, and one clasps tight a sharp edged knife. A Chineses sorcerer, an evil magician with sleeping drafts and deadly potions, his place is not in truth here in this palace of birds and flowers.

Just a word should be given to the pieces entered in the competition of the Western Society of Sculptors for monumental work appropriate to the small parks of Chicago. There are several interesting models. The basic thought of each, and this is curious, is found in these words inscribed on one of the models:

"Lest we forget that out of wild nature we are come, that our instincts are great, our wisdoms little; that the main current of our will is still like the green moving waters, and our reasoned choices like the flutter of foam on its surface; that we became citizens but yesterday and were bred in the wilderness."

The figure above the pool of water this flanks is an Indian youth "leaving the trail," headed with his primitive weapons to somewhere. On either hand go great bulky bears, waddling in their strength.

The curious fact is this, that of the sculpture entered three models show Indians, two the motherhood of America, and one a soldier, Valor, going to battle. The thought of the transcribed lines lies back of each conception.

On Friday there opened at the Art institute the exhibition of the students of the school of the institute.

A CANDID FOOD PATRIOT

By Guy F. Lee.

The food sharps say that breads of hay
Are just the thing we need;
Declare that bran tones up a man
And gives his system speed.
They've conned each trace anent the case
And so, no doubt, they know.
But I quit wheat and cut down meat
Because I don't like crow.

I can't bear rye, and no words why
I ought to, matter much.
I'm fond of ham, and love to cram
Myself with steak and such.
But though I mourn, I bravely scorn
The loaf of good white dough,
And swallow fruit as meatstitute
Because I don't like crow.

It's not so bad, for there's a glad
And satisfying thought
That makes the will to do it fill
A fellow up a lot!
I find it sport, as I go short
Of this and that, to blow
That while I've skimped the kaiser's crimped:
The war lord's eating crow!

Dietitians' Post Graduate Course To Cover War Work
Write for Catalog

The Battle Creek Sanitarium School of Home Economics offers a special summer course for those who have had at least two years' training in home economics.

Many graduates have offered or would like to offer their services to the Government as dietitians in base hospitals and other branches of army service, but are unfamiliar with such work. Others feel the necessity of obtaining the newer ideas concerning food and the war, also later developments in dietetics and nutrition.

The course we offer is most complete. It will fit any woman admitted for government service, and skilled dietitians are always needed.

We also offer a summer course for housewives who wish a general knowledge of foods and cookery and the relation they bear to the new food situation.

These summer courses are in addition to our two year and three year courses for dietitians, and the one year course for homemakers.

GERMAN AIMS.

Is there any danger that a "peace offensive" by Germany or Austria might trick America or her allies into a fallacious armistice? By "peace offensive" we mean, not the definite and reasonable approach which, as Mr. Balfour has said frankly, the allies are always ready to consider, but vague and dubiously authorized suggestions constituting diplomatic tactics intended to weaken allied morale.

We are confident that at least in America such a peace offensive has little chance of success. We have our pacifists, like the French and British, who will always be gullible by anything that pretends to be pacific, no matter how flimsy the disguise. We have our alleged radicals of the Socialist organization who are pro-German first and "radical" afterward, our own Bolshevists, most of whom wear names made in Germany. But the great mass of American citizens have been reading and thinking, and they have come, we believe, to the conclusion that there is no peace to be had from the powers that now rule central Europe, no peace that America could afford to make. There is a good deal of the homely genius of common sense still remaining in the American makeup and the peace of Brest-Litovsk and the peace of Roumania have not been lost upon it. For a time, largely encouraged by the president's faith in the possibilities of a popular reaction in Germany and in the supposed anti-Prussian tendencies of Austria, the American public was inclined to hope for an honorable peace by negotiation. But the president has confessed his complete disillusionment, while the public probably reached that state even earlier.

But it is well, nevertheless, to keep in mind that we have the factors of internal weakness already referred to and that German influence is at work throughout the country. It is well to keep in mind the German mind, the ruling mind, whose philosophy and attitude are the only proper tests for German "approaches" and pledges.

On that ruling mind a recent symposium in the Süddeutsche Monatshefte, a high class monthly of Leipsic and Munich, throws a bright light. It is amusing to learn that this organ of German thought fears that the virus of internationalism may weaken the Germanic will to conquer. Prof. Haeckel of Jena, writing on "the false cosmopolitan idealism of the German people" as the greatest danger to the national existence, says:

"I am afraid that the German dreamers are again being deceived by political phrases and utopian imaginations of peace. Since the reichstag in its infamous resolution of July, 1917, gave a fresh and terrible proof of the proverbial political incompetence of the 'German Michael,' it must unfortunately be feared that at the impending conclusion of peace the idealistic international itch for agreement will be victorious over the indispensable, national, real increase of power."

Prof. Spahn of the University of Strassburg, son of the leader of the Centre party, in an article on German political idealism, says: "The need of the present hour is not yet universal peace and the rule of law, the freedom of the peoples, but clearness about the vital conditions of the German people as a state and about the full development of our own state existence. We have to make good the omissions of centuries and to extirpate the weakness that has penetrated our very being. Much was made good in the year 1871, but we could not be healed at once.

"If the dream of the unity of the peoples of Europe is to become reality in the future, this unity cannot be based upon the equality of all. The unity of the peoples will prosper only under the leadership of the most efficient people. The peoples are made for equality just as little as individuals are. Assuredly our leadership will not mean serfdom for the other peoples. We are free from the French lust for 'glory,' just as we are free from the English spirit of pure calculation in politics and economics.

"It was we who brought into the world the idea that the common state life of mankind should depend upon a trinity—the right of all, freedom for every individual member of the community, and peace as an ordered state of civilization. Only a race so full of idealism as the Germans are was capable of lighting up the horizon of humanity with an idea so great and eternal. If mankind is gradually to draw nearer to such a super-terrestrial goal, it will only be if we once more advance as the leaders."

Finally we quote from Prof. Reinke of the University of Kiel, as translated by a writer in the London Times. Prof. Reinke attacks "conciliation by magnanimity," an error we have not observed the Germans are disposed to fall into. He says:

"The advocates of the idea of renunciation are theorists who have not even thought out their theory to its final consequences. In practical politics, as long as the world has existed, the only power which has won peace is the power that has been able to inspire the enemy with respect by force of arms. The latest example is provided by Brest-Litovsk. In the first act of the drama played there we achieved nothing, because we appeared as gentle and benevolent characters; the third act will be successful because of the plain language meanwhile spoken by German arms. . .

"The proper maxim for us is to extract from the situation as much material advantage as the military state of affairs permits. If we were to act otherwise our enemies would laugh at us or gloat over us in secret. The idea that we could conciliate defeated enemies by magnanimity would be a dream, and not even a pretty dream. That idea is disproved on every page of history, and it is only from history that we can learn how a nation and an empire should behave in such a situation as the situation in which we now are."

Here are views of three leaders of German opinion. Their harmony is especially significant. They sing one song, "Deutschland ueber Alles." We were assured during the first years of the world war that German jingoism was not in control of German policy, that men like Bernhardi had no influence, that Treitschke meant little to Germans, and that Pan-German megalomania had no teeth.

Profs. Haeckel, Spahn, and Reinke tell us another story. It is the same story as that of Bernhardi, the cavalry general, of Germany out to conquer the world.

"Peace drives" to get anywhere in this country have got to show that the Potsdam crowd and their professional advocates are down and out. Meanwhile America is going to do her utmost to put them down and out by the only means which, according to Prof. Reinke, inspires respect—to wit: "force of arms."

CHILD LABOR REFORM.

The setback which the Supreme court decision in the child labor case gave the important cause of protecting childhood not only for its own sake but for the good of citizenship requires and is now obtaining renewed effort to restore the protections.

Because the method of abolishing child labor by refusing its products in interstate commerce was the wrong method does not leave the situation without a remedy and does not make it one which can be viewed with complacence or indifference.

Backward communities which will not for themselves recognize the evil and the danger of taking such serious chances with the material of citizenship must be brought under the superior control of the federal government.

We constantly recognize the value of parochialism, and for that reason have not been reconciled to some of the methods used to insinuate federal control into local affairs, but no intelligent person will think of the child labor problem as one of strictly local character. We do not like to see the interstate commerce act being distorted to purposes of federal control. That has its dangers. But questions of citizenship are national questions and the nation cannot safely allow deterioration to result from community stubbornness or heedlessness.

The protection of childhood and the safeguarding of its opportunities of development are essential for the requirements of the nation. A community does not develop citizenship for its own purposes alone, but for the purposes of the nation. The character of such citizenship is revealed in decisions and acts which affect other parts of the nation.

A backward state affects the public policies of the United States. It has its influence in legislation upon the entire nation. To the extent that it permits a stunning of the qualities needed for citizenship it hurts the nation.

By restrictive acts most states guard the bodies and minds of children, protect them from conditions which will dwarf or retard their development and give them the chance to realize full power and intelligence in maturity. When a state does not do this it is neglecting to guard its own source of strength, and such a state is a cause of weakness in the nation.

Federal legislation, we are convinced, can be devised which will not use a dangerous method of extending federal authority and yet will control the situation with regard to child labor.

WE STICK TO DECATUR.

The young Chicago pacifist whose resistance of the draft seems about to cause a severe military penalty to be imposed on him furnishes an example of the futility of individual, egoistic human opinions when the decisions and needs of the nation have become transcendent. The individual in such case is a futility in his decisions and opinions.

The assumption that right and wrong are perceivable individually when the nation has committed itself, and that such perception may be the guide of individual conduct, can be accepted only with the assumption that a nation has no real life, nothing which in itself is greater than the life of any of its individuals, and nothing which can commend itself to their spirituality.

In such case the nation ceases to have any real powers. It cannot make any decisions. It cannot represent opinion. It cannot act as a unit. It is not a unit and not a nation in form, substance, or soul. It is merely a fortuitous concourse of individuals who recognize no common ground of obligation, aspiration, or faith.

The case of the young pacifist merely carries to its conclusion, humiliating for him in the general opinion, the ideas of people who occasionally write to THE TRIBUNE to say that they are distressed by the continued use of Decatur's sentiment at the head of these columns. If that sentiment does not recognize the essence of a nation to its people, then no nation can exist except as a geographical expression.

Editorial of the Day

ONE OF OUR MISTAKES.

[From the Saturday Evening Post.]

Concerning various expositions of misdirected governmental energy we have heard many very intelligent men say: "I don't care a rap how much mere money they waste if only they'll crowd the work along."

No doubt the whole country has said about that; but it is impossible that blunders in war should waste mere money. They must waste time and life. More ships and more American soldiers in France this spring might have kept the Germans out of strong positions from which American soldiers will finally have to help drive them at heavy sacrifice.

When the government spends money it is spending the nation's labor and materials. Say that through bad planning a given ship costs twice as much as it should. The money has gone finally to meet pay rolls and bills for steel, and so on. It means that the labor and materials which should have produced two ships have produced only one. Except the soldier who gives his body, the greater part of what all of us do to help win the war is expressed in money. If we abstain from building a garage and buy Liberty bonds, and the government wastes the money, it is wasting our effort. Every dollar the government spends is so much national energy and national resource. If it throws away a dollar there is just that much less to throw against Germany.

It is very true that we can afford to spend energy prodigally in order to get quick results. But blundering does not get quick results. The notion that so many hundred millions written off for mistakes is of no real consequence is a capital mistake in itself. That much national energy has been wasted.

Rich in resources as we are, the long war we must calculate upon may bring a juncture when win or lose hangs on the last ounce. To waste now may be to want then. The complacent "mere money" notion is a mistake.

HONEST.

A formal, fashionable caller addressed a very little girl:

"How are you, my dear?"

"Very well, thank you," returned the child.

"Now, my dear, you should ask me how I am."

"But I don't want to know!" the child replied, honestly, but unexpectedly.—Harper's Magazine.

CASEY'S CLOSE CALL

BY PRIVATE PEAT.

CASEY was a humorist. There was never any question on that. Added to it all, Casey was a humorist with a thirst. A dry thirst. Casey hated water. I don't blame him. I hated it myself after I had been in England a week. It was on Salisbury plain where the first Canadians camped for training, and it rained sixty-seven consecutive days while we were there.

Casey was in our hut—tent, it was really. We had a canvas shelter for every dozen men, each man had a waterproof sheet of his own, a couple of blankets also of his own, and any additional he could swipe from a guy less smart, the length and width of himself of good, first hard, then sodden, brown earth. That was sleeping quarters. It was some campaign.

There was that night, a blessed night, when every lad in my tent had leave but myself and Casey, and Casey was detailed for guard. It was that night I had secured every single one of the blankets; I had blankets below me, over me, back of me, side of me, round me. A "great and glorious feeling."

Then they sounded the alarm for a fire parade. Every man on leave but me. Every hole in the sieve of the heavens leaking a pint of water a minute. It took me all of five minutes to untangle those blankets. And Casey was on guard.

Discipline wasn't our strong point in those days. Who would there be to blame us? It was that same night that Casey stood, knee deep in mud, sopping sticky mud. Footsteps never sounded in it. They squelched. The guard challenged the squelch.

Casey heard something. "Halt," said he, and through the curtain of falling water there was murmurous answer: "Officer and bottle of Scotch."

Now Casey was wet outside, but inside—"Pass officer," says he—"Halt, Scotch!" Would you blame Casey?

That was Casey's first captive, but it wasn't until Jan. 26, 1915, that the rest of us got into action for the first time. As a matter of fact, we lay near Pond farm; don't know who named it, but there was plenty of pond and no farm. However, the first of our battles was that of Sling plantation. As far as it is concerned, Casey can prove an alibi. He wasn't there. I know. I was there. What is more, I know where Casey was.

The Seventeenth Highlanders, a bunch of Nova Scotians, raided the canteen of my own old battalion, the Ninth. Canteens were wet those days, like everything else. As I say, it was the 26th of January, a dark night or evening, and—raining. There was a steamy awfulness in the air of the tents. The Seventeenth lounged on their blankets and watched the rain squeeze through the slits in the canvas.

"Usquebaugh," said one of the brawniest in the tent third from the end of the second line. "Usquebaugh," muttered another, and yet another. The barbarous tongue of kilted ancestors seemed to translate itself. Highlanders who had never seen a highland took up the lilt. "Buchanan," said one; "J. W.," says another; "MacConnel," whispered a third, but it was "Mountain Dew" and "White Heather" that cinched the matter. "Usquebaugh—the Ninth Canteen," muttered Donald McKay, and it was MacKenzie who stopped counting the water drops.

They crept out gently, treading lightly on the surface mud. Each tent passed the word to the next. A mighty raid. Not a bomb fired, yet not a target missed. There was rye and jimmyjohn.

It was sheer monotony forced it, even the officers recognized that, and there might not have been anything more said of the matter but the few C. B.'s distributed among the hotter headed boys. Still, all things work out for the best. It was three days after and we were still chuckling over what the boys had done. It was on parade in the early morning.

Then as though he had sprung from the earth, a major of the imperial forces rode up in front of us. His hard bitten brown horse pawed the soggy turf impatiently as he halted, saluted our colonel, without a word more or glance to any one, drew from his saddle pack a long, blue sheet of paper, unfolded it to full length—it seemed yards, shifted a bit in his saddle, and commenced to read:

"Private —— of the —— on the morning of Dec. 14 was convicted by field court martial of being intoxicated when on duty; sentenced to be shot. Sentence duly carried out."

"Private —— of the —— infantry, on the morning of Dec. 29 convicted by field court martial of insubordination and insolence to an officer, sentenced to be shot. Sentence duly carried out."

"Private —— of the —— convicted by field court martial of being asleep on duty, sentenced to two years first field punishment."

We were dismissed. We hardly spoke. This was the army. This was discipline. Soused, and you were shot!

That could happen to us. We began to be good. It was Casey, of course, who broke the spell of goodness. He was the blundering sort who doesn't mean to do wrong, but somehow has to.

Each morning in winter at stand-to we got our ration of rum. It was issued as a medicine, and as medicine the majority of us gulped it. It must have been on the seventh day that Bill noticed Casey secreting his rum ration in a bottle. He mentioned it to me, but we thought no more about it than to wonder for a moment that Casey—Casey of the "Scotch"—should deliberately refuse what his unregenerate heart craved.

It was the day after the thing happened. Casey was drunk—dead to the world—blind—pickled. He had remembered his saved-up ration and had one glorious "burst."

The generals—grass hats—red caps—what you will, had entered the upper end of the trench and were on inspection bound.

Our fire trench came about the middle of the whole length. What to do? Casey was a good pal and a fine soldier. "Found drunk, ordered to be shot, sentence duly carried out." We seemed to hear the echo of a half a dozen shots and the thud of a heavy body as it tumbled from the perpendicular—which would be Casey. We gazed at each other with blank faces. Some one whispered something must be done. Ed Fitch thought of it, but we grasped his thought before he got it into words.

Jack routed out the stretcher bearers. We scurried round the sandbags, two seconds wrapped Casey in his blanket and mounted him on a stretcher.

A casualty—a corpse was Casey. We got back to our own section. The generals were just entering. With slow though squelchy tread and a fearsome solemnity of countenance, the bearers advanced with their burden. Pass the generals in the middle, take Casey to the end of the trench there to recover, and all would be well.

But we had not reckoned on the generals "Halt!" said the foremost one and highest in command. The bearers came to a stop. "'Shun, all soldiers, and salute the gallant dead!"

We saluted. Then our eyes bulged and our tongues clung to our mouth tops. The blanket moved.

"Hic, 'oo in 'ell is that?" came the awful voice of Casey the corpse.

The bearers dropped the stretcher. We stood at attention. Then the generals laughed. But it was Casey's narrowest escape. He never was nearer death, not even when he got his right leg blown off, and a good sized chip from his left shoulder.

PHYSICIANS AND THE WAR.

PHYSICIANS for the army and navy are recruited by volunteering. All physicians between 21 and 31 years of age are subject to draft, but of the more than 25,000 now wearing uniforms, including those whose commissions have been recommended but who are now in uniform all have been volunteers.

The military forces are being equipped with physicians at the rate of seven for each thousand, or 7,000 for each 1,000,000. On April 26 the army was using 19,517 physicians and the navy, 1,999. This is a ratio higher than seven per 1,000, but the overhead machinery now at work has personnel enough to take care of the army and navy of about 3,000,000 men.

Congress is giving the administration authority to increase the army at its discretion and the rumor is that 5,000,000 is the figure about to be determined on. The army is asking for 5,000 more physicians by mid-summer and the navy wants 1,000 more at once. Should the army be increased to 5,000,000 it will require about 6,000 physicians in addition to the 5,000 for which they are now asking.

On May 1 the number of physicians who had been recommended for the medical corps of the army and navy was 24,395; 3,000 for the navy and 35,000 for the army or 38,000 total would mean that at least 14,000 more than the 24,000 now recommended must be found. It would be easy enough to get the needed 14,000 more if not that pressure is being brought by industries and by communities to retain some of their physicians.

In spite of this it may be possible to obtain the number needed, but it can only be by working a carefully considered plan of allotment of physicians voluntary in its nature.

Should a larger army and navy be required and more physicians be necessary it will be imperative that the federal and state governments adopt a plan for the division of physicians between the military and civil populations.

In the winter of 1915-16 the American College of Surgeons foresaw an entrance into war, or at least so strong a probability of it that they thought it wise to begin planning. A year before the United States plunged in they had begun card indexing and cataloging physicians with respect to their availability and qualifications for medical service. By the time we entered they had launched well developed plans for raising the medical forces needed for the military.

President Wilson recognized this fact by taking over this organization and making it the nucleus of the medical section of the advisory council of national defense. Dr. Franklin H. Martin, secretary of the American College of Surgeons, was made the medical member of the advisory council. He selected a general medical board and they in turn selected more than a score of committees.

Among the things accomplished and other activities of this board are these:

Obtained the services of more than 20,000 physicians for the army and navy with practically no expense for enlistment to the government.

Founded a committee on child welfare.

Classified and tabulated hospitals and effected some reorganizations of staffs to release men for military service.

Arranged to have medical students retained in school.

Procured the enlistment of members of senior classes to be effective immediately on graduation or end of hospital service.

Arranged for senior students to take their final work in base hospitals if the emergency requires.

Allotted members of faculties between the military needs and the teaching needs. Arranged courses in military hygiene and military surgery and medicine for senior students. Arranged courses for the army physician. Arranged for four war manuals based largely on the experience of this war, also for three other war books just ready for publication.

Instrumental in increasing the number of pupil nurses 20 per cent.

Catalogued the nursing resources of the country.

Worked to obtain better recognition of, better protection of and more use of trained nurses by the army.

Assisted the Red Cross in procuring nurses for their work.

Standardized surgical and medical supplies and arranged for supplies of needed articles the importation of which had been stopped by the war and planned for the manufacture of articles in this country in conformity with the anticipated war needs.

Instituted research work in medicine, surgery, and public health for the protection not only of the health of the military forces but of that of civilians also.

Recommended measures for the better protection of the health of people in the extra cantonment zones in order that the soldiers and sailors in training might be better protected. Launched and developed the program for the fight against venereal diseases and the use of alcoholic beverages by soldiers and sailors. (This program has resulted in an improved policy with regards to saloons, dance halls, houses of prostitution, and prostitutes in hundreds of cities and many states.)

Instituted a division of industrial hygiene to better protect the health of men laboring in organized industries. Provided a plan for reëducation and rehabilitation of returned soldiers and sailors.

Organized volunteer medical corps for physicians ineligible to medical reserve corps.

It is understood, of course, that the medical section of the advisory council of medical defense does not claim sole credit for all of these accomplishments. It is a body with neither administrative nor legislative functions. The members have originated or passed on many ideas, thoughts, and suggestions, and, having presented them to the proper authorities, have sought to influence their adoption and when the suggestions have been adopted they have aided where they could in making them effective.

About May 1 the army authorities reported that 23,059 civilian physicians had applied for enlistment, 1,589 had declined the commissions offered them, 1,656 had been accepted, but were later discharged. At that time of the reserve corps there were 1,253 majors, 4,584 captains, and 11,237 liutenants, or a total of 18,755 had been tendered commissions.

The number in the service was 1,170 majors, 4,158 captains, and 11,222 lieutenants, or a total of 16,532. In the national guard there were 19 lieutenant colonels, 246 majors, 150 captains, and 790 lieutenants, or a total of 1,205. In the national army there were 3 brigadier generals, 12 colonels, 31 lieutenant colonels, and 8 majors.

This is a sum total of accomplishment by the medical profession of which the country may well be proud. While every group is doing its duty, no group has so well anticipated the needs and been ready to meet them as they arose as has the medical profession. But the time has arrived when a different type of planning must be done. The profession must exercise the same foresight that has characterized its work up to now by planning now for the changed necessities which we will be faced with before 1918 has passed.

The American Medical Directory lists 150,000 physicians in the United States. It is estimated that only 125,000 of these are engaged in the practice of medicine. These 125,000 physicians mean one for every 800 people. The government furnishes one physician for every 143 soldiers. If 40,000 go into the army and navy, 85,000 active physicians will be left, or one physician to every 1,176 people.

Should the war last long it is well to bear in mind that the number of physicians graduating each year is not quite equal to the number retiring and dying plus the 2 per cent increased by reason of increase in population. To maintain a ratio of one physician to 800 population it is necessary that 5,000 physicians a year graduate. The number graduating in 1917 was 3,379. The death rate of the medical corps killed in action is about the same on the average as that of linemen. The wild stories of the number of men in the medical corps killed in action in the earlier years of the war have been officially refuted by Great Britain and France.

About 2 per cent of the civilian population is sick and away from work all the time. At least 10 per cent of those at work are not doing the best they should be capable of because of organic unsoundness—physical defects. The manufacturers of munitions, explosives especially, tell us that labor turnover and absenteeism among men employed in their industries is at least three times as high as the average. Part of this is due to a high sickness rate, part of it to fear of occupational disease by the laborers, part of it to high wages, part of it to general thriftlessness and shiftiness.

Deprived of 1,000,000 immigrants a year, with so many men of working age drawn into the army and with an increased demand for production of munitions, ships, machinery, and farm products, the standards of health must be advanced. If one physician for every 800 people was needed before the war, one for every 500 is needed now. What shall we do when the proportion has been reduced to one to every 1,200?

At a meeting of state medical representatives and the general medical board held early in May one physician told of one district embracing three counties in which there is no physician. A physician who talked with me a few days ago said that should he go the nearest physician would be twenty miles away. In some sections telephones are so abundant, hospitals so plentiful, roads so good, and the used automobiles so general that one physician can serve a very large territory, but there are other sections not so fortunate.

At the Washington meeting it was stated that from now on the majority of the physicians who join must come from the cities, but here, too, there is a difficulty. The managers of large industries are appreciating that to get full production they need the services of industrial physicians. Most of these plants are in or near cities.

The army wants as many as it can get of the industrial physicians. They are trained in group medicine, they have had experience in treating wounds, they know something about preventive medicine. The manufacturers are insisting that these men must remain with the factories if the factories are to be expected to increase production. The best all round men for the army are the trained health officers of the better type. A considerable number of health commissioners and a very large number of bureau heads and inspectors already have gone from health departments to serve in the army.

If this keeps up how is the health of the civilian population, 95 per cent of the whole population, to be maintained if so many health officers leave? The question is when is it advisable to draw the line between the need for physicians by the army and that for the civilian population? How many shall go to the 5 per cent and how many shall be retained by the 95 per cent? It is not to be decided from the standpoint of patriotism. It is patriotic for some to go and for others to stay. The war is to be won by efficiency both at the front and at home.

A general line having been drawn as between the civil and military population, the next question is as to the line as it applies to groups. Where shall the line be drawn in the rural districts, among health officers, among industrial physicians, among medical teachers, and among hospital attendants, to mention a few groups? In France the entire medical profession has been taken over by the state. The civil population is allotted one physician to reach 8,000 population, and the army gets the remainder. European countries have never maintained physicians as America has, and in consequence the need of physicians is being badly felt over there.

When Mr. Balfour arrived in Washington to acquaint our government with the needs of the allies his first request was for doctors, and several thousand American physicians and nurses are helping out our allies both with their military and their civil population. This deduction still further reduces our supply.

It may be that the government in this country will take over the physicians and allot them in accordance with the needs.

SPECIAL CITY POLICE.

Chicago, June 12.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Are there any city employés who are special police with full police power, without any star or badge and who carry a letterhead credential? R. H. S.

Yes, there are a number of city employés who have been appointed special policemen under section 1920, Chicago code of 1911, which provides that the general superintendent of police may appoint persons of suitable character, who may be in the employment of the city, as special policemen, but such persons so appointed shall receive no additional pay for their services as such special policemen. Such policemen shall possess the same powers as the regular police patrolmen, and shall be subject to all the rules and regulations governing the police force.

COMPLAIN TO ALDERMEN.

Chicago, June 12.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Leavitt street, between Division street and Chicago avenue, is unpaved. Property owners suggest that this street be closed to traffic until it is put into proper condition. P. L.

Leavitt street is an old cedar block pavement. For the last few years the holes have been filled in with crushed stone and the street oiled. However, money is wasted repairing a street of this kind, and complainant should take up with his aldermen the matter of having it paved, as this is the only way that the condition can be remedied.

KEEP VACANT LOTS CLEAN.

Chicago, June 12.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The prairie on the south side of Thirty-ninth street, between Grand boulevard and Vincennes avenue, is rapidly becoming a common dumping ground, teams hauling and dumping refuse there at all times. It is very unsightly. MRS. W. R. S.

The lot complained of is not fenced in and has been used as a dump more or less for years. The piles have been leveled off and improved as much as possible. It is no part of the duty of this bureau to clean vacant lots. We must be dependent upon the civic pride of the surrounding residents to prevent their being littered.

GOES TO BENEFICIARY.

Chicago, June 12.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Can a common law wife be compelled to give up the insurance of her husband? MRS. E.

If the person is the beneficiary in the policy and the insured has died, she will be entitled to the insurance whether the wife in fact or not.

If the insurance is under a mutual benefit it may be different.

ORDINANCE HELD VOID.

Chicago, June 12.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is there a city ordinance requiring owners of apartment buildings to maintain hall lights? C. B. G.

The ordinance requiring lights in hallways has been held void by the Supreme court in a recent decision.

ORDINANCE ON AIR GUNS.

Chicago, June 12.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Is there a city ordinance against playing ball on the public streets? 2. Is it permissible for boys to carry air guns and shoot birds in the neighborhood and on the roofs of houses and trees adjacent thereto? ANNOYED.

1. We know of no ordinance specifically on the point.

2. An ordinance prohibits firing air guns on streets. The boys would have no right to shoot on other people's property. If they shot protected birds they would be subject to penalty wherever it was done.

STEPCHILDREN WILL NOT INHERIT.

Chicago, June 12.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A widower without children married a widow with grown children. He died leaving some property which he had before he married her. He left no will. Will her children receive two-thirds of the estate, or will his brother receive it? MRS. L. B.

If she survives him she will take all the personalty and one-half the realty, with a life interest in one-third of the remaining one-half. His brother will take the balance. Her children will in no case take anything directly from their stepfather.

As but limited space can be given letters in this department, writers must confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Unless they give us their full names and addresses their letters will not be considered. No manuscript will be returned unless the writer sends postage for that purpose.

APROPOS OF MR. CABELL.

Evanston, Ill., June 13.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The successor of Dr. Goldbeck as Sunday essayist is one J. B. Cabell. This voluminous writer's outstanding characteristic is his fondness for obsolete, or at least unusual words. He seems to be afflicted with a rush of vocabulary to the head.

It's rather bothersome to keep a Century dictionary at one's elbow while plodding through his tortuous lucubrations (to say nothing of a compendium of classical lore). I hazard the assertion that less than one-sixteenth of 1 per cent of THE TRIBUNE's readers could give J. B. C.'s vaporings a cursory once over and write an intelligible summary of the same five minutes afterward.

In this rapid fire era clarity of statement marks the style of the master essayist. J. B. C. would do well to study the lucid, unaffected style of R. L. Stevenson, or that of William D. Howells, John Morley, Frederick Harrison, John Burroughs, or Mrs. Peattie of THE TRIBUNE staff.

Of course you'll promptly wastebasket this protest while admitting the reasonableness of the contention.

If the twenty odd readers who dote on Cabell's lilting prose really enjoy it, don't let my choleric animadversion restrain you from ladling it out to them in large chunks. In time the loyal twenty odd may swell to two score! Who knows?

DEHYDRATING VEGETABLES.

San Francisco, Cal., June 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Recently I read an article on the subject of dried vegetables, which opened my eyes to a new method of food conservation, of which I, and doubtless millions of other Americans, are ignorant. It seems that by extracting the water content from fresh vegetables, by artificial drying, they can be made nonperishable without affecting their flavor or food values. Furthermore, their weight and bulk are reduced from 20 to 1, in the case of tomatoes to 6 to 1, and in the case of potatoes, as from 60 to 85 per cent of fresh vegetables is water. The war department and the American Red Cross are buying millions of pounds of the dried vegetables for use in France on account of the saving in ship transportation. I should like to see you advocate the establishment of large evaporating plants to preserve our surplus vegetables throughout the country.

THE LESSON OF THE GOLD STAR.

Chicago, June 13.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—These golden stars of sacrifice and the blue stars of service ought to urge us on and fill us with a greater patriotism. It should help us to increase our efforts and enlarge our slight sacrifices. We ought to do more and more and more to make our share count. There is nothing we can do—no sacrifice we can make that can compare with that being made by our boys in France.

Let these golden stars become guiding lights to help us see our way and find our part. Let each one, no matter what his part may be, do just a little more and do it just a little better when he sees another golden star glitter in the homes of those who have given supremely well.

EFFICIENCY IN WAR WORK.

Chicago, June 12.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—With considerable pathos Mr. Herman describes the "speed king" becoming a nervous wreck as a result of standardized work. He also goes to some length to accuse the management of cutting bonuses and rates when high efficiencies are attained by the workmen.

We wish to hold no brief for the dishonest and corrupt business which may treat its employés in the fashion described by Mr. Herman. However, we wish to voice a protest against his condemnation of all efficiency methods and bonus plans because of the alleged mismanagement of some concerns. Mr. Herman seems to be complaining not about the methods themselves or the principles behind such methods, but rather he objects to specific experiences which he has had the misfortune to encounter. Is it fair to destroy correct principles of management and eliminate methods which produce better living conditions and higher salaries merely because some of these methods may be at times incorrectly and unjustly applied?

THE TRIBUNE very courageously recently published two editorials which very vividly and logically outlined the main reasons for encouraging efficiency methods, especially in this crisis. It seems unthinkable that at a time when millions of Americans are asked to give every ounce of their energy, every minute of their time, and, if necessary, their blood, for this country, that men behind the lines should by misguided action attempt to destroy the very methods which are necessary in order to supply our fighters with the means whereby to secure victory. The voluntary limitation of production in these times should be classed as nothing short of treason.

Mr. Herman seems anxious to know whether any advocates of efficiency methods have had any practical experience as workmen. For his information let it be known that the writer has worked on the bench in the machine shop, and for a considerable part of his life did such menial work as hauling coal and doing other laborious work, so that he feels qualified to speak from the workmen's point of view.

WORKER.

A REMEDY FOR THE COAL SITUATION.

Chicago, June 13.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Have read with interest articles appearing in your publication this week pertaining to coal situation, in which you urge every one to place orders now for their winter supply.

It seems that the present limited supply of coal now available in Chicago is due, in a measure, to shortage of cars. This condition could, no doubt, be improved if all cars were unloaded promptly upon arrival here and allowed to be returned empty to the mines.

This is the case not only with coal but lumber and other commodities, and if proper orders were given railroads to permit their hauling direct to consignees these hundreds of cars would be more promptly released and the car shortage abated.

The coal brokers can assist in the campaign which aims at relieving the situation.

THE REACTIONARY

By James Branch Cabell

PAN is eternal and ubiquitous, whatever we might prefer to have him. So perhaps the creative writer will continue indefinitely to abuse and wreck that inadequate human body which is his sole medium of expression, in an endeavor to compel the thing to serve his desire. It may be, of course, that he also is sometimes led by instinctive wisdom and achieves economy with no more forethought than bees devote to the blending of honey; even when the case stands thus, the fact is in no way altered that actually the creative writer, alone of mankind, does in a logical fashion attempt the unhuman scheme of economy. Whether consciously or no, he labors to perpetuate something of himself in the one sphere of which he is certain, and strives in the only way unbarred to create against the last reach of futurity that which was not anywhere before he made it. He breaks his implements with ruthless usage; he ruins all that time will lend.

Yet a little while, as he assuredly reflects, and there will be no call for moral indignation, since it will be his book alone that will endure. And considering that wondrous volume, the archbishops and aldermen and pedagogues and leading philanthropists of oncoming years will concede that it was the reputed wastrel who played the usurer with his loaned body, and thriftily extorted interest, while those contemporaries who listened to the siren voice of common sense were passing in limousines toward oblivion. So it is that the verbal artist and the "practical" person must always pity each other: and when it comes to deciding which is in reality the wastrel, there seems a great deal to be said on both sides.

Perhaps that is a moral of no large ethical value. But I am afraid there is nothing of the sort in the whole sorry business. Meanwhile you must remember that this cult of art is very ancient, and began in days when goddesses were honored by human sacrifices. I think it is Thomas a' Kempis who reports that an old custom is not lightly broken.

YET, if an old custom be not lightly broken in this cult of art, it is equally a truism that therein all customs inevitably alter, and variability, here as elsewhere, attests the presence of vitality. So it happens that, at the moment I speak, "the reign of the Puritan in literature" is the target of considerable not over-civil comment; and everywhere les jeunes are vociferously demanding their right to a candid and fearless exposition of life as it actually is. Alike in smashing and in splintered prose (which latter form they playfully list as vers libre), and via a pullulation of queer looking little magazines, these earnest if rather quaint young people are expounding their "personal reactions." For to obtrude some reference to "the reaction" seems now as much the badge of this movement as was in 1830 enjambement of a French romanticist or in 1590 a far fetched metaphor of an English Euphuist. "Ah, yes, but just what, precisely, is my reaction to this?" is considered nowadays, I am informed, the correct attitude toward art and life alike, among all really earnest thinkers. And the badge is happily chosen: for, of course, this is but the latest form of that ageless reaction which is bred in every generation by unavoidable perception that its parents have muddled matters beyond human patience. Thus the necessary incentive remains inveterate, leaving merely the question what is to be done about it all, for each generation to answer with pleasing variousness.

So, it is well enough that "earnestness" should have its little hour along with the ukulele, very much as a "red blooded reversion to primal instincts" shared its fleet vogue with that other parlor game called pingpong, and in the remote era of progressive euchre parties pretty much everything was "subtle" and "perverse" and "fiery colored." And really, that a demand for liberty to talk on any and all subjects should prove always a pleonasm for limitating the discussion to sexual matters, is proper enough, too, if only because it is the natural business of young people to outdo their elders, as touches both interest and performance, in such affairs.

In every seriously taken pursuit, of course, the influence of the Puritan augments daily; and the enaction of laws prohibiting anything from which light minded persons might conceivably derive enjoyment remains our real national pastime. But it seems actually a general aesthetic movement, this ousting of the Puritan from control of our reading matter: and since to the clear seeing Puritan this reading matter does not appear a potential source of pleasure to anybody, the movement has little opposition. If only the experiment had not been tried, over and over again, one might look forward to the outcome with an optimism less lukewarm. But the progress of romance I take to be a purely natural force: and in nature, as has been strikingly observed any number of times, there are no straight lines. Art thus does not always go forward, but moves in recurrent cycles, as inevitably as the planets and tides and seasons, and all else which is natural. For "the continual slight novelty" recommended by Aristotle or some other old fashioned person, is the demand of universal nature, and in consequence of art: so that, as you will remember, St. Paul very feelingly comments upon this craving as characteristic of the most artistic people that ever lived, in his address to the Athenians.

Thus it comes about, humiliating as may seem the concession, that what is happening today in America is really not in essentials different from what happened in England as far back as 1660. Then, too, "the reign of the Puritan in literature" was triumphantly done away with, once for all. And it is to this quaint analogue that I must for a moment divert, as illustrating very exactly what I have in mind.

IN England 1660 marked a rather wide adoption, toward life in general, of that attitude which, as distinguished from the chivalrous view, is describable as gallantry. I have read that the secret of gallantry is to accept the pleasures of life leisurely, and its inconveniences with a shrug; as well as that, among other requisites, the gallant person will always consider the world with a smile of toleration, and his own doings with a smile of honest amusement, and heaven with a smile which is not distrustful—being thoroughly persuaded that God is kindlier than the genteel would regard as rational.

In fine, the gallant person is a well balanced skeptic, who comprehends that he knows very little, and probably amounts to somewhat less, but has the grace to keep his temper. And, precisely as in the case of chivalry, this, too, is a creed which still retains adherents; so that even here in Fairhaven my friends Robert Townsend and Rudolph Musgrave, to me at least, exemplify the gallant and chivalrous types, as lingering survivals left at hopeless odds with an era unpropitious to either.

If one is indeed known by the company he keeps out of, gallantry entered England very ill recommended. Those dissolute and picturesque cavaliers of the restoration were really no fit companions for any self-respecting attitude toward life. They came swaggering into England, swearing a many mouth filling oaths, and chivied Mrs. Grundy, who was then no less much-thought-of for being not yet christened, up and down and out of the island as a dowdy harridan. She has regained her own, Dei gratia, since then; but, being feminine, she has never forgiven those who once decreed her out of fashion: and the school books she licenses will smugly inform you, any day, that this was the most "immoral" period in English history.

The description, like most of Mrs. Grundy's verdicts, is sufficiently sonorous to insure its repetition without the attachment of much particular meaning. Indeed, for all that the famed difficulties of getting a camel into a needle's eye are insignificant compared with the task of getting an era into a sentence, almost any book treating of the past is by ordinary a museum of unnatural history, wherein one views the bones of extinct epochs carefully wired into artificial coherency and ticketed with an authoritative looking placard. Of all these labels none is better known that the adjective "immoral" attached to the period of the English restoration. That, though, is because its "immorality" was itself a moral which men prefer not to face. One is told that this period was indecent, and the information has a substratum of veracity. Yet 1660 is only the corollary of 1649; and England being once wedded to Puritanism, the union, after enduring ten years, was pretty sure to produce a Duchess of Cleveland at the head of the state, and a William Wycherley at the head of its literature. It was the human "reaction" to a decade of supernal thinking.

JUST A BIT OF RIBBON

By --- Sterling Heilig

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, May 9, 1918.—"Our boys are too big for petty jealousy. There is no petty jealousy in France, but sacrifice beyond human conception." So spoke one of our high military authorities in my hearing, and he would willingly back up his sentiment with his name if only it and himself were concerned. Their first big worry has touched the buddies over here. Not shells or gas. Not "taking it and waiting." Not even "working instead of fighting" and impatience to get front.

It's about a bit of ribbon. It's about a badge or medal. It's about the French "Croix de Guerre" which so many Americans have been winning for bravery, dash, endurance, and "personal thinking" (117 of a single regiment got it in a single action, and new lists have been released almost daily). It's about the British D. S. O. or other decorations bestowed on Americans at the British front, and the Legion of Honor, the Médaille Militaire, and the V. C.—for anything is possible in this glorious mixup. And, to prove that anything is possible, listen to this; it is the latest—they may be forbidden to wear them!

Forbidden to wear the bit of foreign ribbon! (Which commemorates their life risk).

Even this is not what the men are worrying about. What, then, you ask? What else, in the name of John Paul Jones (who was decorated and heeled by Catherine of Russia and given a state funeral in France), what else can bother them about it? Because you know that almost any unity of "ours" (the way we are amalgamating) may get its chance to render some slight service under foreign eyes. So the boys might easily worry at the prospect of an order coming: "Don't you wear that!"

Yet it's just the opposite. What's the cause of worry? Why, the thought of seeming jealous if they do not have the luck to win it! Why, the worry lest their comrades who have won a foreign decoration may possibly receive an order not to wear it—so as not to hurt their feelings! Why, it's dread that if the thing is talked about (and it is talked about) it may start up an idea that there is some psychological basis possibly, after all, for "heart breaking legislation" such as they hear tell about, in rumors from Washington!

"Suffering cats, do they think we could be jealous?"

"Will they pass a law to stop us crying?"

"Say, see here, there, this is serious. Quit joshing!"

(So do they express themselves in simple language, but they feel deep.)

FOR, you see, this legislation rumor is authentic. Clippings of paragraphs from home service papers pass from hand to hand, among men and officers. At this moment I am in a "zone" where mighty things are doing. The notable authority already quoted (like many of those near him) will probably never have opportunity to win a foreign or home medal for dash and daring, yet they all express themselves like buddies on the subject. There can be no doubt. Members of congress who are prominent in controlling military legislation seem to disapprove of foreign bits of ribbon on the ground of possible heartburning in the breasts of American soldiers who do not win them.

So they propose an act of congress enforcing equality. Should the bill pass the bits of French, British, Italian, or Belgian ribbon may not be worn by American soldiers who win them. Our chiefs over here would have to see to it that they keep them in their pockets—and not go around showing them!

"But I think," exclaimed the personage already mentioned, "that to deny men distinctions of this kind—men who risk their lives—to tell them that they must not wear their bit of ribbon, shows a lack of appreciation of the situation which is simply appalling!"

He went on: "Here are men who give their blood and bone (for decorated heroes are often wounded heroes), and some one comes along and says: 'Don't you wear that thing! Don't you wear it!' It's not right. They want to wear whatever they win! Whether it is the French, or British, or American, it's theirs. It's dear to them because of the deed that got it and because of what it represents to the dear ones at home! Have you any doubt about the sentiment which moves our lads? You can't weigh this coming to France in the scales. It don't work out in dollars. It belongs to the imponderables. When one is promoted corporal it's the stripe that counts, not the $2 per month—it's for his mother. Another says, 'I'm going over there and I'll win something—it's for his sweetheart. If they win a French badge they want it. If they win a British medal they want it. Such chances don't come every day. How do they know they'll get another?"

Then he made his famous saying about the troubled consciences in Washington—that soldiers who do not win such foreign decorations might be tempted to jealousy. (Of course, all honor is paid to the honest dilemma; what is claimed and believed is simply that there is a misunderstanding.)

"There is no petty jealousy in France, but sacrifice beyond human conception; and it is an outrage to imagine our men could be jealous of comrades who have risked their blood under the eyes of the French or British!"

Imagine the feelings of our glorious aviators who are living—and of the families of the dead. In many cases, the bit of French ribbon is the one treasure, the one pious souvenir of the heroic one. It is equally true of families of ambulance drivers who distinguished themselves, and fell, before America had entered the war.

Are they to be taboo?

Many American aviators who fought in French squadrillas have since become officers in our own aviation; but the bit of ribbon which they won in their early days is very dear to them. Must they hide it?

Like a thing to be ashamed of?

OUR DEAD—By Robert Nichols

The following poem is from "Ardours and Endurances," a collection of poems and fantasies by Robert Nichols, who is fighting in France. To the publishers, Frederick A. Stokes & Co., we are indebted for permission to reprint the poem.

They have not gone from us. O, no! they are
The inmost essence of each thing that is Perfect for us: they flame in every star;
The trees are emerald with their presences.
They are not gone from us; they do not roam
The flaw and turmoil of the lower deep,
But have made the whole wide world their home,
And in its loveliness themselves they steep.

They fail not ever; theirs the diurn
Splendor of sunny hill and forest grave;
In every rainbow's glittering drop they burn;
They dazzle in the massed clouds' architrave;
They chant on every wind, and they return
In the long roll of any deep blue wave.

The Wild Rose.

SUMMER comes with the wild rose and elder blossoms, with the blossoms of the viburnum and the odor of clover, with fox grass to wave in a field of shimmering haze, with the blossoms of the wild grape, with robust benevolences, heat and bold charm.

The period when beauty approached with intimation and suggestion, with flashes of revelation, withholding the major part, touching the attention and not seizing it, comes the nearest to a flush of self-revealing when the wild rose, red in its bud, opens its petals and gives thicket and wayside a new aspect of exquisite delicacy.

Summer is a full blown fact, with ample bounty and lush beauties. The wild rose is a symbol of changeful spring when ephemerality rules, and what is tangible for the sense is less than what is intangible except to the fancy.

The wild rose is at the casements of the imagination. It blooms for that part of man which lives with the imponderables. Its bud is as red as his hopes; its petals fall with his desires. It graces the shadows of life and is fragrant in them. It is too delicate for a full reality. It is a part of the land where man goes incorporeally through the secret windows of the west.

"OUR GENERAL JACK"

By William Atherton Du Puy

WHEN Thomas Carlyle asserted that "no man is a hero to his own valet," the days of the great war had not arrived and he was without information as to Sergt. Frank Lanckton, for ten years orderly to Gen. John J. Pershing, in command of American troops in France. Sergt. Lanckton has just been telling me of his general. I have it from him that the commander of American troops at the front is the greatest military leader in the world. He is destined to assume a precedence that is beyond compare, to win for himself a position as directing genius of the armies of humanity. His personal orderly—the man who sends his shirts to wash and retrieves his collar button when it rolls under the bunk—tells me so, and this aid knows him as does no other human being.

And why should Lanckton not have the measure of the capacities of Gen. Pershing? Was he not with the general in the Philippines through those grueling years in Mindanao during which they battled for the subjugation of the Moro Mohammedans? Did he not travel to Japan and Borneo and all around the world with his chief? Did he not live with him at the Presidio by the Golden Gate, in the bosom of his family, and was he not the military preceptor of Warren Pershing, only surviving child of the general, when that youngster, at the age of 3, drilled his first awkward squad with his sisters in the guise of rookies? Finally, was he not with the general in that fierce dash into Mexico, and has he not been at his elbow through a year of intense activity in France? Who would know the capacities of the general if not Sergt. Lanckton, and why should we not give heed to a plain fighting man's measure of his chief?

Lanckton himself, at the age of 32, might be selected as an artist's model of the typical American soldier. Slim, lithe, blond, blue eyed, hard as nails, a son of the middle west, with a bit of a dash of wildness, he is already a veteran of sixteen years of service. He lacked eleven days of being 16 when he enlisted, away back in 1901, and he has been in the service ever since.

Life with the headquarters battalion in France, Lanckton tells me, is one of great activity. It was not so at the beginning. Gen. Pershing admitted himself an amateur at this sort of warfare, a rookie learning a new game, and at first moved slowly. It was necessary that he should be shown many things, should be brought to understand a new and complicated situation. It was here that fast action for the orderly first made its appearance.

Gen. Pershing must go everywhere, must see everything. He had his train and his fleet of automobiles. When the train moved it took the automobiles with it. When it could go no further, they used the machines. Sergt. Caesar Sauntini is the personal chauffeur for Gen. Pershing. He was a French speed king before the war, but he enlisted in the American army in New York, and has been constantly with Gen. Pershing since the expedition went over. He is a consummate master driver, and knows the roads of France as Lanckton does the streets of Marion, Ind., where he was born.

Gen. Pershing, Lanckton, Sauntini—this is the trio in the car of the commander of all the Americans as it threads the roads of France on its innumerable missions. Usually there are other cars following, but this one leads. There are no speed laws to be observed, and Sauntini chooses his own pace. He drives just as he used to in the old racing days. But he is infinitely careful, and there is safety at high speed.

When the three are in the car the general says: "You may proceed, sergeant."

"Where to, sir?" asks the orderly.

"To Paris."

Again saluting punctiliously, the orderly issues the command to the driver, who gets under way. The general may ask, "How long are we fixed for, sergeant?" and Lanckton will reply:

"Two weeks, sir." There is always linen and such in the car for that period.

Once they have started Gen. Pershing may settle comfortably down in his seat and go to sleep. He has himself thoroughly trained to relaxation. He holds to the theory of conserving energy by giving himself over to mental and physical inaction. It is a trick of the hard riding cavalry from which he comes. At the end of the journey Lanckton arouses him.

THE orderly hustles the bags into the general's quarters. One phase of the unpacking is always the same. The first articles to come out of the bags is a picture of Mrs. Pershing and the four children as they appeared before that tragic event at the Presidio three years ago, when she and the little girls lost their lives in a fire in their quarters. Lanckton sees to it that the picture is always on the desk or bureau of the general. He often sits before it contemplatively, and the orderly believes that at such times the general forgets that his wife and little girls are gone.

If they remain at headquarters the day is even more strenuous. Both men arise at 5 o'clock, and begin with a half hour of setting up exercises, which they take together. Then the general, despite his fifty-seven years, goes out for a run of fifteen minutes. When he returns they throw the medicine ball for half an hour. It is fast work and there is punch and force behind it. The orderly admits that the general usually wears him down. To be sure, the general is a larger men, but 32 should have its advantages over 57. There are more setting up exercises at bedtime, which is likely to be about 11 o'clock. It is so that the physical condition of Gen. Pershing comes to be magnificent.

Since he has been with the general, Lanckton tells me, he has seen him ill but once. That was when they went into Mexico. The change of water gave both men dysentery. The general remained in his tent one day. The doctor was sworn to secrecy and the troop was not allowed to know that its commander was indisposed. The next morning the general asked his orderly how he felt, and the answer was "Hungry." The cook was called in and a light breakfast was ordered and eaten, despite the protests of the doctor. Recovery was immediate.

When Gen. Pershing went to Europe he did not speak French. Marshal Joffre and many other of the French officers were equally without English. The Frenchmen were always in the majority, and that was quite naturally the prevailing language. An interpreter was always present for the benefit of the American.

In six months the interpreter had disappeared. Gen. Pershing had mastered French. The difficulty in acquiring a language when one is past middle life is generally recognized, and at best six months is a short time in which to do so. But today the American commander has no need whatever of an interpreter. He receives Marshal Joffre, Foch, Gen. Petain, separately or collectively; they converse without restraint, and Gen. Pershing holds up his end. In fact, he now writes letters in French with great freedom. His familiarity with the language is quite complete and still improving. He refuses to allow any new word to escape him. Whenever he hears one he stops the conversation, gets the word down, and at his leisure becomes its master. So he is prepared for easier communication with his associates.

Sergt. Lanckton has seen much of the heads of the French army. He describes Gen. Pershing and "Papa" Joffre as the twin idols of the French people. Joffre is a man of emotional and affectionate disposition, inclined to be demonstrative. He is temperamentally the reverse of Pershing, who is reserved and silent. Yet a great friendship has grown up between the two, and they are often together in Paris, to the delight of the populace.

PERSING is a silent man. He has had a full life, with many experiences. Almost never does he speak of the past. At long intervals he unbends and talks. At such times one is surprised at his fluency. When his face is lighted up at a good story, when he smiles in more than a formal way, the glow of it, says his orderly, is worth giving up a week's leave to see.

Sergt. Mickie Welch, for instance, gave the general a good laugh. This hero proved an ineffective orderly to Secretary Baker when the latter was in Paris, but a great delight in both him and the general. Mickie had just received the Cross de Guerre for a very gallant act. He had been in a listening post with two men when a German raiding party had crept upon them and, armed with grenades, had placed them at a great disadvantage. The German sergeant had commanded Mickie to come out, which the latter was proceeding to do, when the German threw a grenade at him. The grenade, thanks to Irish luck, failed to explode. Mickie put three revolver bullets through the German before he could fall to the ground, took his two comrades prisoners, and marched them back to the American trenches. A good deal had been made of the exploit.

So Mickie was orderly to Secretary Baker, but not over fond of the job, and anxious to get back to the front. In Paris the correspondents of all the newspapers in the world were waiting to see the American secretary. They had been kept waiting for a long time, but finally other matters were out of the way. Mickie was told to inform the newspaper men that they might be given an interview. A half hour passed and the writing men did not come up. Sergt. Lanckton went to investigate. The scribes were still cooling their heels and Mickie was eating pastry at a near by lunch stand.

"I want to go back to the front," said Mickie. "I've talked to them boes too much already."

He had to be told that it was the secretary of war and not himself who was to be interviewed.

So Mickie was allowed to return to his command and Gen. Pershing relinquished Lanckton, his own personal orderly, to the secretary. So that young man has added to his list of interesting places visited at interesting times, all those touched by Secretary Baker while abroad. Incidentally the tribute of this noncom to the secretary is unique in its viewpoint.

"Mr. Baker," says the sergeant, "is a man who can distinguish between a soldier and a servant."

Gen. Pershing, his orderly states, is always military. About his quarters there is never a relaxation of military precision. No one ever enters the room of the general and finds his orderly, this man who has been at his elbow for ten years, in any other attitude than that of a soldier. If he is not otherwise engaged he is standing rigidly at attention.

But it is not so when they are entirely alone. The general is a great hand to remember the dates of happenings of the past. It is quite common in their goings about that he should be reminded of some event in which both have participated, to give the date of it. It is formally called to the attention of the orderly. When they are alone that night the general will be apt to refer to the matter again and between them they will talk freely of former days.

ONE day they saw two soldiers at work on a wood pile, evidently in punishment for some infraction of discipline. The general sent his orderly to ask of the offense. It seemed they had been over anxious to get into the fighting. Some of the men of the command had been allowed to go forward. So these two took French leave, went forward until they "found a war," and mixed in. For discipline's sake it was five days with the ax, but the general chuckled and spun yarns of over zealous troopers in other campaigns.

Then they may stray off into reminiscences of the Philippine campaigns and recite such events as those surrounding the pacification of the tribes around Lake Lanao, in the interior, said to be the highest lake in the world. It was in a boat that Gen. Pershing went all around this lake, unarmed, and talked to these warlike Dattos. He cultivated their friendship, offered them seeds, transportation, the blessings of peace. The silent man somehow succeded in getting his message to these men of a strange race, language, and religion. They came into peaceful relations with their new rulers. There has been peace in Mindanao since the time of Pershing.

But Sergt. Lanckton told me a secret. He said that all the time Gen. Pershing was going unarmed among these spear throwing, knife bearing savages, he, the orderly, without the knowledge of his chief, had a shoulder holster under his blouse and a good army Colt where he could have got it quickly.

And in the evening they often talk of Warren, the small son of the general, named for Senator Warren of Wyoming, his grandfather, or of Johnson, the old Negro cook who saved the boy at the time of the fire, and who is cooking for soldiers at El Paso and waiting for the time when the general can come back that he may serve him. Warren is 9 years old and lives with two sisters of the general in Lincoln, Neb. The boy, the sisters, Johnson, and Lanckton, these are the general's nearest approach to a domestic establishment.

Marshal Joffre had heard all about the boy and last Christmas he sent him a present. It was a full dress uniform of a marshal of France and there went with it a specially designed sword paid for by soldiers of France who learned of the plan of Papa Joffre. Quite naturally the youngster is inordinately proud of this suit, but he has another, a uniform of an officer of the United States, in which he more frequently bedecks himself.

Gen. Pershing, says his orderly, is a studious man. After he left West Point and fought Indians a while in the west he was stationed at the University of Nebraska as military instructor. There he studied law and was admitted to practice. He then intended to leave the army, for he felt sure that war was a thing of the past, that he would never see any fighting.

As he mastered law he grapples with other problems. He can wipe his mind's slate clean, his orderly says, of all but the matter in hand and concentrate on that. He masters every problem that is brought to him. He surrounds himself with intelligent aides. He assigns one of these to absorb a subject, then squeezes him dry. Pershing is a cavalryman and this is a war of artillery. His study of artillery during the last year has been intense. He has worked largely through his aides. It is the same with every phase of this new warfare. He has concentrated on one detail of it after another. He has been given unusual facilities. His orderly says that it is thus he will come to know the whole broad game.

The British Tommies, the Poilus, and the Americans, says Sergt. Lanckton, gather about the tables of the cafés of Paris or the villages back of their lines, congregate at ease in their rest camps, wait on the fire steps of their trenches for something to happen, and talk of their commanders. They tell of the virtues of Haig and Bing, of Foch and Neville, and the Americans listen patiently and smile indulgently. Then a pause comes in the eulogies and a boy from the states speaks up.

"O," he says, "but you don't know our Gen. Jack."

News and Comment of MOTORDOM

Willys to Drop All Models for 'Little Overland'

THE Willys-Overland company, the second largest automobile manufacturing concern in the world, is preparing to abandon completely its policy of producing a wide variety of motor car models, and to build hereafter nothing but the "little Overland" type shown at the automobile shows last January.

This probably is the most significant item of automobile trade news that has appeared since the beginning of the war. It means, of course, that John N. Willys is going to emulate Henry Ford's practice of turning out a single low priced car, and to give the Detroit manufacturer his first taste of real competition.

The "little Overland," which will not be placed on the market before September or October, is a light machine, designed to be sold at a figure in the neighborhood of $500.

Intimations that there would be a "sharp reduction in the number of Overland models have been made in financial circles, but the reports did not indicate that the plan is to abandon everything for the light car. Mr. Willys, who was in Chicago last week, made this known in a statement to THE TRIBUNE. He indicated that the change is primarily a war measure.

"Before production was curtailed," he said, "we were turning out at the rate of 150,000 cars a year. It is possible this may be cut to 50,000 cars, or a third of former production.

"What we shall do is to reduce the number of our models from five, which we now manufacture, to one. This will be the low priced car that we expected to sell at around $500.

"But if we manufacture only 50,000 we shall increase the price forty or fifty dollars a car, and by this increase offset in large measure the reduction in output. Forty dollars' increase on a car is small to the buyer, but on 50,000 cars it means $2,000,000 to the manufacturer, and we have our war business in addition. We shall be enabled to keep our sales organization together and sell more cars than we can make."

Incidentally, this is the first direct word from the Overland company as to what the price of the light car will be. The $500 figure has been assumed generally, but the builders have invariably declined to give any information on the matter.

The "little Overland," which has a three speed transmission, electric starting and lighting, and a radically new type of spring suspension, has been undergoing a long series of road tests in various parts of the country, preparatory to its being produced in quantities. Many automobile men think its appearance will be marked by the coming out of a new Ford model. The Ford chassis has been unchanged since 1911.

"Gipsy Tours" Coming.

National "Gypsy tours," conducted by the Federation of American Motorcyclists, will be held in various cities and towns throughout the country next Saturday and Sunday. Any rider may enter the tours and all who finish will be awarded bronze medals, while riders who are also F. A. M. members will get a similar medal with a bar across the top, signifying their membership. The three motorcycle clubs having the largest entry lists in the tours will receive silver loving cups as special trophies. Last year more than 22,000 riders took part in a similar event.

On the Job.

Washington, D. C., June 10.—Among the new taxes suggested to the house ways and means committee today were 25 cents a gallon on gasoline and a tax of from $10 to $50 on chauffeurs.

Washington, D. C., June 12.—Before the ways and means committee today Alfred Reeves, representing the automobile manufacturers, protested against classifying automobiles for taxation purposes with cosmetics, perfumes, and golf balls.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

THE newest Apperson is a four passenger "semi-roadster" of novel design, the most striking feature being a single wide door on either side, large enough to permit access to either front or rear seats. The front seats are individual, adjustable backward and forward, and the body as a whole is low and rakish in appearance. The Apperson builders claim to have originated the "chummy" type of four passenger roadster, and hope that their newest innovation will be as popular.

"Pierce-Arrow truck No. 1," a veteran of seven years' standing, cut two hours from its original record the other day, when it repeated the New York to Boston run which it made first in 1911. A full five ton load was carried, and the trip was made in eighteen hours and seven minutes—faster time than is achieved by many trucks of considerably more recent vintage. The gasoline average was 5.4 miles to the gallon.

William H. Taylor, for many years manager of the Kansas Moline Plow company, has succeeded Joseph H. McDuffee as president of the Overland Motor company, the Chicago Overland distributors. He assumed active management last week.

Remarkable reports are beginning to percolate of the performances of a concoction known as Eccolene, which is designed to be mixed with gasoline in the proportion of two ounces to five gallons of the fuel for the increasing of mileage and the reduction of carbon formation. No less a personage than Ralph De Palma, it develops, has been testing the fluid for several months and has reported greatly increased fuel efficiency and an almost complete absence of carbon in the cylinders of his much used Hudson. More recently he and several other drivers have been using Eccolene in their racing cars with surprising results.

Trucks do most anything nowadays. Lacking switching engines to haul trucks from their Rochester, N. Y., factory to the main line of the New York Central, the builders of the Selden the other day fitted a three and a half ton model with flanged wheels and sent it out to take the place of the missing locomotives. The truck also hauled two loaded freight cars seventy-five miles, from Rochester to Syracuse, over the tracks of an electric line to deliver a Selden exhibit at the Syracuse automobile show.

Questions and Answers

If on account of overheating a piston becomes "seized" or stuck, what is the best thing to do? AL S.,
Chicago Heights, Ill.

Let it stand for fifteen or twenty minutes, or until it becomes well cooled off. Then remove the spark plugs and relief cocks and pour kerosene onto the cylinder head through the relief cock openings. Let the kerosene soak through in order to loosen up the rings. Follow up this treatment by pouring lubricating oil onto the head of the cylinder, after which take a crowbar and work the fly wheel gently back and forth until the piston is freed. After the piston is loosened up take an oil gun and draw the oil off the cylinder head and drain out all oil and kerosene that has dripped through the crankcase. Put in plenty of fresh oil, regrind the valves, and try the motor out. If it knocks the chances are that you have burned out a bearing on the crankshaft. If this is the case take the car to a shop and have new bearings put in.

Kindly advise me whether the roads are good between Chicago and Sparta, Wis. Also state best route and the approximate distance.
HUNTER, Chicago.

The roads are fair for the greater portion of the distance, but you will find them tough along the final stage of your journey. The best route runs through Elgin, McHenry, Lake Geneva, Delavan, Janesville, Evansville, Oregon, Madison, Sauk City, Baraboo, Reedsburg, Elroy, Kendall, and Ridgeville. The stretch from Baraboo to Sparta, which measures about eighty miles, is the worst of the entire route. The total distance is 300 miles.

Will you kindly give me the best and shortest route by automobile from Beloit to Kansas City, Mo.?
T. N. COOK, Beloit, Wis.

Drive through Roscoe and Rockford to Rochelle and pick up the Lincoln highway, following this through Dixon to Sterling. Then take the Chicago, Kansas City, and Gulf highway through Davenport, Iowa City, Ottumwa, Centerville, Laredo, Chillicothe, and Excelsior Springs to Kansas City.

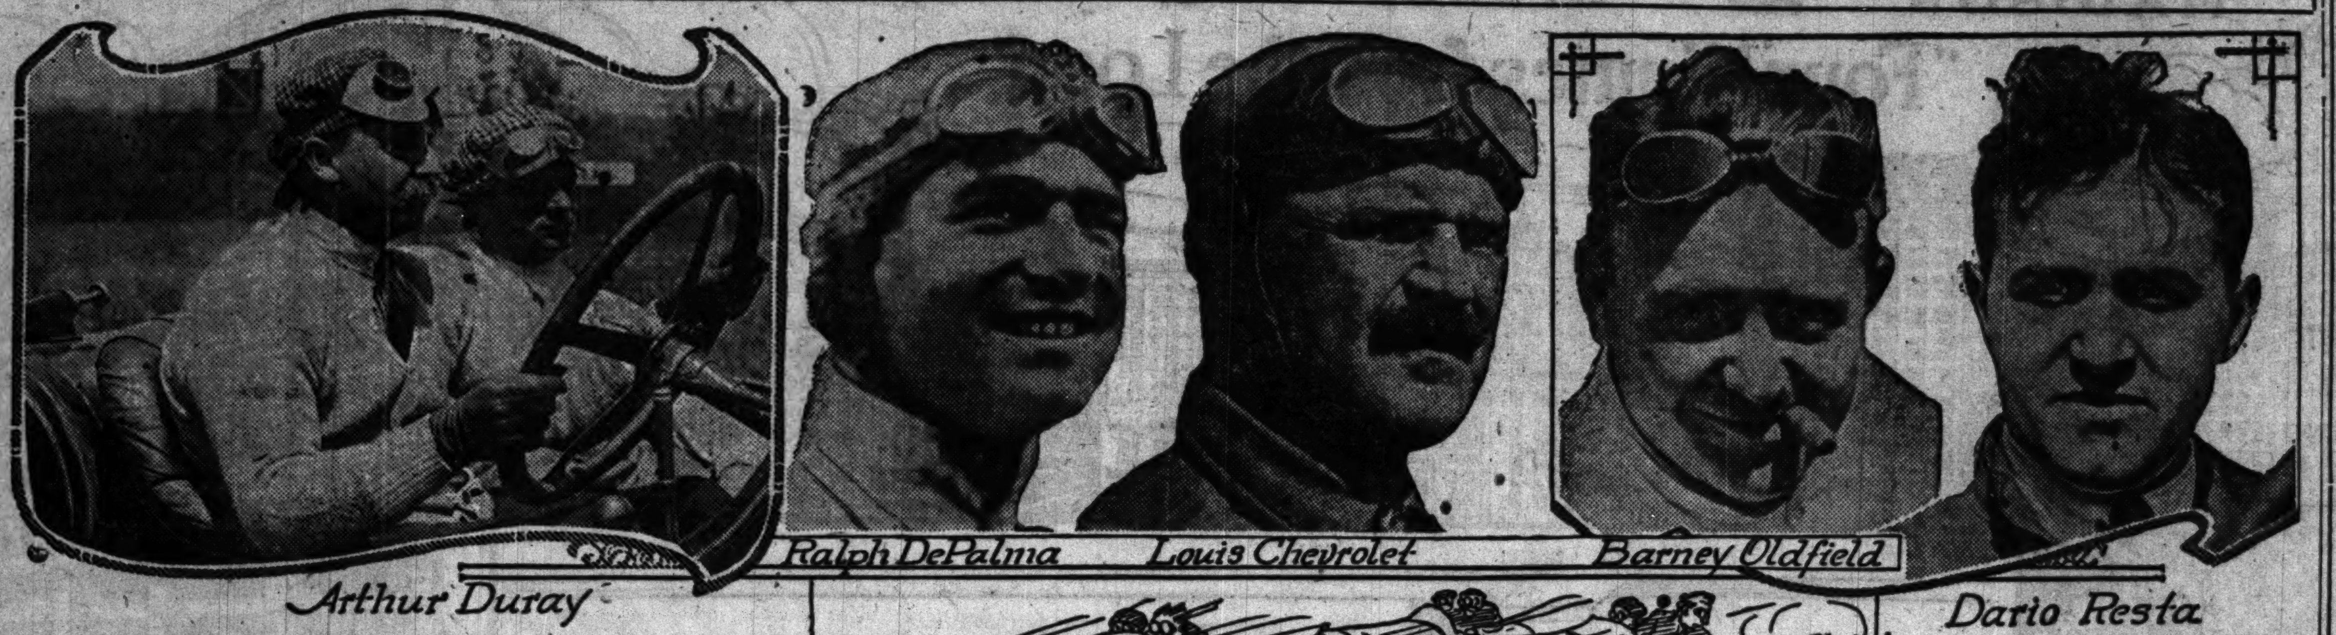
News and Comment of MOTORDOM Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER

FAVORITES IN FIELD FOR CHICAGO'S FIRST MOTOR HANDICAP



Arthur Duray Ralph DePalma Louis Chevrolet Barney Oldfield Dario Resta

Speed Kings of Two Continents Race This Week

FOR a sport that was officially supposed to be dead no longer than three months ago, American automobile racing seems to have been pulmotored into life pretty successfully. What the rescue crew has done to the patient is to be observed at the Chicago speedway next Saturday, and if the plans, as they shaped themselves last week, are carried out, the program should be one with which the most exacting follower of the game can find no fault.

In one or two respects, indeed, the fourth annual derby, which will be the big event of the day, has elements of interest such as have not been offered by any previous contest at the Chicago track.

For one thing, the field of starters, in addition to including virtually every American notable who is now racing at all, will introduce Chicago fans to one of the most romantic figures in the motor world—Arthur Duray, the Belgian driver, whose last appearance in America was four years ago, before the war and before the local speedway was built.

Duray's claims to motoring fame are unique. He is a veteran, having won the first automobile race ever run in Europe—the Criterium de Belgique, in 1899—and also holds the distinction of having made the greatest speed ever attained by man and motor. The latter feat was performed at Ostend in 1913, when Duray covered a kilometer in a Fiat at the terrific rate of 147 miles an hour.

From 1899 to 1914 Duray raced in nearly every country in Europe, and hardly a year passed that did not yield him one, two, or three notable victories. He made his American début in the 1905 Vanderbilt cup race on Long Island, and has driven in several other American races, but most of his laurels were won in Europe.

Duray has been in the war from the start. His regiment was the first to be mobilized in Paris in August, 1914 (Duray is of Belgian parentage, but has lived mostly in France), and he is one of the fourteen survivors out of a company of 300 in the first battle of the Marne.

After eighteen months in the trenches he became President Poincaré's personal driver on the latter's tours to the front. Since then he has been classed as a "reforme," because of a wounded knee, and assigned to the French aviation motor section as chief of the experimental department. In the derby he will drive a Frontenac, owned by Harry S. Harkness of New York.

Another item of interest for the fans will be Dario Resta's first appearance in Chicago since he won the American championship in 1916. Resta now has a new car with an engine which he built himself and on which he is said to have spent $15,000.

No one knows what the car will do, for it caught fire instead of finishing in the Harkness cup race at Sheepshead Bay two weeks ago, and that was its first performance. Experts who have seen it suspect it of being the fastest car in America—and Resta's record in this country is that of never having been defeated in a major race in which he has finished.

Resta's most dangerous rival should be either Ralph De Palma, whose twelve cylinder Packard won the Harkness trophy, or Louis Chevrolet, who outdrove De Palma last year with his Frontenac, and was generally accorded the honor of being the 1917 champion.

De Palma's car is sometimes referred to as having a Liberty engine. This, of course, is ridiculous, since the Liberty airplane engine has a piston displacement of something over 1,500 cubic inches, whereas that of a racing engine, under existing rules, must be under 301 cubic inches.

The fact is that De Palma's engine is of the aviation type, and is one of those built by the Packard company for the experiments which preceded and led up to the designing of the Liberty engine. With the possible exception of Resta's "unknown," it is undoubtedly the fastest automobile power plant in this country. The races that De Palma lost last year were not lost through lack of speed, but because the driver was delayed by tire changes.

Chevrolet's light aluminum built Frontenac made its driver a champion last year through its ability to maintain a long steady grind without burning up tires. It didn't run true to form at Sheepshead Bay this year, four blowouts putting Louis out of the running and robbing him of what looked like a good chance for victory. But that may be set down as one of those "flukes" that just happen now and then.

Another likely contender for first honors will be the veteran Barney Oldfield, whose experience as a racing driver began but two years later than that of Duray, when Oldfield started campaigning Henry Ford's famous "999." Barney, whose habits in recent years have been to start, but seldom finish in the more important races, now seems to be out for blood. He ran third to Sheepshead Bay the other day and with his fast car stripped of its grotesque "submarine" body is really getting down to business.

The derby will be a 100 mile contest, and, for the first time, will be a handicap affair, the handicapping to be done by officials of the American Automobile association under the direction of Chairman Richard Kennerdell of the A. A. A. contest board. De Palma will start at scratch, because of his victory at Sheepshead Bay, and the others will be given leads of varying lengths up to five or six minutes.

C. G. Sinsabaugh, a former automobile editor of THE TRIBUNE, will referee the event and Fred Wagner, as usual, will be starter.

Intercity Freight by Motor Starts Here This Month

CHICAGO is to have an intercity motor truck freight system, operating on timetable schedules similar to those of the railways and delivering merchandise direct from the consignor to the address of consignment. The launching of the venture, patterned after similar enterprises which have long been operating successfully in the east, is in line with the recommendations of the recently formed highways transport committee of the Illinois Council of Defense, which has undertaken the task of relieving the railways by systematizing and extending the use of motor trucks.

G. W. Stratton, president of the Stratton-Gramm-Bernstein Truck company, heads the new concern, which has virtually completed its plans of operation. Fleets of Gramm-Bernstein trucks will be used in daily runs to points within a 100 mile radius of Chicago.

"We shall have our trains under way within two weeks," said Mr. Stratton yesterday. "It is our intention to operate a limited freight service between Chicago, Milwaukee, Joliet, Elgin, and Aurora, on a guaranteed delivery basis and at express speed.

"This will eliminate two handlings of the freight at each end of the route, which are necessary by rail. Moreover, it will do away with the usual delays in freight yards and warehouses and speed things up generally. I doubt if shippers will ever again be content with the old time, slow moving rail freight system.

"Our capacity will be unlimited, for we shall add new trucks as fast as the demands of shippers grow."

One or two similar truck lines have been projected in Chicago this year, but none have succeeded in getting into operation.

U. S. Authorizes First Display of Liberty Engine

PERMISSION was granted the Society of Automotive Engineers in Washington last week to stage the first semi-public display of the Liberty airplane engine at its war convention, which will be held in Dayton, O., tomorrow and Tuesday.

Hitherto the famous motor has been zealously kept from public view. An effort was made to have one brought to Chicago for exhibition at the S. A. E. meeting held here at the time of the automobile show in January, but the request was denied by the war department. Recently, however, details of the engine's construction have been given out in Washington, and the need of secrecy, apparently, is no longer felt.

Altogether eight different types of airplane engines will be shown at the meeting. Four types of airplanes also will be on view—an old Wright machine, a D. H. 4, a Spad, and a German Albatross. A demonstration of the use of incendiary bullets will be given, the operator shooting them from a Springfield rifle into a gas tank.

Globe Tire Sales Jump 500% in Kentucky

Kentucky roads are fairly typical. You pass through one county on hard, glistening macadam and into another of soft dirt road. Kentucky motorists need a tire fit both for boulevard and rough going. Kentucky boosted its purchases of Globe Tires 500 per cent in a year.

Drivers in the Chicago territory will welcome this longest-mileage, hand-made, wrapped-tread tire. It will cost you less to run on the 6,000-mile-guaranteed Globe tire; and its smooth, resilient action will save your car wonderfully against depreciation.

If you're a dealer, you know that merchants have started a brisk demand for the permanently profitable Globe Tire selling connections, now available in the Middle West.

WHEAT!

This is the most favorable time to buy wheat land in the Northwest, and the Davidson District is the most favorable place. The high price for wheat, oats, and barley is having its effect on land values, and when we market our 1918 crop, which promises to be a bumper, land prices are going to jump.

Our proposition is ideal for actual settlers, but nonresidents can own a farm under our plan and we will look after your farming interests. People of moderate means can get a start toward independence. You know that the farmer is getting high prices for everything, and you can increase your income materially by farming yourself.

Don't kick about high prices for food. Get busy and produce some yourself. A card will bring, by mail, full information with a book of fine views of farming in Western Canada.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

NATURE'S GIFT

LAND IS NATURE'S GIFT to man and each family should have its parcel of soil to cultivate, live on, and care for. They then have something to take pride in, develop and improve for their own benefit and convenience, and not for some landlord to later reap the benefit from. By all means own a piece of land somewhere.

WITH MOST MEN, it is their own fault that they have no land to use, and they ought to realize that fault and seek at once to correct it.

NOW, THIS PROBLEM of acquiring land is, in reality, no problem at all when solved for you by the plan of "The Swigart Land Company." In fact, it becomes very easy for you, and before long, with a little effort, you are the owner of a farm of 10, 20, 40, 60, 80, or more acres in Kalkaska or Antrim Counties, Michigan, in the heart of Michigan's Great Fruit and Grain District.

THIS RICH SOIL, which will some day sell as high as land in Illinois or Iowa, can now be purchased for $15 to $30 per acre, on easy monthly payments. No other organization offers such splendid inducements—in the way of loaning money to make improvements; free insurance clause while you are paying for the land and many other interesting features. These features and the abundant crops of wheat, clover, alfalfa, rye, corn, beans, potatoes, fruit, live stock, poultry, that we raise are explained in our big free 62 page booklet. Write for it today and take your first step toward getting your own farm home. Ask about excursions.

Your Inner Force

Natural Function. Everything to Form and Color. The Vital Organs must be strong to give Pep and Power.

H. S. Loomis is telling others how, at the age of 42 [without apparatus or drugs], he worked out a Simple System of discipline to strengthen the Vital Organs, that put him in shape to pass the rigid examination to enter the Reserve Officers' Training course of the U. S. Army at Fort Niagara, N. Y., and to stand the strenuous training practiced there, leaving him hard, vigorous, and strong in vital force. "The Loomis System" [copyright, 1918 by H. S. Loomis] was not designed to build prominent muscular development, but to strengthen the internal organs by natural function, thereby creating a sound working force for Vital Expression and physical fitness. The system will be mailed, in plain sealed wrapper, to those who inclose a dollar bill to H. S. Loomis, 503 Mutual Life Bldg., Buffalo, N. Y.

KIN OF PARNELL HAD NO CAUSE TO BE IN WORKHOUSE

Sister Was Well Provided For by Her Daughter in Wales.

BY CHARLES N. WHEELER.

DUBLIN, May 24.—The burial today at Ballintone, near Rathdrum, County Wicklow, of Mrs. Emily Ricketts, sister of Charles Stewart Parnell, adds another pathetic chapter to the tragedies that have pursued the famous family.

Mrs. Ricketts, who was in her eightieth year, died in the South Dublin workhouse, a refuge for the poor and infirm. It is now assumed she was suffering from mental aberration in her advanced age, as she was admitted to the poorhouse on representing herself to be destitute. It is known that she was comfortably provided for by her daughter in Wales and that there was no necessity for her seeking charity. She entered the workhouse as "Miss Roberts." This was ten days ago. She was found dead last Sunday. Her identity was not established at once. Papers found in her possession led to the discovery that she was none other than the famous writer and sister of the world renowned home ruler.

Became Mentally Deranged.

It is now supposed that the aged woman had left her daughter's home in Wales intending to go to the old homestead near the Vale of Avoca, for which she was known throughout her life to possess a strong affection. After reaching Dublin the assumption is that she became mentally deranged and, laboring under the hallucination that she was destitute, applied for admittance to the poorhouse.

Mrs. Ricketts, whose first husband was a Mr. Dickinson, gained a wide reputation as a writer in her earlier years, her best known book being "A Patriot's Mistake." In this she recounted intimate details of the Parnell family history, and particularly events in the life of her brother, the great Irish leader, theretofore not generally known. In the preface to this work she wrote:

"A well known Irish journalist has said that ours was the most tragic family he had ever heard of. This, I think, is true."

Charles Stewart Parnell had six sisters and five brothers. Emily (Mrs. Ricketts) was the second girl to be born into the interesting and subsequently tragic family group. The other five sisters were Delia, Sophy, Fanny, Anna, and Theodosia, the last named being the only survivor. She married Capt. Paget of the royal navy and resides in England.

Delia, the eldest of the girls, married a rich American named Thompson. She had but one child, a boy named Henry, who succumbed to typhoid fever. The loss of the child so weighed upon her that she faded away and died of a broken heart in 1881.

Tragic Family Record.

Fanny was the poetess of the family and gloried in the reputation she achieved as an Irish rebel. She founded the American branch of the Ladies' Land league. Ardent revolutionist that she was, she fanned the old fires of anti-British sentiment everywhere she went. She was found dead in bed at Bordentown, U. S. A., in 1882, one year after her eldest sister followed her little son to the grave.

Sophy married Alfred McDermott, who became the family solicitor, and bore him many children. It was her devotion to these children that resulted in her death. Scarlet fever invaded the nursery. She insisted on nursing the children, contracted the disease, and died in a few days.

Anna followed in the footsteps of her sister, Fanny, and raised the "Irish rebel" banner. She was indentified with the Ladies' Land league here in Ireland and was without fear of any kind. Once she created quite a sensation in Dublin by holding up the vice regal carriage in Dame street and compelling Lord Spencer to promise better treatment for the Irish political prisoners who were incarcerated in the land war. She met a tragic death, too. She was drowned at an English watering place some seven years ago.

Only Three Alive.

Charles Stewart Parnell's sudden death, following the divorce case, was one of the tragic events that marked Ireland's long and persistent struggle for home rule.

Only three members of the famous family are living. They are John Parnell, 75 years old, who resides here in Dublin and now is quite ill; Henry Tudor Parnell, who resides abroad, and Mrs. Paget.

Ballintone, where the body of Mrs. Ricketts (whose second husband is said to be living and in the British service in the far east) was laid to rest today, is the burial place of many of the Parnells. It has become a shrine to which pilgrimages are made by tourists on their way to the Vale of Avoca and the Meeting of the Waters.

Perpetuate Foley's Memory.

Today—May 24—is the centenary of John Henry Foley, Ireland's greatest sculptor and the creator of the effigies of Hardinge, O'Connell, Grattan, Gough, Burke, Goldsmith, Lord Carlisle, Sir Benjamin Guinness, and other enduring monuments to their fame and his genius. Foley was a Protestant and an Englishman, though born in Dublin 100 years ago today and possessing a fine Irish name and, it should be recorded, venerated by Irish Catholics of Ireland second to none of the imposing souls this head smashing land has produced.

As with other notables who later in life diproved the idea that the human race is a joke, Foley was considered the dunce of the family as a boy. His father had notions of his own as to how children should be reared. He hadn't much confidence in the public school system and established a school in his own house, where he himself was schoolmaster to his six children. John Henry's father despaired of the boy ever amounting to a hill of beans until at the age eof 13 he was packed off to an art school. Almost imemdiately the youth, finding his element, surprised everybody, his doubting father most, with the unfolding genius they had not suspected. With remarkable zeal the boy took on several classes and soon finished at the head of four schools.

His First Production.

At the age of 16 young Foley struck out for wider fields and attracted the attention of art circles in London with a model of the Death of Abel, which brought him a ten year scholarship in the Royal academy. Six years after reaching London, then only 22 years old, the youth was placed in the front rank of living sculptors with his classic works, Ino and the Infant Bacchus. He was an industrious worker and many fine pieces had enriched the world of sculpture when at the age of 29 he was commissioned by parliament to execute the statues sof Hampden and Selden for St. Stephen's hall. Not only fame but fortune smiled generously upon him now and shortly afterward he began the creation of what to this day remains the most perfect figure of a horse and rider in the entire British empire—the equestrian statue of Viscount Hardinge at Calcutta. So greatly was this admired by English masters that several efforts were made, but in vain, to have a replica set up in London.

Foley finally was commissioned by the British government to execute the equestrian statue of Lord Gough which now stands in Dublin's splendid Phœnix park. Foley used the same model in which the Lord Hardinge charger had been cast, and Dublin now boasts the finest equestrian statue in the three kingdoms. Gough was the hero of twenty-eight battles. Foley suggested that the guns captured by Gough and the Irish regiments in the Sikh campaign be used in casting the group, and Queen Victoria quickly ordered it done.

BROKEN HOMES

Divorces Are Granted on Pleas Ranging from Sun Worshiping to Desertion.

An instructor in the Mazdaznan cult is Hortense Dorrington. Her husband, C. Edwin Dorrington, 1242 Rosedale avenue, told Judge Brothers that his wife left him in order to become one of the "sun worshipers" and told him he ought to be one, too. Instead he got a divorce.

To spite another man William Reynolds married Elizabeth, who lives at 17 South Lincoln street. Then after he got her he told her he did not want her and left. All this was told to Judge Brothers by Elizabeth and a divorce was granted.

"Many wives support their husbands—you aren't the only one." So Louis Block told his wife, Lena, and she supported him for a while. Then she got tired of it and got a divorce.

The second quarterly meeting of the year of the big brothers of the Holy Name society will be held at 3 p. m. today at Holy Angels' school hall, Vincennes avenue and Oakwood boulevard. Delegates from the 150 parish big brother committees will attend to hear the report of Bishop A. J. The Holy Name society, through which the big brothers work, now numbers more than 50,000 men.

Flyers at Rantoul Awarded Commissions

Rantoul, Ill., June 15.—[Special.]—Several Illinois pilots were commissioned second lieutenants at the Chanute aviation field here today. Those from Chicago and vicinity decorated with the silver wings are Forrest Redmond, 3229 Berkeley avenue, Berwyn; Rodger Franklin Peterson, Wilmette; and Ward Merrick, Oak Park. Included in the list are Harold Robert McNabb of Decatur; Leo McGehee, Harrisburg, Ill.; H. A. Feldman, Milwaukee, and Leo Chase of Janesville, Wis.

TOO MANY HARVEST HANDS.

Arkansas City, Kas., June 15.—Cowley and Sumner counties, two of the biggest wheat counties of Kansas, are overrun with harvest hands. Today there are at least 200 men here who are unable to find work in the harvest fields and organizations are seeking to locate them where harvest employment is certain.

30 U. S. OFFICERS RETURN FOR DUTY ON WAR BOARD

Best Informed in Army on the Situation in France.

BY CAROLYN WILSON.

PARIS, May 16.—Tomorrow thirty of the best informed American officers will leave France for the United States to form the war plans board, working in conjunction with the general staff. This move was heralded surely as long as three months ago, when Acting Chief of Staff Peyton C. March said that an interchange of staff officers between Washington and the expeditionary forces was absolutely necessary to a complete understanding of the situation.

Why the three months have passed without any one being sent is a mystery, but tomorrow they start out, three men from every branch of the service. The men who have been over here the longest and who have the best actual knowledge of the supply and produtcion needs are going with the idea of speeding up production in America.

They are supposed to remain there three months, when they will return here with the latest facts on the American situation and thirty more officers from over here will be chosen to take new European developments home.

No News From Home.

This has an up to date sound. Although a year has passed, I continually hear men from every branch of the service complaining that they have no idea of what is going on in America, that no detailed reports are ever submitted over here, and cables for information go months unanswered. The same theory of switching men about is being applied over here with the staff. Many of them have received field commands—Gen. Harbord, for instance, leaving his position as Gen. Pershing's chief of staff, and being replaced, people believe only temporarily, by Gen. McAndrew.

The strictest forms of physical examinations are now the rule, and are made every month. For many of the older men couldn't stand the strain, and it wasn't fair to the troops that ill men should be in command. As a consequence several brigadier generals have been relieved, and most of them are already on their way home.

Battle Planes Arrive.

This idea of sending actually experienced officers home on the general staff should have particularly good results in regard to aviation, for up to now all of the work that has been done in America has been done on a purely theoretical basis, without knowledge of the experience gained by fighting pilots. The three men who are representing this branch are respectively heads of training, mechanics, and supplies, with aids who have flown at the front both with our own army and formerly with the Lafayette escadrille under the French.

France depends on us for planes, largely due to the fact that we have talked so much about them and they only reproduced in their newspapers our own enthusiastic figures as uttered in congress. That one widely mentioned battle plane which was reported in the Borglum exposé as being on its way over never arrived. Just disappeared into thin air somewhere. But the second installment—a larger figure—happily has come and is being tested.

Likewise navy planes are arriving in quite fair numbers in England and are proving all that was claimed for them.

You can't imagine what the coast towns of France that we are using for debarkment of troops are like. A year ago, semi-sleepy places used for the unloading of oil steamers coming from America, some few vessels from elsewhere, the traffic light enough to be regulated within a few days by the railroads. But now the thousands, yes, hundreds of thousands of soldiers, the continual lightering, for the channels are rarely deep enough to let in the big German seized vessels, the miles of docks, the newly built railroad lines with their countless spur lines, the warehouses, the barracks for the troops, the administration houses for the navy, for transportation, the wireless installations. It is continual movement, continual construction. And all this takes men, men, men, aside from all the fighters who come into the port.
